PRELUDE TO CEREMONY

Supporters of San Anselmo's controversial "mundialization" commitment joined hands outside city hall yesterday to hoist a flag pole that will fly the United Nations banner, symbol of the world citizenship concept. The pole, acquired through donations when the city found it was improper under U.N. regulations to fly the U.N. and American flag on the same pole, officially will be dedicated at 3:15 p.m. tomorrow, despite objections from opponents of mundialization. Raising the pole, alongside the American and California flags, are (from left) Rick Klein, Paul Hiding and Nils Eriksson.

JEWISH COMMITTEE

Rock Opera Under Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The popular rock-opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" is potentially harmful to improved Jewish-Christian relations, the American Jewish Committee said today.

The committee released a line-by-line study of the current New York production of the pop musical version of the Passion of Christ. The study was done by a Presbyterian and concluded:

"But in arbitrarily laying nearly all the blame (for Christ's death) on a group which the viewer knows to be Jewish whether the text says so or not, 'Jesus Christ Superstar' is, if nothing else, insufficiently thoughtful, potentially mischievous and possibly a backward step on the road toward improved Christian-Jewish relations."

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, national director of interreligious affairs for the AJC, was even stronger in his comments about the study.

He said the rock-opera, "despite all its advance acclaim, is potentially harmful as an instrument of anti-Jewish prejudice.

The study was done for the AJC by Gerald S. Strober, a former Presbyterian pastor who is currently a consultant to the committee on interreligious education.

"'Jesus Christ Superstar' unambiguously lays the primary responsibility for Jesus' suffering and crucifixion to the Jewish priesthood," Strober said.

"The priests are portrayed as hideously inhuman and satantically evil: Contemptuous, callous and bloodthirsty," the study said, adding: "There is no warrant in the New Testament either for the attribution of primary guilt or for the caricatured characterization."

Strober points out that for almost all of the lines attributed to the Jewish priesthood and which paint the priesthood in such negative terms, there is no Biblical support.

He cites, as one example, the lines in the scene entitled "Judas' Death" in which it is suggested the priests savagely beat Jesus before his death.

He cited several Gospel verses to show that Jesus apparently was struck but that the blow was "insulting rather than disasbling, and the Gospel accounts do not agree on who struck it."

"There is no shred of evidence that Jesus was ever subjected to a purposeful, savage beating by any of the priests or at their order," Strober said.

In sharp contrast to the view of the Jewish priesthood, Strober said, is the portrayal of Pontius Pilate.

"If the play weights and scales against the priesthood over and above what the New Testament accounts warrant, it lightens them beyond all the evidence for the other chief agent in the trial of Jesus: The Roman governor, Pontius Pilate," he said.

Strober said the play casts Pilate as "a rather weak but well-meaning man who sympathizes with Jesus from the moment he meeets him and is kept from helping him only by the demands of the mob."

His study said that most of the play's characterization of Pilate is unscriptural and nonhistorical, "designed to minimize his role in Jesus' scourging, trial and death and thereby maximize that of Jesus' Jewish antagonists ..."

"Roman and other sources," he said, "leave no doubt that Pilate was an exceptionally harsh governor even by the far from lenient stanards of Roman occupation government."

Strober did say, however, that the play "avoids the worst pitfalls into which earlier works of the type have fallen."

"It does not repeat the myth of the Jews as Christ killers codemned by God for all time; it does not claim that all Jews of Jesus' time knew him and forsook him."

But Strober did conclude the play "is less than fair in depicting the role of Jewish individuals and institutions in the passion of Jesus, as we know it from the New Testament."

And he said the play "bypasses the transcendental meaning of the Passion.

"Christian belief holds that all humans —then, now and always, —contribute to Jesus' suffering by their sins," he said.

Buses May Roll Dec. 6

The Golden Gate Bridge District has set Dec. 6 as the tentative date for launching its fleet of 154 luxury buses which will carry Marin and Sonoma commuters to and from San Francisco, Dale W. Luehring, district general manager, said today.

The system will replace Greyhound's failing 103-bus commute service, which lost approximately 600,000 passengers in the past year, Luehring said. The bus firm has asked the state Public Utilities Commission for permission to discontinue the unprofitable service on or shortly after Dec. 1 and current plans call for Greyhound to operate through midnight Dec. 5.

Luehring repeated long-standing promises today that the bridge district would provide more comfortable, dependable buses, as well as a greater frequency of service and more bus routes into the neighborhoods.

(Routes will be set Wednesday at a meeting of the bridge board's transportation committee, with frequency of service and fares to be considered by the district's transportation and finance committees at a later date.)

The district's initial goal is to serve 6,000 commuters each day, compared to the approximately 4,000 now served by Greyhound.

The district has purchased 132 new luxury buses from General Motors and will lease 20 of Greyhound's newer vehicles, with an eye to replacing those with "even better buses, possibly with gasoline turbine engines, in a year or so," the general manager said. Two buses now serving the Sausalito ferry will also be a part of the fleet.

All the newly purchased vehicles will feature fewer and more comfortable seats and

British Troops Kill Sisters In Belfast

Pair Uses Disguise In Attack

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British soldiers today shot and killed two sisters they said wore men's clothes and attacked troops with gunfire and nail bombs from a car, an army spokesman said. A third woman in the car was wounded.

Police identified the dead sisters as Mrs. Mary Ellen Meehan, 30, and Miss Dorothy Maguinre, 19. An army spokesman said both wore men's British-type blazers.

"The troops were involved in a small search of two houses when a car came around the corner," the army spokesman said. "Two shots from the car were directed at the soldiers."

He said the soldiers fired back, hitting the car, which continued up the street, turned right on Ross Street and crashed. A hostile crowd prevented the soldiers from recovering the bodies. An ambulance team recovered them.

The spokesmen said a third woman in the car was wounded. Another woman, not linked to the incident by the spokesman, was found in the same area of Belfast with a bullet wound in her leg.

Shortly after the incident in the Cape Street area of Belfast soldiers reported a taxicab drove away from the district. Troops unsuccessfully tried to stop it and soldiers reported seeing what they thought was a body wrapped in blankets in the back seat, the spokesman said.

Gerry Fitt, Republican Labor Party member of both the Northern Ireland and British Parliaments, immediately demanded an investigation into the deaths of the sisters.

Seamus Leary, 18, said he saw the incident from a doorway in which he was standing when the car drove past.

"All of a sudden a soldier yelled out 'stop,'" Leary said. "The car didn't and the troops

Governors Report On Soviet Tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Six governors told President Nixon today that he could expect a "most enthusiastic" welcome in Moscow although Soviet leaders were aware it would not provide an instant solution to all U.S.-Soviet differences.

The governors spent 70 minutes with the President reporting on their two-week swing through the Soviet Union and Romania. The said they had long conversations with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Later, Nixon took a drive through the Maryland countryside to the presidential retreat at Camp David. Rainy weather kept him from going by helicopter as he usually does.

White House press spokes man Gerry Warren said Nixon wanted to hear both about the talks and about the governors impressions of the Soviet attitude toward his own Moscow visit next May.

"The governors said all the Soviet officials they met were most enthusiastic about the prospect," Warren said. "At the same time they said the people they talked with were aware of the many differences which divide the two nations and that the visit xhould not be expected to dissolve these differences."

The governors, representing the National Governors Conference, were Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Gale Bumpers of Arkansas, William G. Milliken of Michigan, Stanley K. Hathway of Wyoming and David Hall of Oklahoma.

They told Nixon that they had been impressed with the hospitality and courtesy they had received from the Soviet and Romanian leaders and people.

Warren said that a return visit by their Soviet counterparts is in the planning stage and the President said he hoped the Soviet officials would receive the same courtesy and hospitality which the Americans had encountered.

The White House would not disclose whether the governors carried any messages back and forth between Nixon and Kosygin or Ceausescu.

Two other governors, Luis Ferre of Puerto Rico and John A. Love of Colorado, also made the tour but remained to travel in western Europe when their colleagues returned today.

Besides Moscow the governors visited Leningrad, Kiev and Pblisi in the Soviet Union on the tour arranged by the State Department.

HESTER SLOWS WAR

U.S. Base Is Damaged By Typhoon

SAIGON (UPI)—A typhoon with winds up to 138 miles an hour slashed into South Vietnam's northern sector today, severely damaging a U.S. military base, smashing hangars and helicopters and leveling large sections of Vietnamese towns and cities.

Tens of thousands of Vietnamese fled inland from the South China sea coast area as Typhoon Hester roared in from the Philippines where it had killed at least six persons.

The winds and massive rainfall destroyed up to 90 per cent of Quang Ngai, a provincial capital of 12,000 population 318 miles from Saigon, government military spokesmen said. Threee nearby district capitals were virtually levelled by Hester, they said, and heavy damage was also reported in the coastal city of Da Nang to the south.

U.S. spokesmen said the typhoon winds collapsed aircraft hangars and destroyed a hospital and "other buildings" at Chu Lai, home of the Americal Division, 335 miles northeast of Saigon. At least 10 Huey helicopters, worth about $250,000 each, were destroyed or damaged.

Casualty reports were scanty because of disrupted communications but spokesmen listed at least one Vietnamese killed and said "several" Americans were injured.

The storm halted military activity in the northern sector and spokesmen reported little fighting elsewhere in Indochina.

A lull settled over the Cambodian border area, 80 miles north of Saigon, that had seen heavy fighting in the past month, following the withdrawal Friday of American units from the scene.

South Vietnamese soldiers killed 17 Communists in the Mekong Delta of South Vietnam and six more in a nearby district of neighboring Cambodia in two clashes Friday, the high command said.

U.S. B52 bombers flew three missions in northern South Vietnam, dumping nearly 300 tons of bombs on suspected Communist positions just before the typhoon struck inland, spokesmen said.

The typhoon winds frustrated attempts by U.S. and South Vietnamese helicopters to rescue stranded storm victims and made flying impossible.

The storm was remarkably similar to another that hit the same area almost exactly a year ago. That typhoon-- nicknamed Louise—killed at least 150 persons and left an estimated 200,000 homeless.

U.S. spokesmen said late Saturday that the 91st Evacuation Hospital at the Chu Lai base, scheduled to be closed next week as part of President Nixon's withdrawal plan, was destroyed. Patients were temporarily transferred to other buildings and will be evacuated to other hospitals when aircraft can carry them out, spokesman said.

Owner Slighted By Low Property Rating

Marin's Assessment Appeals Board members were startled yesterday by a West Marin property owner who complained that County Assessor Bert W. Broemmel had assessed his property too low.

Vincent J. Sacconanno, an architect who lives in an 11-room home at Drake's Beach Estates, told the board that he felt slighted and hurt that the assessor put only a market value of $35,000 on his home and half-acre parcel.

He pleaded with the appeals board to raise the value to $92,000.

Chairman Julius H. Selinger and board members James F. McConnell and Edward P. Murphy were flabbergasted, but ruled Saccananno did not have documentary evidence to back up his request for a raise in assessments.

Sacconanno said he bought the property in 1969 for $78,000. He claimed he also had $118,000 in loans against the property but failed to back up his claims with documents.

Saccananno acknowledged the property was being eyed by the federal government for inclusion in Point Reyes National Seashore. He said he had "no ulterior motive," but merely wanted "a fair evaluation of my assets."

He explained that banks would question the worth of his property when he negotiated for a loan, if they found the assessor had valued his property at only $35,000.

Sacconanno's home is located at Furlong and Dover roads. He argued that a doctor sold a neighboring home for $60,000 cash plus five acres of property at Cypress Point on Tomales Bay. He contended his property is worth at least that much.

Nol Plans No Dictatorship

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian Prime Minister Lon Nol told the cabinet that revocation of National Assembly legislative powers "does not mean a government of dictatorship," a spokesman said today.

Information Minister Long Boret said at a news conference he was "clarifying possible misunderstanding" following a speech by Lon Nol Wednesday.

"Lon Nol told a cabinet meeting Friday that the absence of a National Assembly does not mean a government of dictatorship," said Long Boret. The Assembly was stripped of its power Oct. 16.

SWEEPING REFORMS

Prison Report Not 'Watered'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The director of an 834-page study urging the abandonment of San Quentin and Folsom Prisons and sweeping reforms in the penal system has squelched charges the report was "watered down."

Robert E. Keldgord, the Oakland criminologist who was responsible for the $266,000 report, Friday denied suggestions that the State Board of Corrections, which has had the study since June, altered it.

"It is indeed the document that I and my colleagues submitted to the board on June 28," he said in a telephone interview.

Raymond K. Procunier, director of the Department of Corrections, also said, "It's the same, word for word, that he turned in."

The federally financed study, ordered by the Reagan Administration and released Thursday, basically suggested the bulk of the correctional system should be moved to the community level with regulation and financial assistance from the state.

The report made more than 200 recommendations including shorter prison terms, better living conditions for convicts, better trained correctional personnel, hiring more minority group members to work in prisons, higher wages for prisoners, elimination of two-man cells to decrease homosexuality and conjugal visiting at all prisons.

San Quentin and Folsom Prisons, both built in the 19th century, were too old, too large, ugly and depressing, the study said.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, said Friday he was concerned whether it was the same report submitted to the board in June. The Coordinating Council of Prisoner Organizations also suggested it was "watered down."

But Keldgord said that in light of the length of the report the board did not take an excessively long time to review it.

He said the recent San Quentin violence also diverted the board's attention for some time from the document.

The criminologist asserted that some news reports contending the study had been diluted were based on comparisons with the first and second drafts rather than the third and final copy.

"It would be extremely inaccurate," he declared, "to say that any pressure was applied" and resulted in softening the study's recommendations.

Corrections Chief Procunier said that he did not have "any big fights" with its suggestions, contending that they did not represent "anything big or new."

But he said he doubted whether San Quentin or Folsom would be closed because there was not enough money to construct other institutions.

However, he declared, "If anybody gave me $150 million I'd be glad to close them."

U.S. Claims Victory In Seat For Taiwan

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— The United States claimed success today in its campaign to save a U.N. General Assembly seat for the Nationalist Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Word weary delegates paused for weekend celebrations of the United Nations' 26th birthday before plunging into the decisive phase of the debate with voting expected late Monday or Tuesday.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers and U.S. Ambassador George Bush told President Nixon in Washington they were confident Nationalist China's seat would be saved.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler told newsmen that Rogers made the comment during an hour-long meeting that the secretary of state and Bush had with Nixon.

Bush's spokesman at the U.N. would not discuss numbers. He said there was a majority for the U.S. proposal which agrees to seat Communist China in the assembly and the Security Council while retaining an assembly seat for the Chinese Nationalists. He conceded that the margin could be slender.

Many diplomats believed the outcome would be decided by as slim an edge as three votes. Most held that the result hinged on the votes of 10 or 12 undecided countries.

"We feel we have a definite majority," U.S. delegation spokesman Nicholas L. King said.

The U.S. delegation held a meeting of its cosponsors Friday and informed sources said the optimism expressed publicly also was expressed behind closed doors.

Bush, apparently reflecting the optimism, left town for the weekend. He planned to attend a U.N. Day celebration in Washington today and go on to Houston, Tex., for a U.N. day dinner on Sunday.

There still were five speakers to be heard in the China debate when it resumes Monday afternoon. There was no China session scheduled for Monday morning. But delegations exercising their right to explain their vote beforehand were expected to delay the balloting until Tuesday.

Scheduled to be heard in the debate proper on Monday were representatives of Tunisia, Honduras, Albania, China and the United States. Mongolia, Japan, El Salvador, Malaysia, Singapore and Austria signified desire to explain their vote and more delegations were expected to join the list.

At the close of Friday's proceedings, 46 countires had pronounced themselves in favor of Peking and 24 in favor of Taiwan. The vote was expected to be decided by the 60 countries that did not speak in the China debate.

Log Regulations 'To Stay Same'

REDDING (UPI) — The chairman of the State Board of Forestry says his agency will continue to set logging regulations despite an adverse court ruling nullifying the board's authority.

"We'll continue as usual until we hear otherwise," Chairman W. B. Carter said Thursday.

The 1st District Court of Appeal has ruled the board and its district forest practices committees unconstitutionally set rules because their members are dominated by the logging industry. The decision is on appeal to the State Supreme Court.

The Appellate Court issued the ruling last month in a suit brought by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors, who appealed a Superior Court ruling which stated they had no authority to regulate Bayside Timber Co.

SUPREME COURT

Bayh Team Will Check Nominees

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Birch D. Bayh, D-Ind., who led the successful battles against two of President Nixon's previous Supreme Court nominees, has ordered his personal staff to make a complete investigation of the President's newest choices.

"These two men are clearly better qualified than many of those whose names have been so crudely floated by the administration," Bayh said Friday. "But we must still be sure that these nominees are given the most careful and thoughtful consideration by the U.S. Senate."

Bayh said the Senate's earlier rejection of Judges Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell indicated the Senate will not accept a nominee without legal distinction, personal integrity and a commitment to human rights.

Bayh also criticized the selection process the administration went through before settling on Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist. He said the process had been turned into a "public spectacle, a political football game in which the American public is an unwilling participant and all of those whose names are paraded in the press are the unfortunate losers ... that is the game the president has played these last two weeks."

The White House issued what it called an emphatic denial of Bayh's suggestion that the names of six nominees submitted to the American Bar Association had been deliberately leaked. Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the speculation was not encouraged by the government.

After Nixon revealed his choices Attorney General John N. Mitchell told the ABA he would not consult the group again if the President has another occasion to pick someone for the high court. The ABA consultation was a courtesy which Mitchell himself initiated.

Lawrence E. Walsh, chairman of the ABA committee which considered the nominations, replied to Mitchell Friday, urging him not to stop consulting the lawyers' group. He said the names became public not because of what any member of his committee did but because "newsmen ... were informed ... by personalities we questioned."

Walsh said it was probably better anyway to have the names leak out so that any adverse information can surface before the formal nomination is made.

The two nominations formally arrived at the Senate Friday afternoon and the Senate Judiciary Committee wil begin its confirmation hearings sometime duricg the first week of November.

Arms Race Attacked By A U.S. Cardinal

VATICAN CITY (UPI)— Cardinal John J. Krol of Philadelphia, in a strong denunciation of the arms race, accused world leaders of not using "one half" of their intelligence, ability or will to bring about peace.

Other speakers at the 3rd International Synod of Bishops Friday attacked male superiority, worldly honors for cardinals and bishops and churchmen who think of sin only in terms of sex.

The 60-year-old Krol, a conservative in the U.S. Roman Catholic Church hierarchy, assailed the arms stockpile in the United States but stopped short of formal condemnation of any nation or individual. He addressed both the Synod and a news conference.

Referring to the stockpiling of arms, especially in the United States, the Cleveland-born Cardinal said, "the point I was trying to make was that this has gone to such an absurd limit now—extreme—that we are far beyond what even our own bill of rights and constitution call for. It calls for providing for common defense, insuring justice and domestic tranquility."

Krol also cited, but did not condemn, U.S. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird during an attack on the arms race.

"I'm very aware of naval matters because of what Laird said not too long ago," said Krol, referring to an Oct. 13 statement by Laird on the Soviet Union's growing fleet of missile-firing submarines. "It is the same madness, the same futility. At what point are you going to stop?"

Asked if he would recommend the United States not match Soviet military might, Krol replied:

"My personal conviction is...that we need to take some risks for peace. We are not using one half of our intelligence, ingenuity or will to obtain peace."

Earlier he told the 210-member Synod that the stockpiling of arms—"growing year by year"—is a leading cause of world injustice.

Archbishop Leo C. Byrne of St. Paul and Minneapolis, another member of the "official" U.S. Synod delegation, criticized governments, organizations and individuals who exploit women or even pay them a lower wage than men doing the same job.

Cardinal Francois Marty of Paris called on fellow prelates to renounce their worldly honors and titles and suggested they receive no more pay than the lowliest parish priest.

Cardinal Paul Gregoire of Montreal deplored the fact that many churchmen, when they think of sin, think of sex instead of "serious faults" such as crimes against justice.

A Brazilian prelate, Bishop Valfredo Tepe, urged Pope Paul VI to name younger bishops.

"All the decisions in the church, said the 53-year-old Tepe, "are being taken by mature men, 50 years old at least".

The list on the coffee-carrying vessel was corrected to the point where it could make anchorage in the bay.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Talks Continue

HONG KONG (UPI) — Talks between Dr. Henry Kissinger and Chinese officials entered their fourth day today and diplomatic sources said negotiations apparently have been going "very smoothly" on preparations for a visit by President Nixon.

There has been no official word on the progress of talks between Kissinger and his assistants and Chinese officials.

However, the diplomatic sources who have contacts in Peking, said they believed sufficient progress may have been made to enabel the two sides to set a definite date for the presidential visit.

Goes Bankrupt

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Horn & Hardart Baking Co., the firm that pioneered the Automat — the quick meal without a waitress — has gone bankrupt.

The 83-year-old firm filed a petition in U.S. District Court Friday asking to be placed in reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act.

'Wildcat' Strike

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia zoo remained closed to the public today because of what officials aptly termed a "wildcat" strike. The strike came Friday when 120 animal and grounds keepers and commissary workers walked off their jobs following an announcement that 30 employes would be laid off in an economy move.

Mobilizes Troops

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India began mobilizing 600,000 army reservists today, while both India and Pakistan continued to charge each other with border violations.

Orders were issued late last night for the territorial army, composed mainly of retired army personnel under 60 years of age, to report for duty immediately. Smaller numbers of air force and navy reservists also were ordered back into uniform.

Mobilization orders for the reservists came after a lengthy cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon, but sources in the defense ministry said that the actual decision was made by India's service chiefs, who acted under an earlier authorization.

Ends Vacation

Premier George Papadopoulos saw him off at the airport with a pledge his government is "working day and night" to bring democracy to Greece.

"I leave with renewed respect for the efforts of the government of Greece in carrying out its country's role as a member of Nato," Agnew said. He added he always had been proud of his Greek roots and he was returning home "with that pride strengthened and reinforced."

Fashion Honor

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Fashion Group honored Mrs. Richard M. Nixon last night as the "best in taste and most feminine woman of the year" but the First Lady was almost speechless.

She could only manage to whisper a hoarse "thank you" when she accepted the award, a "crystal tribute" in the form of a gently arching pair of wings climbing from a solid crystal base.

Sets Radio Talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon plans to make a Veterans Day address to the nation on radio tomorrow night at 4:30 p.m. PDT, according to the White House.

The White House said the President would spend the weekend at Camp David and make the speech from that mountain retreat.

A Formal Welcome

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Tito of Yogoslavia will be accorded a formal welcoming ceremony at the White House next Thursday when he begins his visit to the United States.

After the ceremony, the White House said, Tito and President Nixon will confer privately and Tito will be the guest of honor at a state dinner that evening. The two chiefs will meet Oct. 30 for additional talks.

Petaluma Road Name Changed

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Planning Commission has approved changing the name of Weise Road to Stadler Lane in rural Petaluma.

Residents told the commission Thursday that although the street off Eastman Lane is officially recorded as Weise Road, it is commonly called Stadler Lane and is known to the post office by that name.

The commission approved the change, noting that members of the Weise family, for whom the road was named, no longer live in the area.

Marin, So. Sonoma Road Funds Set

I-J Special Report

MONTEREY — The California Highway Commission yesterday voted to budget $6.3 million for Marin County and Southern Sonoma state highway projects in fiscal 1972-73.

The sum included $2 million for start of construction on the long-awaited Novato Bypass of Highway 101, $2 million for widening Highway 101 to eight lanes between Richardson Bay Bridge and Greenbrae interchange, and $1.9 million for work on two Highway 101 interchanges in Petaluma.

Total cost of the six-lane Novato Bypass is expected to reach $14 million for the 5.4-mile project. The future freeway will swing easterly of downtown Novato from a point south of the present Highway 37-South Novato Boulevard interchange to another new interchange 1.4 miles north of Atherton Boulevard.

Right-of-way purchase and project design have been virtually complete for some time, according to Alan S. Hart, district engineer for the state Division of Highways. The budget allocation should result in advertising for construction bids early next spring, Hart reported recently.

The Richardson Bay-Greenbrae project will cost about $2 million. It will in effect be a continuation of work now in progress that includes widening the Richardson Bay span.

The East Washington Street overcrossing of Highway 101 in Petaluma will be widened from two to four lanes at a cost of $1.3 million, and a $600,000, four-lane overcrossing will be built for Caulfield Lane at Highway 101 with the newly budgeted state funds.

The highway commission approved a total of $56.4 million for projects in the nine Bay Area counties. Marin County's total of $4.410 million for the two major projects and some lesser work is the third smallest among the nine counties. San Francisco was earmarked for $2.6 million, and Napa County projects were voted $970,000.

Heroin Pusher Given Stiff Prison Sentence

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Myles Washington, 42, convicted of masterminding a $4,000-a-day heroin operation for at least one year before it was broken up in 1970, was sentenced Thursday to 15 years to life in prison.

Washington, described by police as one of the major suppliers of heroin in the Los Angeles area, drew the maximum sentence.

Two other defendants in the heroin operation also received stiff sentences. Tommy Crane, 28, was sentenced to 10 years to life, and Cornelius King, 44, to one to 10 years.

Prosecuting attorneys said the sentences were among the most stringent ever meted out here to narcotics offenders.

Weather Probe Is Destroyed

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) —The loss of an advanced weather satellite leaves the United States without nighttime cloud watching coverage for at least several more months.

The new weather eye was destroyed Thursday when its Delta Rocket rammed it back into earth's atmosphere because of a control system failure after successfully propelling it into a preliminary orbit 200 miles high.

The $10.5 million failure was the first in 22 weather satellite launchings dating back to 1960. It was the space agency's second unsuccessful launch in 12 unmanned space shots this year.

Group Opposes Measure B

The board of directors of the Marin Conservation League has adopted a resolution opposing Measure B on the Nov. 2 ballot, for a Sonoma-Marin aqueduct.

The leadership of the 2,200-member league declared that "no such plan should be acted upon until a comprehensive program relating to water supply, ffood control and sewage disposal is developed in relation to an adopted countywide plan as approved by the voters."

The league directors charged that "little consideration has been given to the ecological impact" of the proposed plan to bring Russian River water to the Marin Municipal Water District.

Miller is survived by his wife, Delores, living at the family home at 164 Railroad Avenue; a son and a daughter: James M. Miller Jr. of Petaluma and Jacqueline White of Santa Rosa; two brothers, William J. Miller of Corte Madera and Joseph K. Miller of Bolinas, and four grandchildren.

just opened up on it. I could not believe my eyes."

Leary said no shots were fired from the car.

Fitt said he knew the sisters personally and Mrs. Meehan's husband denied she was wearing men's clothing, although both women wore slacks.

"What I am told is that the army told the car to stop. When it didn't do so immediately, they just opened up on it. The people inside the car just didn't have a chance," said Fitt.

Gerrard Meehan, Mrs. Meehan's father-in-law, told newsmen "the girls had heard there was some trouble in Leeson Street, rattling (garbage) bins and that" in the Roman Catholic Falls Road area of Belfast.

"A friend drove them down and as they turned a corner an army saracen (armored car) cut across their path and a shout rang out, 'stop that car.' A volley of shots rang out and both of them had the backs of their heads blown off," said Meehan.

Crowds for a time surrounded the car and prevented the approach of soldiers who first thought they had shot one man, the spokesman said. The soldiers discovered the bodies were women when they got to the car, he added.

An 8-1-2 hour bomb scare at Belfast's biggest luxury hotel, its second in 48 hours, ended today with the pop of a champagne cork.

The management of the 12-story Europa hotel ordered champagne on the house after British army explosives experts defused a bomb containing an estimated 35 pounds of gelignite.

Majo. George Stiles, the army's senior explosives officer in Northern Ireland, termed the bomb "one of the biggest of its type we've yet met, a thoroughly sophisticated device."

An architect called in as a consultant said the charge could have collapsed the 15-month-old building had it gone off in the lobby.

cleaner facilities and will carry 45 passengers; 112 of the vehicles will have reclining seats, he said. There will be no advertising in the buses.

Promising more service into neighborhoods in Marin and Southern Sonoma counties, Luehring said, "It is our goal to try to reach 50 per cent of the commuters within a quarter mile of where they live."

The bridge district plans to operate a 24-hour maintenance facility for the buses on 10-acres of land on Jacoby Street in San Rafael, adjacent to Highway 17. A temporary maintenance shop is currently being rented by the district across the street from the permanent site.

Eighty of the new General Motors buses have arrived at the facility, Luehring said, with the remainder expected to be delivered within the next two weeks, at the rate of six or seven a day. District personnel, he said, now engaged in checking out the new vehicles to insure they are in working order and installing fare boxes and other equipment needed to ready them for service.

In addition to the San Rafael operation, the district will maintain satellite stations in Santa Rosa and Novato where the buses will be parked overnight to be ready for early morning service. The district is currently negotiating for a site at Coddington Airport in Santa Rosa and has several locations in mind in Novato, though no formal choice of a site has been made.

Luehring said today the only obstacle which could prevent the new bridge district commute service from beginning Dec. 6 would be problems in negotiating with unions involved in providing the service. But he said talks with the unions, including those which represent Greyhound drivers, appear to be going smoothly at this point. Greyhound drivers will take over most of the jobs in the new commuter service.

STANNARD WOODWORTH

Stannard A. Woodworth of 9 Sheila Court, San Anselmo, died early today in a local hospital after a long illness.

He was a retired foreman for a fabricating firm. A native of St. Helena, Napa County, he came to Marin County in 1948. He was 65.

He is survived by his wife Minette and daughter Carole of the home, and a son, Capt. Craig Woodworth of Fort Ord, as well as three sisters and three brothers.

The funeral is pending at Chapel of the Hills.

PHILLIP GASSMAN

Phillip A. Gassman, 58, a Sausalito longshoreman, died yesterday at his home at 7 Tomales Street, following a lingering illness.

Gassman had had a history of asthma, emphysema and heart conditions and was found dead by his wife, according the Marin County Coroner's office.

He was born in North Dakota and moved to California in 1955, living first in San Francisco and later in Sausalito. He was a longshoremen with Pacific Maritime Union Local 12 for 15 years, but was retired at the time of his death.

He was a veteran of World War II, serving in the Army.

Gassman is survived by his wife, Lucrucia; three stepdaughters: Rosina D. Michna of Hamburg, Germany; Clara C. Evans and Norma L. Martino, both of San Francisco; a sister: Mary Gregory of Newport News, Va., and six step-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

JOHN R. HENDRICKSON

Funeral for John R. Hendrickson, 52, Corte Madera salesman, who died Thursday after collapsing at his home, will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemtery. The Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Keaton Chapel.

Hendrickson was born in Littlerock, Los Angeles County, and had lived in California all his life. He had lived in Marin County 17 years. The family home is at 36 Mariner Green Drive.

Hendrickson was convicted in 1960 of embezzling more than $3 million from a Long Beach bank, a theft termed at the time one of the largest embezzlements in American banking history.

When he was arrested in 1959, Hendrickson, a one-time bankrupt plumber, was head of furnace and heating manufacturing plants in Sebastopol and Los Angeles.

The embezzlement of $3,740,000 from the Long Beach bank came to light after a bank cashier committed suicide, leaving a note admitting his own guilt and implicating Henderson.

Hendrickson was sentenced to federal prison for 25 years but his sentence was greatly shortened because of good behavior. His lawyer said that he also repaid as much as "was physically possible" of the loss.

Hendrickson worked as a salesman in the heating and air conditioning industry for the past few years.

He is survived by his wife, Virginia; six sons, Gerald Hendrickson of Walnut, Los Angeles County; William Hendrickson of Novato; Thomas Hendrickson of Petaluma; Timothy, Michael and Geoffrey Hendrickson of Corte Madera; his parents, Ruby Reeves and Peter J. Hendrickson, and 11 grandchildren.

MEET JULIUS, THE COUGAR

Poised and alert, Julius, a 4-month-old cougar, was the attention of his owner, a brunette who identified herself only as "Melody," a resident of San Rafael, during a gas stop in Corte Madera yesterday. Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean spotted the cat while on another assignment, and snapped the picture as the animal rested on the hood of his owner's car at the Tamalpais Drive service station. The owner said she was reluctant to disclose her full identity and address for fear of cougarnappers and trespassers wanting a look at the cat.

IN BOND DISCUSSION

Seeger Warns Of Water Cutbacks

The chief office of the Marin Municipal Water District, amplifying earlier warnings, said curtailed water use is a definite possibility next summer if the Nov. 2 election proposal to tap the Russian River supply fails.

William Seeger, district general manager, also told the district board more drastic water preservation measures might be necessary if both the election loses and rainfall is light this winter.

Seeger made the remarks in response to board inquiries about the effect of possible failure of the Nov. 2 measure that would enable the Marin district to contract with Sonoma County for Russian River water. Cost of a delivery system has been put at $137 million.

Seeger said the district has the power to compel water use restrictions, adding that lawn-watering and irrigation would be the first targets. District residents, he said, could be required to restrict lawn watering to a limited number of days.

Beyond that, Seeger said, explaining that the district has been dipping into reserve supplies for the past two years, new water connections could be stopped, in effect imposing a construction ban. And while he said he woun't recommend it, Seeger told the board a dam and reservoir might have to be constructed at Walker Creek near Tomales.

Construction of the first step in the Sonoma-Marin project — a line to the North Marin Water District for temporary supply until an equeduct to the Russian River is built — would begin in the spring if the Nov. 2 measure passes.

Seeger said a safe operating level for water dispensing is 30,000 acre feet, or 22,000 acre feet less than the total district supply. (An acre foot of water equals 3330,000 gallons.)

However, the district used 34,000 acre feet two years ago and 32,000 acre feet last year, according to J. Dietrich Stroeh, district engineer. This amounts to a 4,000 and 2,000-acre-foot "overdraft," Stroeh said.

Seeger, noting district critics have accused him of scare tactics and overkill in explaining water needs, told the board, "I'm telling it as I see it as a water engineer."

The Marin Municipal Water District board also:

CONDEMNATION — Authorized a condemnation suit on land owned by the Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. and the Northwestern Pacific Railroad to permit the Manzanita pipeline relocation.

DEED — Accepted a $1,000 deed from Robert C. Jensky to use his land for a temporary 25,000-gallon tank while the district constructs a 500,000 gallon tank at the Bret Harte tank lot.

EXTENTIONS — Approved pipeline extensions to Marinview Unit 4, a Tamalpais Valley subdivision, and to the Larkspur Square Shopping Center under construction.

The Joshua tree measures up to 40 feet in height and displays cream-white blossoms in clusters 8 to 14 inches long, according to the National Automobile Club.

New Look Advances For Miller Avenue

A safety and beautification plan for Mill Valley's Miller Avenue — which may take years to implement — has been approved by two city bodies and sent to the city council.

The planning commission and architectural advisory committee voted Wednesday to recommend council approval of the plan, according to planning secretary Evelyn B. McCrary.

The plan involves reconstruction of the busy thoroughfare between Reed and Willow streets; traffic signals and turn lanes at Miller and La Goma Street; undergrounding of utilities in the quarter-mile stretch, and a bicycle path on the south side of the street.

Parking in the middle of the street will be replaced with a 16-foot landscaped median strip. Parallel parking will be retained on the south side and controlled access parking turnouts constructed on the north side of Miller.

According to Edmond C. Kagi of the Sausaltio planning firm of Sasaki, Walker Associates, between 15 and 20 per cent of the area's parking will be eliminated.

The project would be built in phases, Kagi said, and "may take years." The first phase, to be financed partly through a $42,000 federal grant and partly with city funds, is expected to cost about $65,000, according to Stanley M. Bala, Mill Valley city engineer.

Construction on the project would begin before next June, Bala said.

Magee Asks Court To Drop Counts

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee, continuing his one-man legal campaign from his cell, has filed a new petition with the state Court of Appeal asking that charges against him be dismissed.

In the petition received by the court yesterday, Magee claimed he has been denied his right to a speedy trial. In another petition yesterday, the convict, who has long blamed his present plight on lawyers, asked again that he be allowed to act as his own attorney.

He currently is represented by a court-appointed lawyer, Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles.

In the neatly printed and signed petition, Magee said that Graves was illegally appointed and then "stepped forward and started filing" documents used to "defraud petitioner out of his rights to a speedy trial."

Magee earlier had agreed in a court hearing in Marin to have his case tried after Angela Davis's, which has not yet started.

Veterans Building Opening Bill 4,000 Less Than Budgeted

Total cost of the grand opening of the Marin Veterans Memorial Building on Sept. 25 came to $27,549, almost $4,000 less than the $31,400 budgeted for the gala event, it was disclosed yesterday.

However, 1,476 paying customers contributed $15 per ticket or a total of $22,140 in admissions, bringing a net loss to the county of $5,409. Courtesy passes admitted 181 others.

Leon G. Kalimos, executive director of the memorial building, said the cost of the opening was surprisingly low, particularly because none of the polish and amenities of a glittering opening were deleted for the sake of economy. "We achieved our purpose, got good publicity from critics, and put on a high-level fashionable affair," said Kalimos.

The total attendance of 1,657 on opening night has not been surpassed at the building since, Kalimos said. Total seating capacity is 2,088.

Kalimos listed this breakdown of the opening night cost:

Cost of the orchestra, music, and guest artist, $12,450; tickets and advertising, $3,680; box office (ticket sales), $300; ushers and hat check, $108; stage hands, $476; parking attendants, $102; food catering, $6,000; champagne, $1,920; souvenir books, $1,137; and miscellaneous expenses for such items as searchlights, decorative plants, two buses to bring patrons from the Hall of Justice parking lot, parking labels and flasher signals.

The only other opening night expense, not directly connected with the memorial building itself, was the preconcert reception and dinner for about 80 persons, held at Holiday Inn.

Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella said the bill for dinner came to about $900, but added the cost was under negotiation because the county had questioned some of the items.

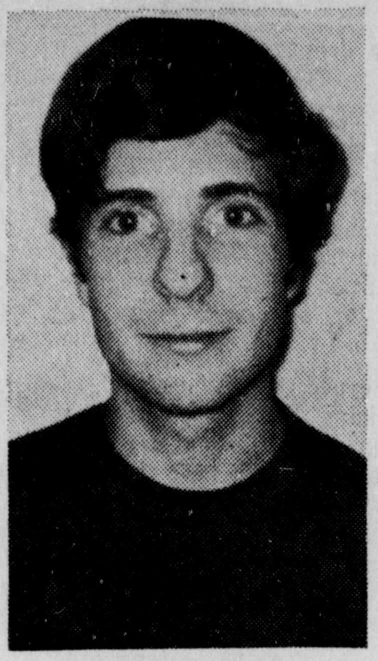
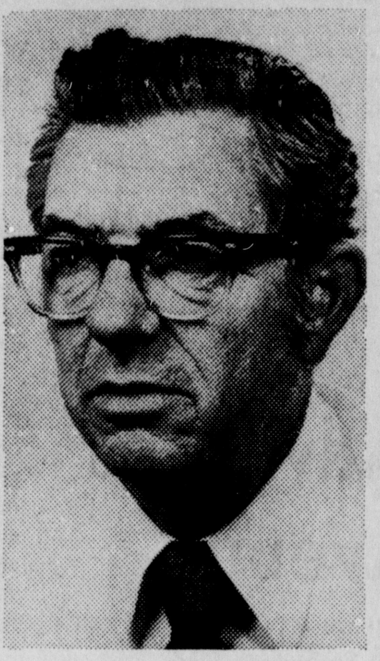
Richardson Bay Race Draws 5 Hopefuls

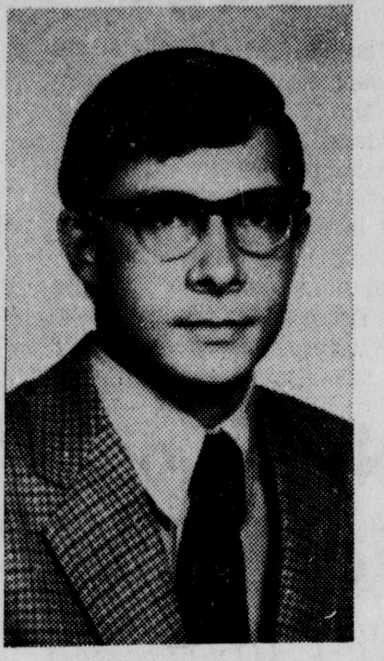
(One of a series of articles to be published this week and next by the Independent-Journal, outlining the issues and presenting the candidates in the local elections Nov. 2)



JOSEPH FRANASZEK
Seeks board vacancy



DOUGLAS de LA FONTAINE
Board president



CHRISTIAN FRITZ
Student seeks seat

Two 18-year-olds and two incumbents are among five candidates seeking two vacancies on the Richardson Bay Sanitary District board in the Nov. 2 election.

The candidates are:

Douglas John de La Fontaine, 47, of 2 Eagle Rock Road, Mill Valley, a salesman for Golden Grain Macaroni Co. of San Leandro. He has been on the board four years, the last two as president. His wife, Trudy, was co-chairman of the committee opposed to annexation of Strawberry to Tiburon.

Joseph John Franaszek, 18, of 17 Juno Road, Tiburon, a student at the University of California at Berkeley.

Christian Garrett Fritz, 18, of 700 Hawthorne Drive, Tiburon, also a Berkeley student. He and Franaszek are running on the same slate.

John N. Radovich, 48, of 33 North Knoll Road, Mill Valley, a valuation engineer with Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Francisco.

Beverly Vandiveer Wheeler, of 6 Felipa Court, Tiburon, floor manager at Stan's For Sports, San Rafael. She currently serves as board secretary.

The candidates say there are two major issues in the race — odor from the district's treatment plant at Tiburon and Trestle Glen boulevards, and proposed consolidation of Southern Marin sanitary districts.

All the candidates oppose the odor, long a sore point in nearby Little Reed Heights, but Fritz and Franaszek blame the present board for not solving the problem.

"There has been an odor control problem for six years," said Franaszek, "and after long discussions by the board, the citizens were so disgusted they hired their own consultant to report on what's wrong with the plant."

The incumbent candidates — de La Fontaine and Mrs. Wheeler — also recognize the problem, but maintain the board has done all it can.

"We have problems with odor, but that's being worked on," said de La Fontaine. He cited installation of a chlorinator and sludge incinerator last year at the plant as proof.

The odor issue has figured in past board elections. Three current directors, all residents of Little Reed Heights and running on an odor control platform, were swept into office in 1970.

Mrs. Wheeler and de La Fontaine cite their experience on the board as reasons for their retention. Mrs. Wheeler has been a director 12 years, while de La Fontaine is a four-year veteran, the last two as chairman.

"The board needs experienced people because of the problems facing us," said de La Fontaine. These include the proposed merger of Southern Marin sanitary districts, he said.

De La Fontaine favors the merger, but said he doesn't want "a countywide district with an appointed board, but one directly responsible to the electorate with the legal means to get rid of them (directors) if they prove unresponsive."

During his tenure on the board, he said, "the tax rate has declined 10 per cent, due largely to my efforts."

In her 12 years, said Mrs. Wheeler, "I've voted to cut taxes, to expand, update and modernize our treatment facilities, to build a sludge dewatering furnace to burn sludge and do away with unsightly drying beds."

She, too, supports consolidation. "I firmly believe the future of Southern Marin sewage treatment and waste water treatment and reclamation lies in the consolidated efforts of all the sanitary districts in Southern Marin," she said. In fact, she added, the same should be done in Central and North Marin as well.

She does not believe, however, that the responsibility for treating sewage should be turned over to the Marin Municipal Water District or the North Marin Water District. They are not equipped to do the task, nor do they have the staff, funds or lines to handle sewage, and such transfer would create a "political monster—the largest, strongest and most powerful political taxing agent in Marin," she said.

Fritz, Franaszek and Radovich all support consolidation. "There has to be a start made," said Radovich. "The first step should be consolidation. In this way the districts can make their goals and wishes known to the State of California."

Fritz said he questions whether the multiplicity of sanitary districts in Marin are efficient and ecological, and residents would realize tax savings through consolidation. "Also," he said, "air and water pollution don't recognize district boundaries."

Other points of his and Franaszek's platform: strict comiance with a Regional Water Quality Control Board ruling which found the district in violation of its standards; elimination of the $40 per meeting paid directors, with the money to be used for district needs, and increased responsiveness to citizens by the board.

Radovich said he thinks "a new person often sees a challenge where someone else only sees a problem."

There are 3,493 registered voters in the district. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Moran Fined For Drunken Driving

A state Public Utilities commissioner has been fined $250 in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

Judge Robert A. Smallman also placed Thomas Patrick Moran on probation for a year after he pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge.

Moran, 53, of San Rafael, was arrested June 16 when, according to the California Highway Patrol, he was seen driving erratically on Highway 101.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Uncertainty Is Market Keynote

New York (UPI)—Uncertainty normally breeds weakness and this told the story on Wall Street as stocks declined for the second week in a row.

The mechanics of phase II of the administration's economic program confused investors. They worried, too, about the world monetary crisis. And even a quarter-point cut in the prime bank interest rate disappointed them.

President Nixon had urged the banks to lower interest rates in order to spur business expansion and consumer spending, two steps deemed vital if the economy is to recover along the lines outlined in his Aug. 15 economic message.

The bank prime rate, from which other rates are scaled upwards, was trimmed to 5 3-4 per cent from 6 per cent, but as one Wall Street analyst remarked "a lot of people were disappointed the cut was not a half-point."

In addition, the reduction had been expected for about lwo weeks, and analysts observed that by the time it finally materialized it was of little suprise to the investment community.

"Nobody really knows where the economy is going," said Fred Anschel, director of research for Josephthal & Co. He said although he is optimistic for 1972, evidence is far too flimsy for investors to be anything but cautious for the near term.

Albert M. Klein of Edward A. Viner & Co. said business hasn't responded as well as many people had hoped to the President's new economic program. He noted that because of the market's depressed condition a lot of money is being diverted to bonds.

"Nixon's program was heralded as a new era in American economic history, but what people didn't realize was there was first going to be a transitional period," said David S. Liebowitz of Equity Research Associates.

Liebowitz said investors were disappointed the plan hasn't worked out yet, but he believes Nixon will accomplish his goal for a stronger economy over the next six to nine months. "The stock market is going to be stronger during that period because the economy is going to be stronger," the analyst concluded.

GEORGE KOLTANOWSKI
Chess master

Chess Expert Will Appear

International chess master George Koltanowski will appear in a tournament at 7 p.m. Nov. 12 in the Commons at Sonoma State College.

Koltanowski will play 30 boards simultaneously, lecture on chess, play a game blindfolded and do a knight's tour. Playing boards may be reserved by telephoning Thomas Harris, Commons manager.

Koltanowski, a native Belgian, has written books on chess in Flemish, French, Spanish and English. He also writes a chess column for daily newspapers.

The western meadowlark is not really a lark. It belongs to the same family as the blackbird.

$150 Fine For Pot Possession

Martha Dixon Skinner, 26, of Mill Valley, has been fined $150 for possessing marijuana.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed her on probation for one year after she pleaded guilty to one of two misdemeanor charges of possessing pot.

The second count was dismissed by Judge Smallman at the request of the district attorney's office.

Mrs. Skinner, a Tamalpais High School District secretary, was charged with possessing the weed July 31 when police visited her former residence in Larkspur after neighbors complained of loud music, and again Sept. 16 when marijuana was seen in her wallet when she went to show a Larkspur policeman her driver's license after he stopped the school district car she was driving.

Environmental Study Program Is Announced

CHICO (UPI) — Chico State College in California will take part in a program developed by the National Park Service geared to environmental studies from kindergarten through high school.

The program involving school-age youngsters and teachers will concentrate on the relationship of the outdoors to music, art, politics, economics and other aspects of modern life.

Trio In Muir Beach Race

(One of a series of articles to be published this week and next by the Independent-Journal, outlining the issues and presenting the candidates in the local elections Nov. 2)

Three persons, including two incumbents, will vie for two seats on the Muir Beach Community Services District in the Nov. 2 election.

The services district provides water supply to the small coastal community, maintains roads and provides recreation services. If the community's 81 registered voters approve Measure E on the ballot, the district will be responsible for fire protection as well.

The candidates are:

Richard C. Bain, 36, of Cove Lane, a civil engineer with Brown and Caldwell Engineers, San Francisco. He is chairman of the board, having been elected a director in 1968 and reappointed last year after moving away for three months.

Mary O. Mosteller, 49, of Sunset Way. She is a homemaker and has lived in Muir Beach about 15 years with her husband, Gerald, a carpenter.

Virginia Torres, a teacher. She did not respond to the Independent-Journal's request for biographical information.

According to Bain, "Water supply is the most important thing the district does and I have a background in water supply and waste water treatment."

He said he originally was asked to run by friends because of his experience in working to improve water quality. "When I first came here (about four years ago)," Bain said, "The water just wasn't fit to drink." It's much better now, he said.

The problem facing the district now is leaking water pipes, and the board is embarking on a program to replace them, a program Bain supports.

Mrs. Mosteller said she is running because "I believe all members of the community should if possible participate in some way or another in community affairs. This is my way of fulfilling what I consider to be my responsibility."

Mrs. Mosteller has served on the board since she was appointed to fill an unexpired term last year.

Having lived 15 years in Muir Beach, she said, "I'm pretty well aware of community problems." "One of the most pressing," she said, "is the need for fire protection," and she backs Measure E, which would turn protection over to the district.

If the measure passes, she said, she hopes the Bello Beach Volunteer Fire Department, which now provides "holding action" protection until the Marin County Fire Department can arrive, will turn its fire truck over to the district.

Bain agrees that passage of Measure E would be a good thing for the community. The need for greater protection was brought home last month, he said, when a home on Sunset Way was gutted by fire.

Polls in Muir Beach are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Old Adobe District To Lease Another Classroom

The Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, has approved leasing an additional portable classroom to help meet an influx of new students.

Donald Parker, Miwok Valley School principal, said the board approved lease of the classroom unit from Speedspace Corp. at its meeting Thursday. The district will pay $2,700 per year for the unit.

Parker said 50 new students have entered the district in the past two weeks, with the greatest crowding problem at La Tercera School, where the new unit will be placed.

The board heard Parker report that construction of the Miwok Valley School is more than half complete and should be ready for occupancy in late February or early March, as scheduled. The board approved the sale of $305,000 in bonds to finance a previously approved six-classroom addition to the new school.

The Old Adobe School District board also:

SCIENCE — Approved purchase of 24 science kits at a cost of $5,000.

STUDY — Named Bernard Eldredge School principal Daniel Longaker to work with Dr. Dan Montgomery of the Petaluma City Schools on a 12-month school plan study.

VACATION — Encouraged Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan to take a two-week vacation. The board lauded him for a high degree of responsibility he has shown to his job, but said five days vacation in four years was not enough.

Crossroads Rezoning To Be Studied

Rezoning of a portion of the crossroads area of Highways 101 and 37 from planned residential to planned commerical will be considered by the Novato City Council at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House.

The area originally was zoned commerical for a large shopping center, but the designation was changed to residential when the city's downtown plan recommended a major shopping center be placed on the Pinheiro Center.

The council also will consider annexation of 35 acres at the end of Seventh Street north to San Marin Drive.

Other items to go before the council include an agreement with the Novato Unified School District for use of school buses for recreation and an appeal of planning commission denial for a Taco Bell on Highway 101 between Vallejo and Olive Avenue.

Riles Calls For Citizen Leadership In Education

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— State Superintendent of Schools Wilson Riles has called on citizens to take the leadership and in developing schools that provide quality education.

Appearing at a Commonwealth Club luncheon yesterday, Riles referred to recent failures to pass school bond issues. He said the campaigns were dominated by school officials and board members and "it's my feeling we're going to have to stop this."

"The schools do not belong to the school boards or to the administrators," he said, "they belong to the people."

"If the people want a better school system, they will have to take the leadership to see that we have it," he said. He said part of the school's present difficulties are "that people tend to wait around until the court gives them a direct order."

This was a reference to California's school property tax, which was declared unconstitutional and to racial integration.

Another example is San Francisco itself, which recently integrated its schools by bussing at the order of a court, Riles said. "The people in this community have known a long time—10 or 12 years — that something had to be done about the integration program and they didn't act."

$45 Million Salmon

DESIGNER GEOFFREY Beene unveiled his spring fashion collection this week in New York, making imaginative use of the ruffling technique in his new line (left) with one upside down triangle ruffle as the front bodice of the dress. A new look too (right) is Beene's split level apron skirt. It has a front skirt to the knee and an ankle length back skirt.

FASHION DESIGNERS' VOTE

China Enters The World Community

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York designers beat the diplomats to the vote.

While the debate goes on at the United Nations on the East Side of town on how to admit mainland China to the world community, the results already are in from the fashion manufacturers on the West Side.

China's in.

The spring collections which major manufacturers-designers are currently showing buyers and press lift directly from so many Chinese motifs it's hard to keep track of them. Obviously, the minute President Nixon announced he was going to Peking to see Chou En-lai, the designers got out their costume histories and went to work.

LATEST TO lean heavily on the Orient for ideas is Donald Brooks, the award-winning designerwho does couture clothes for the stores and also dresses theater and movie stars.

Brooks copies the wide-brimmed coolie hat, with open crown and in airy-looking straws either black or white, showing them with daytime costumes.

The throat-hugging mandarin collar was everywhere in the Brooks collection. He used the frog (loops of fabric) closings on the sides of dresses and coats, and transferred such Chinese motifs as the kite, the puzzle and the lotus flower to prints of silk or wool.

Hardly Chinese, but at least oriental, were his fabulous evening prints done with kimono sleeves sweeping almost to the floor. The model started down the runway with arms folded primly in front of her, geisha style, then opened the sleeves wide to show how Brooks had worked the orangered and green lacquer silk print.

THE OTHER major trend in the Brooks collection was the ruffled look for late day and evening. Matter of fact, ruffles abound in most spring collections, part of what the fashion industry calls the return to soft, feminine fashions.

Brooks used intricate little ruffles to collar and cuff some late day and evening dress. In others, ruffles formed the whole bodice and skirt, af in one long black taffeta number with bare top.

Sweeps of ruffles were used to trim bodice and skirt of one deep green taffeta that got a hearty round of applause from the Brooks audience.

Some of the Brooks clothes looked prim as a schoolgirl's outfit. Others were daringly bare, as in his black crepe dress with bare midriff and low-slung hipster style skirt. A golden crepe evening gown was slashed in front all the way to the waist.

As in other collections, the big sleeve, cut dolman-style in one piece with the bodice, is a Brooks favorite. It looks elegant in the soft chiffon and organza prints.

THE OTHER major designer who showed his collection Wednesday was Geoffrey Beene who played the military theme throughout. He adapted military uniform shapes, notably the Navy's middy, dropping the collar on some dresses and coats to the waist to make a squared-off cape.

Beene leaned heavy on patriotic red, white and blue combinations. His opening group were three-piece pants costumes in wool and linen, all in red, white and blue.

New in footwork at the Beene show were Beth Levine--designed shoes, a different one for each foot. One shoe was a navy pump, the other was navy with a red wedgie inset.

DONALD BROOKS leaned heavily on Chinese and Oriental motifs for his spring fashion collection. He showed these evening clothes with the Mandarin collar, using frog-loop closings. The motifs are the Chinese kite, puzzle and lotus flower, combined with kimono sleeves. The costumes are silk and wool prints.

Safety — A Check For Seeing

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—It is the priceless gift, the gift of sight. Yet before the end of the current year, an estimated 34,300 more persons will have lost it.

It is impossible to measure the cost in agony to that many more persons labelled legally blind —the total now stands at 437,000. But the cost in dollars at least can be counted at $1 billion per year in direct aid to the sightless, another $1.7 billion lost in productivity such as wages.

Yet, those who deal with the problem call at least one-half of the blindness cases preventable.

Let's review some of the work being done in both prevention and cure.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness estimates that $16,303,646 is available for major public and private sources doing research in blindness and eye diseases.

By contrast, though, consider that we spend $242,580,000 yearly for lipsticks or $45,170,000 for bubble bath salts, tablets, oils and the like.

Even so, progress is being made. Dr. Wilfred D. David, the physician who is executive director of the society, says it operates in three major areas of prevention.

One is working with parents and educators to provide visual screenings for pre-school and early school level youngsters so that any problem can be located early. "An eye is old at seven," is the way a Society spokesman puts it. And the U.S. Public Health Service, which estimates there are about 56 million children under 15 with visual problems, says the number may increase to 75 million by 1980.

MUCH IS being done in the area of cataracts and glaucoma, which are major causes of blindness. According to the National Health Education Committee, a statistical source, senile cataracts cause 05.6 per cent of the blindness in America.

Glaucoma causes 13.5 per cent, most often affecting the over-40 age group.

Glaucoma often lies undetected simply because it shows no overt symptoms. The society recommends that every person over 35 have a professional eye exam at least every two years.

THE SPOUSE GAP

Conscious Steps Must Be Taken To Close The Chasm

(Condensed from the book, "The Spouse Gap")
By ROBERT LEE
and MARJORIE CASEBIER

Along with the necessity of seeing each other as unique persons, couples have the need to take conscious steps to close the gap that has developed between them. Let us then take a look at some of the specific ways this might be done. Remember that these are not panaceas or cures, but suggestions that point to the process of finding new life together. Each couple must discover what works for them.

First, then, we suggest that you find a way to renew the meaning of your marriage together in terms of your present desires and expectations. Certainly, the goals and ideals you originally had in mind when you embarked on your life together have been reached or have changed or are no longer appropriate to your situation. Now, at mid-life, is the time for spouses to discuss and to discover their mutual feelings about the meaning of their marriages.

RENEWAL of marriage implies movement toward the future. Attempts to cling to the past and from that perspective to control and predict the marital relationship will crush the life from the marriage. If one longs for the past, he cannot enjoy or be fully present in the here and now, which is where we must do our living.

Part of living in the present is accepting the fact that everyone shows signs of aging at some time or another. It is foolish to hang on to youthful looks indefinitely. Certainly careful attention to proper clothes and colors, hair styles, and fashions can enhance appearance. Good posture, proper exercise, and diet are also important, both for looks and for general physical health. But knowing when to let go of the past and accept nature's will gracefully is the key to living one's present life. In the long run this moving with the process of life has distinct advantages.

Perhaps your renewal of meaning in marriage will lead you to seek time apart for contemplation and reflection. There are couples who take part of their vacations each year for this. One spouse said that by the time he had been away from his wife a week he could hardly wait to get back to her! Maybe a sabbatical leave from marriage every 10 years or so would bring partners back together with new perspective and vitality.

A SECOND pointer for your exploration is to find common pursuits appropriate to your new age and stage. What had meaning at an earlier time may no longer be satisfactory. Over and over we return to the quote from Balzac: "Marriage must constantly conquer the monster that devours. Its name is habit." Finding common pursuits in study, in art and drama, in travel, and in other activities that will provide realms of meaning and conversational points of contact is essential.

Such common pursuits can be applied also to areas of social service. Get involved in a political party, or church activities, or social agency volunteer work and you may find that as you give yourself to some form of service, your marital health increases as well.

A third way to help recreate your life together — and this may sound facetious — is to keep alive the sense of chase. To be sure, the sense of chase will not and should not be the romantic tumult it was in early youth, with bouquets of flowers (though such a surprise is nice sometimes!), wild passion, and a literal chase around the car or couch. But a lively sense of pursuit in the manner of courtship attentiveness, persuasion, and spontaneity will keep the relationship exciting. Each person thereby affirms the partner continually as a desirable, needed person.

ALSO IMPORTANT is the willingness to be spontaneous about making love. Such spontaneity can recharge waning potency and bring spice back into the sex life. There are some people who cling to the old wives' tale that sex is debilitating to a middle-aged man. Actually, it can be just the tonic he needs to send him into the day's work with energy and exhilaration.

A fourth way to go at the task of bridging the spouse gap is to reserve time for each other in your marriage. In a sense, this suggestion underlies the previous three parts, for unless you take time for yourselves together you won't be able to see each other as persons, find common pursuits, or keep alive the sense of chase.

Finally, a fifth way to go about the task of recreating a life together involves the process of self-renewal. Or to put it in the vernacular: "Learn, baby, learn." This means recognizing that much of our disinterest and boredom with each other stems from the simple fact that we are not terribly interesting people to one another. Too often we quit growing, quit learning, quit renewing ourselves. Middlescence is just the time to start changing all of that and to embark on the task of continuing education throughout the rest of our lives.

Studies show that if couples can weather the storm of their middle years, if they can pass through the valley of the spouse gap, having faced all the fears and dangers that lurk there, then the outlook is very bright. As men and women move into their 50s, having adjusted to their crises, they have a higher rate of marital happiness and satisfaction. Often there is a kind of Indian summer or a second honeymoon in store for them.

THE WELL-MADE marriage is a rhythm in which gaps are inevitable, but in which also spouses can build bridges to close the gaps if both are willing to risk knowing and being known. It is a basic paradigm for human relationships, as male and female enter into a responsible, responsive, relational kind of love in which both grow and change and inter-act together and with others, and so fulfill their destinies.

Halloween Ranks Second For Parties

More children's parties are held at Halloween than at any other time except Christmas, according to Flora Mears, who designs party goods.

Miss Mears' suggestions for a successful party are to use dim lighting and Halloween candles to create a "spooky" mood. Give prizes for the best costume. Provide lots of candies, popcorn, taffy apples, ice cream and soda pop for young guests.

Use table settings and Halloween decorations made of paper to save clean-up chores. And organize plenty of games and activities like apple-bobbing, treasure hunts, fortune-telling, blind man's buff and telling tongue-twisters. Here's a seasonal tongue-twister from Miss Mears: "Which witch watches which witch when six bewitching witches wail and whistle wickedly."

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Girl's Friend Had Fatal Crash On A 10-Speed; She Hates Them

ONE ACORN DOESN'T MAKE A FOREST
DEAR HELEN:

Here's one for your side, Helen. About 10-speed bikes: Hooray for the mother who didn't want her son to have one.

I had a good friend who went on a cross-country bike hike. He used a 10-speed.

Allan (as I'll call him) was about 50 miles from home when he ran into the back of another bike. He tried to maintain his balance and got his hands caught in the brake cables. He couldn't save himself and flew over the handlebars. As a result he received multiple skull fractures and suffered internal bleeding. After being unconscious for two weeks, he died. He was only 19.

Allan was more of a brother to me than my own brother. He was always there when we needed him and now he isn't there any more. I've come to despise 10-speed bikes. — KAREN

DEAR KAREN:

It was a terrible loss, and my deepest sympathies go to you and Allan's family. But, Karen, if you despised everything in this world that can induce accidents, soon you'd be giving up everything from cars to bathtubs.

Read on, and perhaps you'll see what I mean about blaming all of a group for one bad happening. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

Recently something happened to our group that got us mad and scared.

During the summer and on weekends we hang around the high school playground until about 10 p.m. Sometimes we got a little rowdy, but not menacing. Naturally we expected the neighbors to get irritated and occasionally call the cops. Each time we were asked to leave and we did so quickly and respectfully. No problem, either way.

The other night, however, we were just standing around when a police car came up, so we scattered. About seven of us began walking to my girlfriend's house. Just then, the squad car sped around the corner and out jumps this officer, who shouted at us and accused us of lying when we said we were on our way home. Then he searched us thoroughly for beer or dope — and I mean really too thoroughly for young girls, and threatened to book us for "loitering," which we weren't.

Our problem is we have no place to go except the playground, and we don't do anything wrong. Some of the guys drink, but not when they're with us girls.

Is it any wonder policemen get called names when they all come on strong like that? — NON-VIOLENT CROWD WHO MIGHT CHANGE BECAUSE OF COPS

DEAR NVCWMCBOC:

Don't judge "all" policemen from one bad experience. Remember last summer when you "expected the cops" and had no problems, nor did they. Most treat you decently if you give them the chance, but there can be over-reactors in any group — and that includes the "rowdy" teenagers who rile the neighbors (who over-react and call for a squad car). — HELEN AND SUE

DEAR SUE:

My best friend ran away from home last week. When she came back, her parents didn't even act glad to see her. They sent her to her room and grounded her. All they do is remind her of the terrible thing she did. Is punishment the answer? — H.P.

DEAR H:

No! A good, heart-to-heart talk to see what the real problem is might help to solve it. Then everyone should put the past where it belongs — behind them. — SUE

CAPT. ROBIN L. QUIGLEY
Director of WAVES

Director Of WAVES Will Give Talk

Director of the WAVES Capt. Robin L. Quigley, U.S. Navy, will arrive in the Bay Area Tuesday to gather information from the 12th Naval District on problem areas for service women.

Captain Quigley, a graduate of Dominican College in San Rafael, will speak at the campus on Nov. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at Pennafort Hall. Her topic will be "The Role of Women in Today's Navy."

Captain Quigley, who was a music major at Dominican, is assistant chief of Naval personnel for women as well as director of the 6,600 women on active duty with the U.S. Navy.

During her Bay Area visit she will also be involved in programs with Naval reservists.

The daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Patrick A. Quigley of Shingle Springs, she holds both the Joint Service and Navy Commendation medals. She became director of the WAVES last January.

Take Care In Selecting Hairstyle

If you've been wanting a change of hairstyle, beauty and fashion authorities advise you to take a good look at your own facial features and select a style to balance them becomingly.

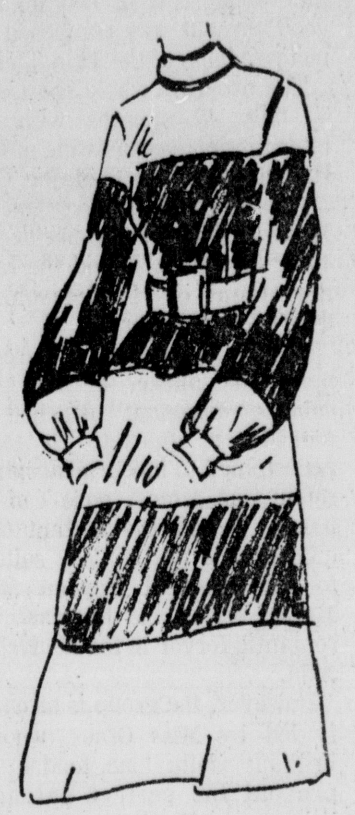
A high or domed forehead is offset with a casual half-fringe or full fringe of bangs or curls. If you have a low forehead, sweep the hair up and off the face, adding extra height on top.

Avoid long straight styles and center parts if you have a long, pointed nose. Instead, choose medium length hairdos with asymetrical side parts or short, feathery forward swept top hair. Complement a very prominent chin by selecting a medium length style which falls forward over the ears to hug the jawline. To give a receding chin more prominence, choose one which tapers forward over the ear, curving onto the cheek area.

SEW SIMPLE

Really Easy To Come Up With Own Design Ideas

By EUNICE FARMER



DEAR EUNICE,

I clipped a picture out of the newspaper of a very attractive dress made from wool double knit in two colors. It was so attractive and looked so simple, yet the placement of the contrasting colors is not the same as any pattern I have found. Is there any way we can copy a dress like this without a pattern?

MRS. NANCY R.

DEAR MRS. NANCY R.

The sketch you sent me would be very easy to copy, in this case for about one-tenth of the cost of the ready-made designer dress. Find a pattern with the same basic lines, you may even have to combine two patterns for this.

Carefully check the position of the first color change. It appears at the spot where there is a notch in the armhole for the sleeve. Take your ruler and mark a straight line across the bodice. The line would also appear at the notch mark on the front of the sleeve. Cut your pattern on the line, and mark both sections of the separated pattern "plus 5/8"" for the seam allowance.

The second line for a color change appears slightly below the waistline, proceed the same. In your picture, the sleeve is also changed at this point. To measure this accurately, it would probably be necessary to baste the sleeve into the armhole so that the exact spot could be marked.

Then, there is another contrasting band between the waist and hem. In each case, it is a very simple procedure as long as you remember to add the seam allowance to each section you have cut apart.

I would strongly encourage you to try this garment. When it's all worked out successfully I think you will have a thrill and will understand how simple it is to come up with designer ideas.

MRS. GEORGE H. Martin, Charlotte, N.C., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"For some of us who still wear aprons, I have found a neat trick. I take two aprons, place them wrong sides together and stitch them onto one waistband. In this way, the apron is reversible and also adds double protection, which comes in handy with some jobs.

"If one side becomes stained or worn beyond use, just clip it away at the waistband, and you will still have a single apron for further use. These reversible aprons are also great when it comes to entertaining — one side for the kitchen, the other for the guests."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have read everything there is to read about measuring yourself for slacks. I think I followed the instructions to a letter. When I completed the slacks, they were much too long in the crotch. Furtunately, I had enough length at the hem to raise them so they were wearable. but if I didn't, I would have wasted time and money. What kind of insurance can we get that this won't happen again?

SALLY S.

DEAR SALLY S.,

I have always been of the opinion that this measurement could be misjudged, and it was better to allow yourself a little buffer zone. It's usually best to build up the crotch seam about 5/8 inches. This means cutting the crotch seam higher at the depth of the curve only and running it almost horizontal into the curve as it changes direction. If you don't need this extra length in the crotch seam, it is easy to make the seam deeper to eliminate it. However, if you do need it, you'll save lots of time with this adjustment.

One of the problems comes from stretch fabrics. You can never depend on the amount of the lengthwise stretch. Often, the measurement could be correct, but the stretch factor of your knit would be greater than average, pulling the fabric down, causing the length of the crotch to become too long.

Working with knits and stretch fabrics is a whole new ball game in the sewing field. I have begun to use questions on knits, please send yours to me. This could apply to lingerie as well as men's slacks. Just sit right down and let me know your pet problems, and we'll see if we can't solve them.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just discovered how inexpensive it is to make knit slacks, and it only takes a couple of hours. I haven't found the secret of sizing as yet. Should knits be made from our regular patterns?

MRS. V.T.

DEAR MRS. V.T.,

Check your pattern carefully. If it is marked "for knits only", you can buy the pattern according to your hip measurements. If you are using your standard pattern that you have used for woven goods, it will be too large for the knit fabric. The correct size to buy is two inches smaller than your hip measurement. With knits you don't want or need the extra ease that is so important in woven fabrics.

Two Games Played At Halloween Parties

For centuries in England two simple fortune-telling games have been enjoyed by girls and young men at Halloween fireside parties. In the first game, says greeting card designer Flora Mears, a couple places a pair of chestnuts beside an open fire. If the nuts burn evenly side by side, the boy and girl supposedly will fall in love and marry. If the chestnuts burst and jump, the couple likewise will argue, quarrel and part.

To play the other game, all the men are sent outside the room. Three bowls are set on a table — one empty, one filled with clear water and the third with muddy water. The young men are then brought in blindfolded, one at a time and asked to choose a bowl. A man who picks the empty bowl, it's said, will remain a bachelor. Choosing the bowl of clear water means marrying a young girl. And a man who selects the muddy water, according to this ancient game, will marry a widow.

The Custom Of 'Trick Or Treat'

The Halloween custom of "trick or treat" originated centuries ago in Ireland, according to greeting card company art director Jeannette Lee. Early in Irish history an open-air parliament was held each year at Tara on Halloween, when fruits and crops had been harvested.

This gathering passed a law allowing farmers to go from house to house at Halloween, soliciting food for poor villagers.

People who gave cheerfully were promised prosperity. Those who were tight-fisted were made to perform some embarrassing trick, like running three times round the village, under pain of vengeance by the god Muck Olla. An offshoot of the custom was brought to the United States by 19th century Irish immigrants as "trick or treat."

Halloween Known By Various Names

Halloween is known around the world by various names, says researcher Sally Hopkins. In Britain, as well as being called All Hallow's Eve and All Hallow E'en, it's known as Nutcrack Night, since the roasting of chestnuts plays an important part in the festivities.

In Ireland, Halloween is sometimes called Oidhche Shamhna, or the Vigil of Samhain, Lord of Death. On the Isle of Man the name for Halloween is Hogunnas. The origin of Halloween, says Miss Hopkins, goes back to the Roman autumn festival of Pomona.

MUSIC REVIEW

New String Group Bows; Has Promise

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

The new Otnes String Quartet showed last night it can become one of Marin's fine chamber music ensembles in its debut concert in the auditorium of the Tamalpais Retirement Residence in Larkspur.

Composed of Allyn Otnes, first violin; Harris Elvebak, second violin; Joan Lundblad, viola, and Patricia Elvebak, cello, the quartet is a group of musicians — all members of the Marin Symphony Orchestra — who have been playing together for only a year for their own pleasure, and this was their first public appearance.

With more experience in playing together and with time to build a repertoire of varied styles, this new quartet should become a popular addition to the chamber music scene in Marin.

The players were fortunate to debut in the Tamalpais, which has marvelous acoustics in its intimate auditorium, seating about 250.

It was my first visit to the residence, and I was happy to learn that Marin has such an ideal small hall, where the public as well as residents may hear good music. This concert was part of a free public series sponsored by the College of Marin Adult Education Program.

Mill Valley piano instructor Gordon Pomfrey, who coordinates the programs, said series popularity is increasing, adding that about half of last night's good turnout was composed of non-residents of the Tamalpais.

The program was a short one — only 45 minutes with no intermission — consisting of the Haydn Quartet in G Major, Op. 77, No. 1; the first movement of Mozart's Quartet in C Major, L. 465 ("Dissonant"), and the last movement of Mendelssohn's Quartet in A Minor, Op. 13.

It was an evening of serene melodious music, despite the subtitle "dissonant" attached to the Mozart quartet. To ears accustomed to modern cacophony it was almost pure consonance. I had the feeling the quartet was particularly suited to the classical Hayden and Mozart styles and the dash of romantic fervor in the Mendelssohn.

However, the group is strongly led by Miss Otnes, whose brilliant violin tone tended to prevent the perfect balance that is so difficult to achieve in a string quartet. Like most such quartets, the outer voices tended to be heard over the inner voices at times, though the excellent acoustics made the most of the latter.

Timing and phrasing were skillfully handled, especially in the dialogue among instruments in the finale: vivace of the Haydn. Balance among voices was also at its best during this segment.

Marin Eyes Purchase Of Ranch For Park

Marin County is seriously considering purchase of the 380-acre Smith Brothers Ranch north of the Civic Center for a county bayfront park.

The disclosure came yesterday from County Administrator John F. Barrows, who said the county has been discussing a "north bayfront park" since 1969, but the exact site had not been pinpointed before.

A. E. Bagshaw, attorney for Edward and Jordan Smith, owners of the property, asked the board of supervisors in a letter this week either to buy the property for $900,000 or disclaim its interest in the land in order to remove any "cloud" from the property.

Bagshaw's letter will be discussed by the board at its Tuesday night session.

Bagshaw said the Smith Brothers had a chance to sell the ranch, on the north bank of Gallinas Creek and east of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad tracks, to a private developer. He said the prospective buyer backed off because County Parks and Recreation Director Pierre W. Joske told him the county wanted to buy the property.

If the county is not prepared to pay the $900,000, it should not scare off prospective buyers, said Bagshaw.

Barrows said the county has set aside $125,000 to start acquisition of a north bayfront park. "Several sites had been under investigation by our parks and recreation commission and department, and we are now concentrating our efforts on the Smith Brothers property."

Youth In Art Series Announced

Four Marin performing arts organizations have banded together to present to Marin students an academic year of varied dramatic programs to be shown at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

The Marin Symphony Guild, the Marin Civic Ballet Association, the Junior Theater of Marin and the Marin Museum Association have arranged 14 programs to be shown twice each for school children, beginning Nov. 2.

Representatives from the four organizations have formed the Youth in Arts Committee to sponsor the program.

The first performance on Nov. 2 will be Marin Shakespeare Festival's "Wind in the Willows," to be shown at 10:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. Later presentations will include ballets, music concerts, dramas and puppet shows.

So far, according to Joanne Dunn of the Junior Theater, over 20,000 students have been booked for the performances. She said this is the first time a full-scale cultural program has been provided for children in Marin.

"Formerly if a school wanted to take children to a concert, the children would have been bused to San Francisco and pay as much as $5 each," Mrs. Dunn said. "Now we have cultural shows in Marin and the children only have to pay 35 cents for each performance."

She said the four organizations have been working for a year and a half to put the program together.

Other representatives besides Mrs. Dunn on the Youth in Arts Committee include Thelma Schultz and Joyce Conklin of the symphony guild; Helen Crotty and Nyna Koppich of the museum association; Phyllis Thelen of the ballet association and Camile Noble of the junior theater.

Baha'i Convention

Baha'i's of Marin will attend a five-county convention tomorrow at Willits to elect delegates to the Northern California Baha'i National Convention to be held in Wilmette, Ill.

Marian Marsh To Open Fall Series

Soprano Marian Marsh will present the opening public concert in San Domenico School's 1971-72 Artist Series Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Alumnae Hall on the campus in Sleepy Hollow. She will be accompanied at the piano by Alden Gilchrist.

A resident of Marin seven years, Miss Marsh has just returned from Lima, Peru, where she sang with the Orquestra Synfonica Nacional. She has also sung with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Oakland Symphony and Joffrey Ballet and in the San Francisco Symphony Pops concerts and the Cabrillo Festival.

On Wednesday, Miss Marsh will give a preview of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" for San Domenico students who will attend the San Francisco Opera performance on Nov. 3. Completing her program will be selections from works by Handel, Debussy, Alban Berg and Leonard Bernstein.

'Flower Drum Song' Is Next

Tryouts for "Flower Drum Song," next musical production of the Novato Community Players, will begin from 1 to 5 p.m. Dec. 5 at the Novato Community House.

Tryouts will be held again from 8 to 11 p.m. Dec. 6 at the same place, according to Paul Terry, producer of the show.

Shari Leaf will direct the show, with Lorayne Corzier as accompanist and Marie Bliss as choral director.

The show will be presented April 28, 29, and 30 and May 5, 6, 12 and 13 at the Community House.

Ban Imposed On Dredged Mud In Bay

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — New fears about the environmental hazards of dredging poisonous sediments have led the Army Corps of Engineers to revoke 50-year-old regulations permitting wholesale dumping of dredged mud in San Francisco Bay.

The regulations date from days when dredging and dumping mud spoils were considered harmless. New knowledge, however, much of it gathered in the last two years — shows that bay muds have accumulations of toxic heavy metals such as lead.

Dredging the mud stirs up these metals, and dumping them back into the bay can build up levels of the metals.

Under the old Army regulations, dumping up to 100,000 cubic yards was allowed for maintenance dredging without a permit. Under the new regulations, permits will be required for all dumping — and dumping instead may have to be done outside the Golden Gate.

The two dumping grounds in the bay are off Alcatraz and Treasure islands.

To Exhibit Art

Elvire de Baere of San Anselmo will exhibit paintings and drawings during November at the Ross Valley Savings and Loan in San Anselmo.

Benefit Performance Of Musical Slated

A benefit performance of "The Fantasticks" by the Novato Community Players will be staged at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

Proceeds from the event, sponsored by the newly formed Marin Chapter of the Northern California Diabetes Association, will be used to buy free diabetes test kits and educational literature, to support free public lectures about diabetes problems and to establish a permanent headquarters for the Marin diabetes group.

The cast includes Evans Burke of Santa Venetia; John Bernardi, Dave Block and Maria Warren of Novato; Vera Hartsock of Ignacio; Bill Murray of San Rafael; John Bonner of Petaluma and Mervin Storms of San Francisco.

The orchestra is composed of Elaine Burke, piano; Natalie Cox, harp; Marc White, drums, and Bill Hooks Jr., bass.

Allen Comedy To Be Presented

The Actors Playhouse of Marin will stage three performances in December of Woody Allen's comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," at the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

The play, featuring San Francisco radio personality Terry McGovern of Sausalito, will run Dec. 10 and 11 at 8:30 p.m. and Dec. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Other members of the cast include Phyllis Courtney of Ross, Dan Caldwell and Tom Barker of San Rafael, Barbara Nelson of Sausalito and Stephanie Saunders of Corte Madera.

Tickets for the play may be obtained by writing the playhouse at Suite 111, the Sierra Building, 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

Society's 'Split' Mapped By Kerr

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Clark Kerr, chairman of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, says the real split in American society is between "outsiders" and "insiders."

Kerr urged that the "outsider" get a chance. He said new laws and regulations are necessary to make an industry prove its hiring exams are necessary and predicted the industrial society of the future will give more options and more authority to employes.

Kerr, former president of the University of California, addressed a meeting Thursday of the University of California Institute of Industrial Relations, of which he was the first director.

Brunches Set For Funds To Fight Measure

Brunches will be given tomorrow at 11 a.m. at three Marin homes to raise money for newspaper ads urging a "no" vote on Proposition B, the Marin Municipal Water District proposal to contract with Sonoma County for Russian River water delivery.

The brunches will be given at the homes of Dr. and Mrs. Michael Berry of Ross, Mr. and Mrs. James Schock of Mill Valley and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lind of Terra Linda.

Reservations may be made by phoning the hostesses or by writing "The Plot to Save Marin" at P.O. Box 753, San Anselmo.

Antimony Oxide Is Top Flame Retardant

NEW YORK (UPI)—A chemical compound that has whitened man's castiron bathtubs for more than 70 years now helps protect him from fire.

Antimony oxide is popular as a flame retardant, says Chemetron Corporation, producer of the white powder.

Homeowners Cash Available

If you need money — for any purpose — you've probably got it right in your own house. Because with your equity (the difference between the current value of your home or property and the amount you owe on it) you can arrange to borrow from $1,000 to $10,000 or more thru Union Home Loans.

We can also arrange flexible payments you can comfortably handle. No cosigner, no red tape.

So if you've been looking for extra money, look to your own home or property. Call Union Home Loans today and ask about arranging a real estate loan you can live with. It's a smart way to borrow.

Census Takers Stage A Strike

ROME (UPI)—Italy's decennial census ran into trouble today with striking census takers, citizens concerned about their privacy and at least one caveman-style lover.

Federica Balestra, a 19-year-old girl working as a census taker in Milan, told police a man tried to assault her when she called at his home to hand him a census questionnaire. She managed to open the door he had closed behind her and ran away screaming.

Police questioned the 39-year-old man and charged him with "violent lustful acts," a crime which carries a penalty of up to six years in jail.

In Rome, hundreds of census takers announced they were going on strike yesterday unless the city meets their demands for $9.60 a day, double what they are getting now.

Fire Destroys Petaluma Home

A family of four was left homeless Thursday when fire swept through their home at 1401 Spring Hill Road, Petaluma.

Firemen from the state Division of Forestry were called to the John Bessey home at 2:30 p.m. and found the structure almost fully engulfed in flames. They reported the interior of the building was gutted with all clothes and furnishings lost. Damage was estimated at $22,500.

The fire reportedly started in a rear bedroom when no one was at home. The cause of the blaze has not been determined. Firemen said the family was taken in by a neighboring resident.

Johnson Praises Black Lawmaker

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson, attending a reception to encourage Sen. Barbara Jordan, D-Houston, to run for Congress, Thursday praised the Negro lawmaker as "the epitome of the new politics in Texas."

"Not the politics that seek to destroy and divide to mess up everything in the way. She is involved in a governmental system of all the people, all the races, all economic groups," Johnson said.

He also plugged his new book on his presidential years and spoke briefly on his years in office.

"I gave it all I had," he said. "if I did accomplish all I wanted to, it wasn't because I didn't try."

Change Of Venue In Pot Plot

I-J Special Report

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A federal judge has granted a change of venue to a U.S. District Court in San Francisco for seven Marin County residents and 11 other men and women accused of a plot to smuggle marijuana from Mexico to Arizona and California.

Judge Walter Craig ruled that the pending arraignments of the 18 persons should be moved because all but three defendants are Bay Area residents. The 18 were indicted in mid-September by a federal grand jury in Phoenix on charges they conspired to import at least 2,900 pound of marijuana to a ranch near Winslow, Ariz., and planned to distribute it though use of houses in Tiburon and San Francisco as way stations.

Marinites indicted in the case were Will Walker, 27, of Corte Madera; Joanne Fahey, 31, of Corte Madera; Janice Lynn Swang, 23, of Fairfax; Daniel V. Badaracco, 28, of Fairfax; Hon Robert Franklin, 33, of Corte Madera; Frank Richard Sayre, 27, of Corte Madera, and Robert Halvorsen, 27, of Tiburon.

The grand jury alleged that San Francisco attorney Brian D. Rohan purchased the Winslow ranch as a depot for the marijuana smuggling. He was one of the 18 indicted.

Right To Search Sharply Limited

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A policeman's right to search a suspect's car for weapons or contraband was sharply limited by a California Supreme Court ruling Thursday.

Written by Associate Judge Stanley Mosk, the majority opinion prohibits a practice common throughout the state: search of a motorist's car after a minor traffic arrest when a policeman is suspicious of the activity, dress, haircut or appearance of the driver.

In handing down the opinion, the high court ordered a lower court not to allow as evidence a package of marijuana found in a vehicle driven by Gerald Andrew Gallik, 19, San Jose.

Gallik faces a trial for possession of marijuana. He was arrested by San Jose Policeman Roger Finton.

Sewage Funding To Be Discussed

Financing of a planned addition to the Petaluma sewage treatment plant will be reviewed at an adjourned meeting of the Petaluma City Council Monday at 8 p.m.

The council will consider calling a January bond issue election of almost $2 million to finance the project. A similar election last June failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote.

The council has promised the Regional Water Quality Control Board that if another election is rejected by voters, it will sell revenue bonds to finance the project.

Myers Is Against Women In Priesthood

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Right Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Episcopal bishop of California, says the priesthood is "a masculine conception" and the ordination of women would "produce a painful ecumenical tension."

The bishop made his remarks in a statement prepared for delivery today or Sunday to 700 delegates attending the state's diocesan convention this weekend.

"Christ is the source of priesthood," the prelate said. "The sexuality of Christ is no accident nor is His masculinity incidental."

Six years ago Bishop Myers' predecessor, the late James A. Pike, sought spiritual promotion for Deaconess Phyllis Edwards. She was invested as a member of the fourth Episcopal order of ministry in which she could assist the priest with Holy Communion but could not offer it.

Bishop Myers said he was not asserting God was a male but "in the imagery of both the Old and New Testaments, God is represented in masculine imagery."

"The male image about God pertains to the divine initiative in creation. Initiative is in itself a male rather than a female attribute," the clergyman said.

He said the priest "acts at the commissioned agent of Christ. His priesthood partakes of Christ's priesthood, which is generative, initiating, giving."

"The overwhelming majority of Christians cannot tolerate the idea of the ordination of women to the priesthood. For Anglicans to ordain them would produce a painful ecumenical tension."

He said Episcopalians "must not be swayed by the apparent willingness of some Roman Catholics to proceed in this direction."

He urged the delegates to work for a more "creative ministry" for women, "rooted in that of Mary, the Mother of Jesus."

"Could it be," he asked," that our Anglican lack of veneration for her as Theotolos (God's bearer) is at the root of much of our confusion?"

More Proceedings Set In Marijuana Fly-In

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Four men, including two Marin County residents, arrested last Sunday in connection with shipment of a truckload of marijuana, are to return to federal court Nov. 16 for further proceedings in their case.

Charged with possessing marijuana with intent to distribute it were Harry J. Kreamer, 32-year-old Bolinas lawyer; Allan G. Palmer, 30, of Novato; Paul R. Pattengale, 32, of San Francisco, and Allister M. McKenzie, 29, of Boyes Hot Springs.

They were arraigned Monday in U.S. District Court.

Agents who arrested the men said they learned of a plot to fly 1,200 pounds of pot from Florida to the Bay Area. They said they watched the four men unload crates from a small plane at the Oakland Airport Sunday and then followed three of the men in a truck to Marin.

Agents stopped the truck on Mitchell Boulevard in Northgate Industrial Park, where they theorized the men may have been heading for one of the warehouses in the area.

Kreamer, who left Oakland in his own car, was arrested later in the day in Oakland.

The Bolinas man also faces federal charges from another arrest Aug. 18 in Novato.

Agreement On Teen Center

The Sausalito Recreation Commission has announced an agreement with the Sausalito School District to move the Sausalito Youth Center from Old Star of the Sea Church to Central School, according to Chairman H. Thomas Rogers.

Rogers said the commission, meeting Thursday, deferred until Nov. 11 action on whether to approve plans for an urban plaza with underground parking in the area now occupied by Municipal Parking Lot No. 1 in downtown Sausalito.

Rogers said the commission will have a joint meeting that day with the Sausalito Planning Commission to discuss the matter.

Kennedy Attacked For Belfast Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., says Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is guilty of a "blatant attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of a friendly nation" because he called for the withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

"It was this kind of oversimplified meddling by Sen. Kennedy's brother that took us into Vietnam," said Dole.

Jail Sentence On Petty Theft

Shelly Marie Gonsalves, 20, of Berkeley, has been sentenced to 10 days in Marin County Jail for petty theft.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed her on probation for one year.

She pleaded guilty Sept. 2 to two charges of misdemeanor petty theft, while two misdemeanor burglary charges were dismissed.

She was arrested June 23, and originally charged with felony burglary, after Northgate Shopping Center security guards reported she had taken clothing valued at $209 from the Emporium and Hastings stores.

What Price Gerrymander?

This map shows

the incredible gerrymander now cooked up for Marin's Senatorial District. It would carve us into two fragments. One piece — eastern Corte Madera, the Tiburon Peninsula, part of Larkspur — would be stuck onto a district reaching all the way up to Shasta County. The other part of Marin would be tacked onto portions of San Francisco and — believe it or not! — San Mateo Counties.

A joke? It should be -- but unfortunately it isn't. It's now being printed up for adoption by Senate Committee on next Wednesday, October 27th! It is the culmination of cloakroom maneuvering and old-style partisanship — the kind of politics that deals in labels and personalities and ignores the people. (The Committee is also toying with an even more ludicrous notion that would slice Marin down the middle of Highway 101!)

What can you do?

As a California citizen, I deplore the callous proposals to gerrymander Marin County for partisan and personal ends. This kind of politics went out of style long ago.

Marin County has much less than the minimum number required for a Senate District. There is no legitimate reason to split Marin. The County should be kept intact and linked to immediately adjacent areas with which it has a community of interest - such as Napa and Sonoma. The use of artificial districts will serve to increase the cost of campaigns, limit candidacies, and disenfranchise minority groups.

Please reject any and all redistricting plans that fail to adhere to logical lines or to keep Marin intact.

Terra Linda Knocks Off Redwood

By PAUL CANE

Championship-wise Terra Linda High School reversed a three-point midway deficit with three second half touchdowns last night to knock off former Marin County Athletic League-leader, Redwood High, 23-6 in San Rafael.

Balancing the vaunted passing game of free-wheeling quarterback Kevin Donohoe with the superb running of Mike Sabel, Terra Linda turned a tight ballgame at the three-quarter mark into a runaway before a packed, Trojan Homecoming audience on the San Rafael High School field.

"I think we've got a much better running game than most people have given us credit for," exalted victorious Trojan coach Don Lucas following the win. He guessed that Redwood was overpreparing for the publicized passing attack, and neglected to modify the defense for Sabel and halfback Sean Casey's runs. Sabel carried 17 times for 125 yards.

But if the spotlight shifted from Donohoe's passing, a bigger surprise was the defense applied on Redwood's highly-touted running attack. Daryl Edralin and Mike Connor, who combined for more than 225 yards last week in an upset win over the San Rafael Bulldogs, were held to less than 50 combined last night.

The Trojan mentor observed, "In their wishbone-T style offense it took so long for the back to get to the hole that we were usually there." Lucas lauded fullback Mark Asiano however, for shaking up the Trojan line on several runs up the middle.

Terra Linda scored the first time it had the ball, on a 26-yard field goal by Pete Corbett. Later in the quarter, the Giant defense forced the Trojans to punt, and Redwood ground out a 14-play, 82-yard drive that was to be the Giants only scoring effort of the night. Halfback Connor took a screen pass from Bob Brown for the eight-yard score.

Redwood, appearing to be the better team in the first half, was halted on the Trojan 25 on a subsequent series on a fine defensive play by Larry Madden on Edralin. "Madden was phenomenal," Lucas praised. The big junior tackle later ran 61 yards with a fourth quarter interception for a last Terra Linda score.

In the third quarter, Terra Linda trailing 6-3, Donohoe passed the Trojans for their

Warriors To Open Home Slate Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Golden State Warriors open their home National Basketball Association campaign tonight with a new name and a permanent court when they meet the Detroit Pistons.

The Warriors —known in earlier NBA seasons as the San Francisco Warriors —changed their name this year when the decision was made to play all of their home games in the Oakland coliseum arena. Last season the Warriors played their home games at three arenas — the Cow Palace, the San Francisco Civic Auditorium and the Coliseum.

The Warriors open the home stand after a road trip in which they came out with an even 2-2 record.

San Francisco Bay Area basketfall fans also will get their first look at newcomer Cazzie Russell, who was acquired during the off season in a trade with the New York Knicks for Jerry Lucas.

Russell pumped in 29 points and led the Warriors in their last outing Wednesday, a 115-98 victory over Cleveland.

The Warriors, who opened their home season a year ago against the Pistons, hope they don't stage a repeat performance of that game when they were bombed by the Detroit club.

The Pistons are 3-1 for the new season. They spoiled the New York Knicks' home opener, but lost their own Detroit debut to Los Angeles.

Detroit will be without star guard Dave Bing, due to eye surgery but they have been getting top performances from center Bob Lanier and guard Jimmy Walter, who scored 44 and 34 points respectively in a winning effort over Portland.

Horse Disqualified In Drug Controversy

NEW YORK (UPI) —The stir caused three years ago by the drug butazolidin flared anew Friday with the introduction of another word to the lexicon of racing-methacarbonal.

The New York State Racing Commission announced Friday that it had disqualified Cragwood Stable's Raise Your Glass, a horse which finished second in the third race at Belmont Park on Oct. 1, because commission chemists had discovered traces of the drug in the animal at the time of the race.

In 1968, Peter Fuller's Dancer's Image was disqualified after apparently winning the Kentucky Derby because traces of butazolidin, a pain killer, were found in the horse's urine.

Harry Peterson, chief chemist at the New York State Racing Commission laboratory —where saliva and urine tests on Raise Your Glass proved "positive" —described methcarbonal as a muscle relaxant used to relieve pain or soreness..

"The drug won't slow down or quicken the pace of a horse," stated Peterson, "but it would affect his ability to run because he's running under the effects of medication. Of course, if the drug is covering up any soreness, the horse shouldn't be allowed to run in the first place."

The commission moved Party Life up to the second position after disqualifying Raise Your Glass. Buck's Nashua was placed third and Silver Mallet fourth. Rise Your Glass was placed sixth and last. Purse money was redistributed accordingly, but the decision did not affect the pari-mutuel payoff.

Miller, in Kentucky for today's $25,000 Breeder's Futurity at Keeneland race course, revealed that Raise Your Glass sustained a chipped bone in his right knee during the Oct. 1 race, adding that the injury was not discovered until several days later.

The veteran trainer said the colt will be sold for stud service next month as part of a reduction of the estate of the late Charles W. Englehard.

Raise Your Glass has been unraced since Oct. 1. The Kentucky-bred, 3-year-old son of Raise A Native won two of nine races this year and earned $19,301.

Miller said he had never heard of methacarbonal and had no idea how traces of it were found in the colt.

"It's not the first time this has happened to a trainer and it won't be the last," commented Miller. "You can't account for it. You can't say Joe Smith or Joe Doakes did this.

"If a man needs to feed his wife and family, he might do anything. There are lots of nuts running around the streets of New York. Our game is no different.

"I'm terribly glad I'm exonerated," he added.

The commission findings vindicated the colt's trainer, MacKenzie Miller. The report stated that Belmont stewarts found "no evidence that Miller or any of his employes had anything to do with this" and therefore had recommended to the commission that "no disciplinary action should be taken."

Bruins Tumble Seals

OAKLAND (UPI)—The California Golden Seals have completed their season opening home stand and with a short three-game road trip ahead of them, they're still looking for their first win of the year.

Playing before 10,348 fans, the largest home crowd of the season, the Seals fell, 5-1, Friday night to the powerful Boston Bruins. The loss extended the Seals losing streak to five straight games after opening the season with a pair of ties.

The Seals play in Detroit Sunday against the Red Wings.

The Bruins scored in every period Friday night and were led by Johnny Bucyk's two goals. Phil Esposito collected a goal and three assists to raise his point total in six games to 14 points. Boston's playmaker, Bobby Orr, also assisted on three goals.

California's only goal came in the first period when little Norm Ferguson pushed the puck through Bruin goalie Gerry Cheevers' pads on a power play.

The Seals picked up some needed scoring punch Friday when they acquired rightwinger Tom Webster from Detroit in a straight player trade.

In exchange for Webster, who scored 30 goals and had 37 assists as a rookie in the National Hockey League last year, the Seals sent defenseman Ron Stackhouse to the Red Wings.

Teammate Raps Monroe, Clark For Not Showing Up

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Jack Marin has chastised teammates Earl Monroe and Archie Clark for failing to appear for the Baltimore Bullets' game Friday night, calling their action "totally irresponsible."

"There's never been a case of a player not siding with a player on issues like these, but there is one now," Marin said, emphasizing the fact that he was speaking only for himself. "I think they (the club) ought to tell them both to get a job somewhere sweeping streets or whatever. This doesn't halp our (basketball's) image much and the feeling of a fan has got to be that it's irresponsible."

Monroe and Clark, who were obtained by Baltimore earlier this week in a trade with Philadelphia, were suspended by the Bullets Friday night when they failed to suit up and a club spokesman said that Monroe has demanded that he be traded. Both Monroe and Clark are high-scoring guards.

Neither player was on hand when the Bullets took the floor Friday night against the New York Knicks, who romped to an easy 110-87 National Basketball Association victory.

"We are embarrassed and chagrined by the timing of this announcement," said Jerry Sachs, executive vice president of the Bullets. "We regret that fans, who came to see these two stars perform, were unable to do so."

Sachs added that attorney Larry Fleischer had told the Bullets that Monroe wanted to be traded and said, "We are contacting NBA teams but have not been able to arrange a trade as yet; we feel that we are living up to our part of the bargain but don't feel that Earl is."

Clark, who is reported to have been given permission to visit Philadelphia, for personal reasons, apparently wants to renegotiate his contract. Bullet officials said they haven't heard from him since he was granted permission to go to Philadelphia.

It's A Great Debut For Ron Stackhouse

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Ron Stackhouse's debut with the Detroit Red Wings got him four things: a goal, two assists —and a fat split lip.

It also got the Red Wings their second victory of the National Hockey League season when they overcame some troublesome fog over the ice Friday night and also the Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-2.

There were only two other NHL games played, and in them, the Boston Bruins slugged the California Golden Seals, 5-1, to move into a tie with the New York Rangers for first place in the East Division, and Montreal moved only a point back with a 6-0 shutout of the Vancouver Canucks.

"You couldn't ask for anything more," coach Doug Barkley of Detroit said of his club's new defenseman, obtained only Thursday night from the California Seals for Tom Webster, who led the club in scoring as a rookie last season.

"He played defense, played the point on power plays and killed penalties. Hell, you saw what a difference he made," Barkley said.

"I liked it out there in California," said Stackhouse, who sported a cut requiring a half-dozen stitches after being smacked in the mouth with someone else's stick behind the Detroit net, "but I think I'll like it here, too.

"I was nervous as hell out there at the start,," he said, later adding of his three-point debut, "I didn't do much. The two assists I got the other guys did the work on."

Stackhouse's second goal of the season broke a 1-1 first period tie at 2:36 of the second period.

Darryl Sittle and Red Berenson then traded goals to close out the scoring in the game, which was stopped four times to give the fog a chance to clear. Norm Ullman and Tim Ecclestone traded first-period goals to force the tie which Stackhouse broke.

Frank Mahovlich got a "hat trick" for the Canadiens while Marc Tardiff added two goals in Montreal's win.

San Rafael Ups Soccer Lead With 2-0 Win

San Rafael High School defeated visiting San Marin, 2-0 yesterday to move three points up on runnerup Drake in Marin County Athletic League soccer standings.

The second-place Pirates lost, 2-0 to host Redwood, while Terra Linda stopped Marin Catholic 1-0 on the Winner's field.

Adolpho Flores had both San Rafael goals. Redwood's John Ballard and Tom Sleisinger eached tallied to upset Drake. Pete Wardenburg was credited with Terra Linda's lone goal.

Marin Tars Lose Soccer Match

The College of Marin Tar soccermen bowed, 3-1 yesterday to visiting Skyline College of San Bruno.

Ahmed Serag-Eldin scored the Tar's lone goal in the fourth period, but it was not enough to offset the invaders' three first-half tallies.

The Tars visit De Anza College in Sunnyvale Tuesday at 3:15 p.m.

KAISER GOLF

Billy Casper In Command

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) —Billy Casper has his game back in hand, which has to be bad news for those chasing him today in the third round of the $150,000 Kaiser International Open.

Casper, one of golf's top players over the last 10 years, has been caught in an unexplainable slump this year and he came to the Kaiser determined to shake it. He also brought along a new set of irons, and that apparently has turned things around.

Friday, Casper fired a seven under par 65 and with his opening round 67, stood at 12 under par 132 for 36 holes. He also went into today's third round three strokes ahead of Tommy Aaron, who admits he's playing his best golf of the year but it might be just so much wasted effort.

Aaron had an opening round 66 and added a 69 in the second for a 138 score, nine under par. He led Tom Watson, the Stanford University grad who received his PGA playing card a week ago today, by a stroke. Watson has shot two 68s and he in turn is another stroke ahead of George Johnson, Dick Lotz, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mike Hill.

Wilf Homenuik and Fred Marti are at 138 and Lee Trevino, who hopes to finish in the first three here so that he can overhaul Jack Nicklaus for the money-winning lead, tops a group of nine tied at 139, five under par and seven strokes behind Casper.

In that group of nine is former Marinite Ron Cerrudo who fired a 69 yesterday to go with his 70 opener. Buddy Sullivan, pro at Marin Country Club in Novato, shot a 72 for a 146 and missed the cut by two strokes, so will be watching the final two days of the tourney from the sidelines.

Casper had eight birds and one bogey in the second round and for two rounds he has missed just two greens. He attributes his fine play to the new irons, which are stiffer than the ones he used previously this year while being shut out.

The last tourney title Casper won was the AVCO Classic 14 months ago and when he came to Napa early in the week he said he felt he might finally break the slump.

"I shot a couple of practice rounds with the new irons," said Casper, "and I liked them very much. All of a sudden I was playing well again. After the first two rounds here I feel very confident."

"I'm playing my best golf of the year," said Aaron, "but with Casper playing the way he is, he is going to be a very tough man to catch."

"He's (Casper) really shooting it up," said Trevino. "I don't see how anyone is going to catch him. When he gets out in front the way he is now he is the toughest guy in the world to beat."

Casper's improved iron play has made putting a whole lot easier.

"I've been in position for a bird on almost every hole," said Casper. "I can't explain the sudden turn around. It just has to be the new irons."

Casper's longest putt for a bird was a 20-footer on the par-four eighth. He had a 15-footer on the sixth and all the other putts were off 10 feet or less.

The cut for the final two rounds of Kaiser was made at even par 144 and exactly 70 players survived. Among those who didn't were defending champion Ken Still, Kermit Zarley, winner of the first Kaiser in 1968, and Bobby Lunn.

Willie McCovey To Enter Hospital For Surgery

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Willie McCovey, San Francisco Giants first baseman, will enter Stanford Medical Center at Palo Alto Sunday to undergo surgery to correct a cartilage condition of his left knee, the team announced Friday.

The surgery will be performed by Dr. Frederick Behling Monday. It was expected that McCovey will remain in the hospital about a week.

A cartilage in McCovey's left knee will be removed. The condition has incapacitated McCovey for protracted periods during the past season and handicapped him throughout the year.

McCovey had previously decided to have the surgery after the end of the season.

A Letter From Father To Son

Amos Alonzo Stagg lived more than 100 years by guilding principles outlined in a letter to his son. On Stagg's 100th birthday in 1962 this column printed the letter. There were a number of requests for reprints.

Now, almost 10 years later, several new reprint requests have been received. Maybe the somewhat confused and troublesome problems of a so-called generation gap prompted the new requests. Whatever the reason, here is the letter the great football coach wrote to his son long ago:

To My Son, Amos Alonzo Stagg Jr.

YOU ARE only a little fellow now —a trifle over 14 months old; but I have loved you so dearly since you came that it has been on my mind to write you a letter in the event of my being taken away at any time before I have had a chance to tell you many things which you need to know.

Your father wants his Boy first of all to love, protect, and care for his Mother, giving to her the same kind of measure of love and devotion which she has given to you.

SECOND, your father wants his Boy to be sincere, honest and upright. Be your true self always. Hate dishonesty and trickery no matter how big and how great the thing desired may be.

Third, your father wants you to have a proper independence of thought. Think matters out for yourself always when it relates to your own conduct and act honestly afterwards.

Fourth, your father wants you to be an American in democracy. Treat everybody with courtesy and as your equal until he proves his unworthiness to be so treated. The man and the soul are what count — not wealth, not family, not appearance.

FIFTH, YOUR father wants you to abhor evil. No curiosity, no imagination, no conversation, no story, no reading which suggests impurity of life is worthy of your thought or attention and I beg you never to yield for an instant but turn your thought to something good and helpful.

Sixth, train yourself to be master of yourself, of your thought and imagination and temper and passion and appetite and of your body. Hold all absolutely under your will. Allow no thought nor imagination, nor passion, nor appetite to injure your mind or body. Your father has never used intoxicating liquors, nor tobacco, nor profane language. He wants his Boy to be like him in this regard.

SEVENTH, YOUR father wants his Boy enthusiastic and earnest in all of his interests, his sports, his studies, his work; and he wants him always to keep an active, actual participation in each so long as he lives. It is my judgment that one's life is most healthy and most successful when lived out on such a basis.

Eighth, your father wants his son to love God as He is revealed to him; which after all will be the revelation of all that I have said and left unsaid of good to you, my precious Boy.

Affectionately,
Your Father.

Raiders Facing Old Nemesis in Bengals

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders will face an old nemisis—the Cincinnati Bengals —Sunday in the Oakland Coliseum when they go after their fifth straight victory.

The Bengals, American Football Conference Central Division champions in 1970, are the only team to beat Oakland more than once in the last two seasons.

In 1969, Cincinnati stopped a 15-game Raiders winning streak with a 31-17 victory at Cincinnati. Last year, Cincinnati stunned Oakland in the season opener, 31-21, at its new Riverfront stadium.

In the series that started in 1969, Oakland holds only a 3-2 edge over the Bengals.

But the Raiders, rolling along with a 4-1 record and holding first place, along with Kansas City, in the American Football Conference Western Division, are at least two touchdown favorites in the contest.

Coach Paul Brown's Bengal's, still being led by rookie quarterback Ken Anderson, who is filling in for the injured Virgil Carter, won their opener 37-14 over Philadelphia, but have since lost four straight narrow decisions to Pittsburgh, Green Bay, Miami and Cleveland.

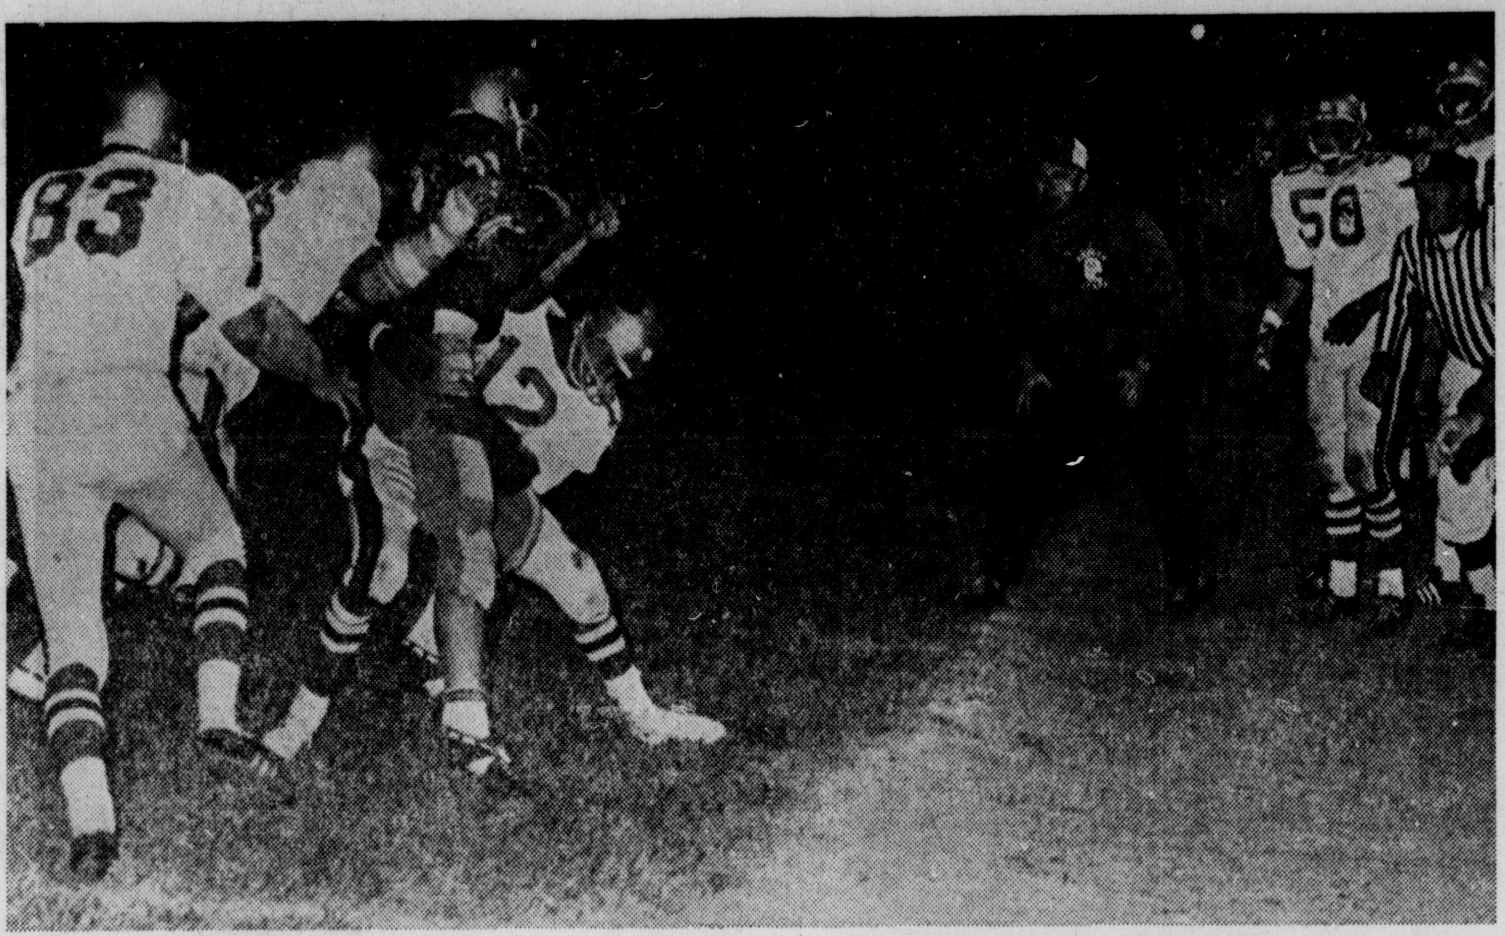
In last week's game against the Browns, Cincinnati rolled up 339 yards total offense and limited Cleveland to 64 yards rushing, but lost 27-24 in the final seconds.

Anderson has completed 33 of 62 passes for 400 yards and two touchdowns in three games. But the Raiders' principal job will be to contain Bengal running back Essex Johnson, who has the highest average among AFC players with 7.7 yards per attempt.

The Raiders boast a powerful balanced offensive attack and are ranked as the top offensive team in the AFC, collecting 1,688 yards in five games.

Oakland running back Marv Hubbard is ranked No. 2 in rushing in the AFC with 371 yards. Quarterback Daryle Lamonica has plenty of top receivers, including Fred Biletnikoff, who became Oakland's career reception leader last week when he caught eight passes to run his total to 262.

Raider wide receiver Rod Sherman, who sprained his ankle in last week's 34-10 triumph over Philadelphia, may not play Sunday. He will be replaced by Eldridge Dickey.



TENSE MOMENT — Terra Linda High School halfback Sean Casey was about to be pushed out of bounds by Redwood's Matt Gondak (83) and Bob Brown (12) last night at San Rafael High. Redwood coaches Phil Roark (with hat) and Jess Payan (grimacing) anxiously watched the Giant pair stop Casey.

49ers Hobble Into St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (UPI) —A battered and bruised San Francisco 49er team makes its first regular season visit to St. Louis since 1962 Sunday to play the St. Louis Cardinals.

It will also be the first league meeting between the two teams since 1968, a game which the 49ers won, 35-17.

The 49ers, defending Western Division champions, are trailing the Los Angeles Rams (3-1-1) with a 3-2 record for the season. Last week San Francisco scored its first shutout in a decade by blanking Chicago, 13-0, but came out of the tough battle hobbled and limping.

The injury list was enough to make 49er coach Dick Nolan call for reinforcements. All-pro wide receiver Gene Washington bruised his thigh and knee, fullback Ken Willard hurt his leg, tight end Ted Kwalick banged his thigh, middle linebacker Ed Beard pulled a hamstring and strong safety Mel Phillips twisted his ankle.

But with the exception of Beard, all of the injured players probably will be ready to play against the Cardinals.

"Kwalick, Willard and Phillips are probables," Nolan said, "and Washington and Taylor are possibles. I still don't know about Beard."

Free safety Roosevelt Taylor did not play against the Bears because of a pinched nerve in his neck. If Taylor can't make it against St. Louis, he will be replaced by Johnny Fuller.

After a 20-0 loss to Washington last week, the Cardinals (23) face an uphill battle in the NFC's eastern division.

St. Louis also has a key injury in its defensive backfield just when they meet the No. 1 offense in the NFC —the 49ers are averaging 365.4 yards per game. All-pro free safety Larry Wilson is out with a hip injury and is not expected to play. He will be replaced by rookie Larry Willingham.

On offense, the Cardinals will choose between quarterbacks Pete Beathard, who completed 12 of 22 passes for 142 yards but had three picked off against the Redskins, and Jim Hart, who had three for eight for 38 yards and one interception last week.

NFL ROUNDUP

Buffalo Visits San Diego Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Maybe the sight of his old collegiate glory days will rekindle a flame in Dennis Shaw.

That's what the Buffalo Bills are hoping tonight as they journey to San Diego to meet the Chargers in a National Football League contest.

Shaw, rookie of the year in the American Football Conference last season, has been something less than sensational so far this season, having thrown for only five touchdowns while having 11 passes intercepted in five games.

That hasn't figured out to a very happy beginning for the Bills, who have lost all five of their games and are buried in the cellar of the AFC's Eastern Division.

Shaw, however, has the potential to become one of the fine quarterbacks in the league and perhaps the friendly confines of San Diego Stadium will get him out of his slump. Shaw starred for three seasons at San Diego State and played many games in San Diego Stadium as a collegian.

Neither the Bills nor the Chargers are doing as well as expected. The Chargers have lost four of their five games and have been equally disappointed with the play of quarterback John Hadl, whose statistics are similar to Shaw's. Hadl also has been intercepted five times and has tossed for only five touchdowns.

Still, there is hope in San Diego that the Chargers will right themselves before very long. The oddsmakers think it will be tonight and have installed San Diego an 11-point choice.

Baltimore is at Minnesota in Monday night's nationally-televised game.

The Washington-Kansas City game shapes up as Sunday's best encounter. The Redskins are the NFL's only undefeated team while the Chiefs have won four of five games..

Paper Says Blue Is Award Winner

DETROIT (UPI) —The Detroit Free-Press reported Friday that Vida Blue of the Oakland Athletics has won the Cy Young award as the American League's pitcher of the year in voting by 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Jack Lang, secretary of the BBWAA, said that the story "is inaccurate" and issued a statement criticizing the Free Press for publishing the story in advance of its Oct. 27 release date.

first touchdown, climaxing a 42-yard drive with a 15-yard pass to John Buckley.

Lucas explained, "After we went ahead, they panicked and began going to the air too much. We double covered each of their receivers, and they played right into our hands."

A major penalty against the Giants on a punt return set up the next Terra Linda score, as the Trojans ran six plays on the ground for a touchdown. Donohoe himself carried on a sneak for the clinching one-yard touchdown with 5:54 left in the game.

Madden then picked off Brown's attempt at throwing the ball away under pressure, and pounded all the way into the end zone to reach the final 23-6 tally.

Lucas, going after his sixth straight MCAL title, was pleased with the results of left-end sweeps, saying that his guards were getting out and turning in the linebacker.

The MCAL standings, becoming more and more complex, hinged on the outcome of the Drake-Novato contest today. Redwood, Terra Linda, and San Rafael each have one loss in league play, and would be joined by Novato should Drake win an upset.

The big game next week will be San Rafael versus the Trojans, Friday night, a contest that will most likely eliminate the loser from MCAL title contention.

Redwood gets no respite from the passing attack, going against Hoza Wright and the San Marin Mustangs.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — The Milwaukee Brewers and Baltimore Orioles engaged in a four-player swap Friday in which the Brewers got back one of the players they picked in the 1968 expansion draft.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (UPI) — If the rain continues in Rockingham today it will mean some pretty exciting initial laps for Sunday's $106,000 American 500 stock car race.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Safety Of The Contract Is The Important Consideration

In the kind of tournament now going on in New Orleans the safety of the contract is the important consideration, just as it is in rubber bridge. By tomorrow afternoon, the American Contract Bridge League will be in position to name the team that will represent the United States in the Bridge Olympics next June. The contest between a team led by Los Angeles star Lew Mathe and the Dallas Aces, winners of the world championship in 1970 and 1971, is likely to be very close, largely because the nine players on the two teams would automatically choose the right play in such a hand as today's.

FINESSE

Even in the average expert game, declarer would take the finesse with the queen of hearts at the first trick. "After all," says the average expert, "the heart finesse may work. If not, the diamond finesse may work. If not, the diamond finesse may work. If not, the opponents may be able to take only three heart tricks. If everything goes sour, I still won't cry. I've been beaten before."

The absolutely top-drawer expert takes no such risk. He knows that East must have a least one honor in hearts because West would almost surely lead an honor if his hearts were headed by K-J-10. If East has any heart honor, the hand is safe if declarer takes the ace of hearts at the first trick.

LOSES FINESSE

The great expert leads the eight of diamonds for a finesse at the second trick, losing to the king. As the cards lie, the hearts are blocked, and South easily regains the lead to take four diamonds, two spades, two clubs and one heart.

South would be safe even if East had the singleton or doubleton ten or jack of hearts. In that case, West would take the king of diamonds and two hearts, but then South's nine of hearts would serve as an additional stopper in the suit.

The average expert would, of course, go down by taking the finesse at the first trick. East would win with the king of hearts and would return a heart to dummy's ace. When West got in with the king of diamonds, he would defeat the contract with the rest of hearts.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 6 4 2
♥ - J 10 7 6 4
♦ - K 6
♣ - 10 8 5.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

You have only four points in high cards and one point for the doubleton but should count an extra point for length in partner's bid suit. The hand is therefore just barely worth a response.

Marijuana Is Reclassified

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The state senate without debate passed Thursday 28-0 a bill reclassifying marijuana from a narcotic to a restricted dangerous drug. Penalties for possession remain the same.

Sen. Gordon Cologne, floor manager for the bill, told colleagues that "it's obvious marijuana is not a narcotic. This bill simply puts marijuana where it belongs."

Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed a nearly identical bill last year.

Don't Dismiss New Water Supply Ideas

HAROLD E. GREGG, who is both president and executive director of the Marin Conservation League, has advanced some interesting thoughts in connection with his and the league's opposition to Measure B on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Measure B is the proposition to authorize Marin Municipal Water District to contract with the Sonoma County Water Agency to build an aqueduct to bring Russian River water to Marin to meet anticipated future needs.

Gregg observes that flooding is a frequent, recurring rainy season problem in Marin. We spend considerable to get rid of excess water which we think we don't want.

You've got to agree with Gregg that there is an inconsistency when we prepare to spend vast sums going into the next county to tap an outside source of water to augment our own sources.

At the same time, we run our sewage waste through treatment plants and dump the treated effluent into the bay or ocean to get rid of it.

We wastefully use high quality drinking water to flush our toilets, wash our cars, and water our gardens. Why should we go to great expense to import high quality drinking water when we already have more than enough to drink?

We should be facing up to the task of figuring out how to use storm water and treated water from sewage plants for such things as washing cars, flusing toilets and watering gardens.

Gregg's logic is forcefully clear.

NEVERTHELESS, he makes a grave error when he uses that logic to oppose ballot Measure B.

How does Gregg propose to salvage flood waters?

His simplistic solution is to trap it in sumps and store it in tanks atop hills and knolls throughout the county — all at a cost less than the cost of the proposed aqueduct from Sonoma.

How does he propose to get this low-quality non-potable water, along with the output of treated alluent from our weage plants, distributed throughout the county without contaminating our high-quality drinking water?

Again Gregg has an overly simple solution. He would simply build a second, parallel distribution pipeline system which would have to include another plumbing system in every single dwelling. This, he says, unrealistically, can all be done, too, for less than the cost of the aqueduct from Sonoma.

Actually, it would be reasonable to expect that the engineering design costs, and the experimenting necessary to assure success of such a system, would exceed the costs of the Sonoma project. The costs of building the Gregg system would thereafter be even greater.

THERE IS indication that with continued growth in population and per capita water usage, coupled with a series of dry years, Marin could begin to face critical water shortages within five years. If the Sonoma aqueduct project is authorized now, it could be ready in about five years and Marin would be reasonably sure of avoiding a water crisis.

Harold Gregg, again unrealistically, believes that his system could be brought into being in no greater time. It would be more reasonable to expect that the engineering design would take five years for something so revolutionary.

Does this mean that the proposals of Harold Gregg should be simply dismissed as overly visionary?

No. The Gregg vision has too great a potential. It deserves a try.

The Marin Municipal Water District and the county board of supervisors would do well to memorialize both state and federal legislatures to authorize and finance studies aimed at solving the engineering problems which must be met before the Gregg proposal could succeed. We would hope that our state legislature would memorialize Congress along the same lines.

After all, the problem of meeting increased water needs in densely populated areas is nationwide. A solution to the problem would be of national value.

If we are lucky, perhaps the Gregg system can be ready to work by the time we have outgrown the Sonoma aqueduct.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the Audubon Canyon Ranch for its plan to purchase and preserve 42 acres of Tomales Bay tidelands.

BOUQUET to the Marin Community College District board for clearing the air toward passage of Measure A — Its $16,750,000 bond issue — by assuring Marinites that it is not a matter of "pass this bond issue or be socked with a heavy tax." The issue now should pass on its merits.

BOUQUET to Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court for the sensible sentence he imposed on a man for driving while under influence of narcotics: 10 days' work for the county parks and recreation department.

BRICKBATS to the management of Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium for (1) charging 50 cents for parking, then having such poor parking arrangements that cars are backed up unnecessarily; (2) failing to have all ticket windows operating — and signs indicating where they are — and thus causing long waiting lines for tickets, and (3) not instructing ushers so that they know where to locate seat numbers.

A small BOUQUET to visiting Judge Richard E. Arnason for forbidding applause in his courtroom — something he should have done long ago.

More Attendance At Night Meetings Urged

The Marin Alternative is very pleased that the board of supervisors agreed to give monthly night meetings a try.

We noted that on Sept. 28, the first such meeting, about 40 people attended on an evening when there was nothing particularly controversial on the agenda. This is far more than the usual number and many present were men who obviously could not make day meetings. In addition, we noted many county employees who otherwise could not participate.

Marin Alternative feels that these monthly night meetings are a step toward more responsive government. We urge many more Marinites to attend them the last Tuesday of each month and become more involved in government — which belongs to all of us.

More Study Needed Of Renaissance Plan

We are greatly opposed to the proposed Pleasure Center and Renaissance Faire on the Grady Farm and its effects on us as home owners in the same valley. We are concerned with the possible traffic problem, the sanitation problem, fire and/or emergency services in our area.

We personally feel that the Renaissance Center should hire a professional urban planning and design consultant at their expense to bring forth the effects and results of this particular activity. This plan should be presented to the home owners for their consideration or support, and this proposal should be tied in with the master plan of Lucas Valley.

We personally feel there has not been enough consideration given to the effects of the Renaissance Center on the people of this valley. We are not opposed to the Center as such, but we feel strongly that, based on the evidence so far, this fair does not belong in Lucas Valley.

Story On Ranch Surprisingly Accurate

I feel very indebted to you and your paper for the excellent article pertaining to my ranch operations which appeared in your Oct. 14 issue. Thank you so much. I also wish to compliment Mrs. Fortner for the accuracy of her journalism. Mrs. Fortner knew nothing about cattle operations and took so many notes during our interview I couldn't see how she would decipher correctly, but she did and so well. It was a pleasure to make her acquaintance.

ART BUCHWALD

Great Honor To Be Nominated; But Then Comes Investigation

WASHINGTON — The worst thing that can happen to any public official in this country is to be mentioned for a top appointment in the government, and not get it.

It isn't just the rejection of the job that is hard to swallow — it is that while he is under consideration the candidate is being subjected to exhaustive investigation by everyone from the FBI to the Harvard Law Review, and his reputation can be destroyed forever.

The recent Supreme Court nomination circus that President Nixon put on is a perfect example of how dangerous it is to be mentioned for one of the highest positions in the land.

TAKE THE CASE of Judge Chilblain Clamchowder. Judge Clamchowder, who had been appointed to the Fifth Circuit Traffic Court for the work he had done in carrying Tornado County for President Nixon in 1968, found himself listed as one of the "leading" candidates for a Supreme Court seat.

Judge Clamchowder told me in his chambers, "I knew they had just thrown in my name as a smokescreen and at first I was flattered to see my name in the newspapers.

"But then the eastern establishment press started coming down here and asking about me, and my life has become pure hell.

"They talked to my second wife who said I had not only cheated on her, but also on my bar exam. Even if it's true, it's something you don't like to read about in the newspapers."

JUDGE CLAMCHOWDER continued: "Then some Democratic senators found out I hadn't paid my income tax for the past five years and they tried to make a big deal of it just to embarass the Nixon administration. They made it sound as if I was the first Supreme Court justice nominee who had ever cheated on his taxes.

"To make matters worse, the FBI discovered that I was a major stockholder in the firm that prints all the traffic tickets for Tornado County. So I had to get rid of the stock at a great financial sacrifice.

"Then Jack Anderson found out about a Christmas party I had last year in my chambers for the meter maids, and while only two of them took off their clothes, he made it sound like an orgy. So now my third wife is suing me for divorce, and it's gonna be damn expensive, particularly since I don't have an interest in the printing firm any more.

"THE AMERICAN CIVIL Liberties then dug up the fact that I had donated $1,000 to buy dynamite to blow up all the school buses in Tornado County, and that made the newspaper headlines. Now I believe this was a personal matter and had nothing to do with whether a person would make a good Supreme Court justice or not.

"Finally, some smart-aleck law professor discovered that since I've been ruling on traffic offenses I have been reversed by higher courts 768 times.

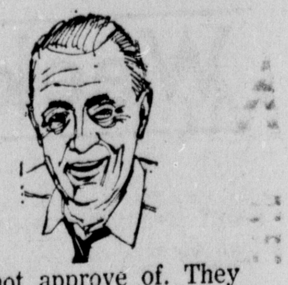
"He also claimed I had fixed the tickets of 45 members of my country club. It turns out I had only fixed 40 tickets since I've been on the traffic court, but the media doesn't seem to be concerned with accuracy as long as it's a good story.

"The American Bar Association rated me as 'less mediocre' and this certainly hasn't helped me keep any decorum in the courtroom."

"From what I can tell, Judge," I said, "you might have done better by not being mentioned as a possible Supreme Court justice."

"Frankly," he replied, "if it wasn't for the honor, I would just as soon forget it."

MARQUIS CHILDS



Bankrupt United Nations Needs Complete Overhaul To Survive

UNITED NATIONS — On the 38th floor of the great glass hive on the East River here, there is only the quiet stir of important people going about the business of running a world organization that has proliferated in many agencies around the globe. The atmosphere is hushed, serene, properly air-conditioned, with the hazy view out across Queens and Long Island hardly more than a relief map of some remote wasteland.

The impression of serenity is false. It may be overly dramatic to say that the United Nations is threatened with dissolution, but, short of a rescue mission not now in sight, the whole operation will be drastically curtailed.

FOR THE U.N. is bankrupt. As the top financial officers say, if this were a commercial enterprise they would probably be in jail for having dipped into trust funds and other special accounts to meet the monthly payroll and other minimum operating costs. Listing the debts owed by various nations, many of them regarded as uncollectable, the retiring secretary general, the gentle Burmese U Thant concluded:

"In short, 10 years of deficit and drift have resulted in the depletion of our cash resources to the extent that in meeting our most basic obligations we are literally living from hand to mouth. We have, in fact, reached the stage where our ability even to continue current activities — still less to undertake new or expanded-program initiatives — must be seriously questioned."

By the end of the year regular budget assessments will be in excess of $65 million in arrears, of which more than half is uncollectable. For past and present peace-keeping operations $50 million is unpaid. To meet the monthly payroll at the end of September $15 million had to be scrounged out of trust funds and special accounts.

One of the biggest debtors is the Soviet Union with its three votes. The Soviets have consistently refused to pay for activities they do not approve of. They owe close to $120 million, including assessments for the regular budget and $59,223,085 for the peace-keeping operation in the Congo.

France is another substantial debtor, owing more than $17 million for the Congo operation and nearly $5 million for the regular budget for 1971.

MEMBERSHIP IN the U.N. has grown to proportions the founders could never have dreamed of when they met in San Francisco 26 years ago. The one-nation, one-vote formula in the general assembly is unreal and downright absurd.

With the admission this week of Abu Dhabi, another of the oil-rich Persian Gulf states that with Qatar, Bahrein and Oman have recently become members of the club, the total will be 132. Many are minuscule, so little known as to be hardly more than dots on the map.

What is Lesotho? Maldive Islands? Gambia is a river bank with crocodiles. What about Zambia? Bhutan is a principality in the high Himalayas nestling close to India. Can anyone locate Rwanda?

In the first flush of postwar idealism — it must never happen again — the founders at San Francisco could hardly have foreseen the explosion of nationalism that has brought many of these entities into being. The big powers have tended increasingly to use the U.N. for their own ends. With the veto built into the security council, they can block any move they do not want.

THE DIRE AND OBVIOUS need is for a complete overhaul of the organization. That would take a desire, a will, a belief in the future of the United Nation. Evidence of that belief is hard to find.

So many of the specialized agencies have done splendid work. The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund has been a blessing to millions. A world without the U.N. is unthinkable. Unfortunately, almost no one is thinking about the unthinkable.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

U.S. And Russia Seek To Curb Dangerous Game

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In early June, 1971, the Soviet cruiser Dzerzhinsky transited the Turkish straits from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean with Soviet Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko a guest aboard.

Some special details of the trip are supplied by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia.

The newspaper declared that as the Dzerzhinsky entered the Bosporus an American reconnaissance boat moved alongside and "began to maneuver in dangerous proximity."

The crew of the American vessel, according to Izvestia, began taking still and motion pictures of the cruiser, and the Russian sailors responded by reflecting sunbeams in the Americans' eyes.

SUCH AN EVENT might be worth a smile as a somewhat childish pursuit if it were not for the fact that it is part of a far more dangerous game played by the seagoing forces of the two superpowers around the world, from the Mediterranean to the Bering Sea.

It includes Soviet and American submarines maneuvering deep under the ice of the Arctic and warplanes of the two "escorting" each other at supersonic speeds only 20 feet apart.

In April, 1968, the United States suggested to the Soviet Union that such maneuvers easily could lead to a shooting incident which the leaders of neither nation intended and that a conference on the subject should be arranged.

The Russians began showing some interest last November and early in October the talks finally began in in Moscow.

ADM. ARTHUR W. Radford, retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has written that the functions of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, for example, are both military and diplomatic.

The stance adopted by the fleet, he says, and its geographic location at any given moment goes far toward informing a potential opponent of U.S. intentions and determination and thus permits the possible opponent to determine his own attitude.

In this sense, then, reconnasiance is an importantand recognized part of the game, dangerous though it may be.

IT IS NOTEWORTHY that the Moscow conference is intended in no way either to limit reconnaissance or freedom of maneuver.

But it could reduce the dangers of confrontation somewhat at least by defining the heights at which planes must fly over surface vessels or the distance at which other vessels must remain from a carrier taking on airplanes. There are other situations which could be controlled by rules of conduct.

Also noteworthy in the present talks is that they come amid apparently hopeful signs of progress in U.S.-Soviet talks on strategic arms limitations, of steps to improve hot-line communications between Moscow and Washington, and of President Nixon's announced plans to visit Moscow.

From these can come the ultimate test of Nixon's declared policy of negotiation rather than confrontation and for the United States and its allies an indication of just how much business they can do with Leonid Brezhnev and Co. in the decade of the '70s.

Tax Bill Shows Need To Vote Yes On 'A'

This past week, we received our 1971-72 property tax bill. After the initial shock wore off, I studied the breakdown, showing the distribution of the amounts by the various taxing agencies. (This breakdown is a big improvement on the bills). It showed that the Marin Community College District took only $62 of our total tax bill.

My two sons have attended College of Marin. No where that I know of could they have received the education they received there for $62 a year. And, I also take into consideration the added expense for books, fees, etc.

I urge everyone to vote on Nov. 2nd, and vote YES on Proposition "A". With the extreme crowding at the state colleges and universities, it is absolutely necessary that College of Marin expand its facilities. It is money well spent.

Angela And Attorneys Make Mockery Of Courts

After the people of Marin County have received their tax bills for this year, isn't it beautiful to see Angela Davis led into a Marin County court giving her clenched fist salute? She and her attorneys have made a mockery of our courts and she is allowed to get away with it. Of course, at the taxpayer's expense. She is treated like some kind of celebrity and we pay for her and her arrogant actions.

Where does the fault lie? In our courts? In our Supreme Court? Or our weak politics? And all the while, we the working average citizen pay the tax tab.

A question often asked: "Is equal justice possible in courts?" Answer it this way: "Does any other country in the world give this lenience that we give in our courts?" It is a sham and a disservice to the people that have to pay for this.

New Fire Station Not Only Interest

I wish to take this opportunity to express my thanks to your newspaper for presenting the feature on behalf of the candidates for election to the Novato Fire Protection District.

It is through articles such as this that the electorate can "meet" the candidates and learn their views. In that article, the impressionmay have been indicated that my only interest was in replacing the headquarters station. This is not entirely correct., also wish to continue in the upgrading of the fire service in Novato. The district must keep abreast of the state of the art as it pertains to equipment, techniques, and manpower to provide the best possible service. I still feel that sometime in the nextfew years that adequate facilities must be provided so that the staff can properly function . . .

Renaissance Center Called Amusement Park

It seems to me that there are many as yet unanswered questions regarding the proposed establishment of the Renaissance Center and Faire in Lucas Valley.

What appears certain at this time is that the result will be increased inconvenience to the residents of the area. The number of cars going to and from the center, the increase in noise, increase in pollution both noise and from car emmissions, increase need for fire protection, seems to add up to a total of disadvantages to the present residents who live in an area which, according to the master plan, was to be a residential area.

The people that will not agree are those that do not live in the area, those who will profit from this purported non-profit arganization who at the moment give vague answers to simple questions. The residents of Marin have a fine county, we do not need extra non-taxpaying developments that will entertain not edify, amuse not contribute, disturb not calm, demand and need services which others will have to pay for. Let's keep the delightful area as was planned a fine residential area, not a second amusement park disguised as a non-profit cultural amenity.

Property Given Away After Meeting 'Closed'

After the close of the agendized portion of the San Anselmo City Council meeting Oct. 12, the council continued to bring up business matters. I counted at least nine items that came up for discussion and action after the "close" of the meeting. Two sofas at the Robson park were declared suplus and Mr. Leitzell said he had a "friend who would haul them away at no charge to the city."

This park is costing San Anselmo taxpayers this year alone in excess of $50,000 to maintain, or about $15 per each San Anselmo property owner. The two sofas are in perfect condition, sturdily constructed and covered for use by the public; they are currently the only furniture in the house except for the folding variety.

No doubt many of us might have a "friend" who would "haul them away." I would like disclosure as to who the beneficiary is. Are not all citizens to be given an equal right to bid on genuine surplus articles? Could not this furniture be used by another public agency—a teen center perhaps?

If Mr. Leitzell is giving city property away (an illegal gift of public property, perhaps?) would he like to replace two sofas at his personal expense or does he expect the S.A. property owner to do this? San Anselmo still has the second highest tax rate of 11 Marin cities!

Appalled At Decision Of Zoning Official

It's a sad day for the residents of Marin County as well as responsible, tax paying, voters everywhere in that the will of a few entrepreneurs has been imposed upon the vast majority of responsible citizens.

I was appalled and disgusted on this day, Oct. 18, by the decision of the deputy zoning administrator to grant a use permit for the Renaissance Faire and Center to be held in Lucas Valley. I have witnessed first-hand how a county official reacts to a "special interest group" by being totally unresponsive to the majority of concerned citizens.

My disgust and anger is registered not only as a resident of Lucas Valley, who has profound personal as well as financial interest in this valley, but more importantly as a citizen of this country - in that the will of a few individuals can impose their horrendous "dream" on the vast majority of responsible tax-paying residents of Marin County, and that a so-called county government official ignores the wishes of the majority.

Inescapable facts, whether they were pertaining to fire hazards, sanitation, safety and welfare of the residents, and monumental traffic problems, were totally beyond the miniscule gray matter of this public official. They were presented, heard, and ignored . . .

Today, it's more critical than ever that the government be more responsive to the majority of responsible citizens, no matter which county we may live in. Public officials, whether they are elected or appointed are only in office to serve their constituents and/or community by being forthright, honest, possessing some wisdeom and common sense . . . or am I asking too much?

Should Not Move Mill Valley Festival

Reference is made to your Oct. 14 article concerning replacement of the future Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival to Boyle Park.

I find this proposed site change very disturbing and feel that such action on the part of the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department and other so-called "concerned citizens" unnecessary and ridiculous.

Let me point out that the past three festivals have been the only ones in the 15-year history of the event which have been truly successful from the standpoint of artist and visitor participation. This was made possible by excessive advertising and publicizing of the prevously mediocre affair to get it up to top level. . . At last, the exhibiting artists were afforded the courtesy of a good, art-oriented crowd. Festival organizers have gone out of their way to provide good entertainment, multiple food booths, etc. to make a pleasant event for everyone.

Let me also point out that are no other similar art festivals left in the county, what with the dying of the once great Sausalito Art Festival and the change of the once pleasant Marin Art and Garden Fair, which drew hoards of art-oriented visitors to the fledgling, rocky, dusty Marin County Fair which drew hoards of non-buying, non-art-oriented lookers. Mill Valley's very pleasant fall festival has such potential, and with proper guidance, could well become one of the finest art festivals in the state.

To shuttle it back to Boyle Park, which is highly inadequate, would set the show back 10 years. If these ecology-minded folks are so concerned about their "battered park," why don't they do something about the garbage and debris thrown in the creek and the old bicycles and doors and other such nameless junk strewn about; and the deplorable restrooms which are not only malfunctioning, but filthy and unsanitary?

I would like to see this festival site preserved for future festivals, and would like to see all those people who have particpated in and attended this event in the last three years to stand up and support it.

Miller-Unruh Bill Little Understood

There are several aspects of the Miller-Unruh Reading Program that your article of Oct. 14 failed to cover. While a few of reading specialists have normally progressing children, most of the children in the program are the ones who have some undefined perceptual, cognitive or emotional problem that prevents them from reading at a normal grade-level rate. To compare them to children without these problems is like comparing a physiclly handicapped person to a baseball player. To expect them to progress similarly is not realistic.

If you look over the scores which are close to normal, it seems that these children who would have in all probability become remedial readers, have attained a sufficiency even though normal children have attained more. This, I believe, is due to a number of factors one of which is the utilization of the reading specialist: a person who can give his whole energy, insight, and training to reading without distractions. For a child who finds reading difficult, a score of seven, eight, or nine months in a ten-month school year is gratifying and indicates the worth of the Miller-Unruh Program.

To say a school without a reading specialist did better than one with is ignoring the problem. Of course they made better scores because there may not have been a reading problem to start with!

The whole nature of the Miller-Unruh Bill is not fully understood by the public or within the profession. The M-U Bill was never meant for remedial reading but rather to prevent remedial cases from developing. The state has separate funding for remedial cases. It has been proven over an extended period that Miller-Unruh teachers do best in preventing remedial cases and worst in teaching remediation. However, most of the reading specialist's time is taken up in remediation leaving little for prevention. As long as this continues to exist, I believe that we can expect lower-than-need-be scores to exist.

'Majority Rules' Seems Outmoded

As a resident of Lucas Valley, I was so concerned about the plans to locate the Renaissance Pleasure Faire on the Grady Ranch that I took charge of seeing that the petition opposing it was well circulated in lower Lucas Valley. Contrary to what Mrs. Patterson said at the use permit hearing at the Civic Center yesterday (Oct. 18), we certainly didn't have to "intimidate" or "tell lies" to get signatures. Residents were more than willing to sign and/or circulate the petition.

The petition with 1,800 signatures was presented to the deputy zoning administrator, along with letters from the Marinwood CSD, traffic control department, county health department all opposing the issuance of a permit. Also Chief Bonfield of the Marinwood Fire Department and many others gave very valid arguments against it. No one spoke in favor of it except the Pattersons, so it was quite a shock when the permit was granted.

Since I have had very little experience in government, I was still naive enough to believe that the majority rules. The new philosophy seems to be that codes are made to be broken and master plans are drawn up to be changed. Well, far be it from me to stand in the way of good healthy progress, but anyone in the county who takes the time to drive the four miles up Lucas Valley Road to the Grady Ranch will realize that our valley will be ruined by such an enterprise.

Our appeal will be heard at the planning commission meeting on Nov. 1 at 3 p.m. If you are concerned with preserving the ecology of Marin County, here is your chance to speak out. Attend the meeting and show our county officials that we expect our codes to be followed.

Demos Would Deny Marin Representation

Many of us familiar with the bizarre creature — half bird, half salamander — drawn by some early cartoonist to lampoon the distortion of legislative district boundaries in Massachusetts under Gov. Elbridge Gerry early in the last century. Substitute Marin for Chelsea, Sonoma for Salem, Napa for Danvers, etc. and you have Mills, Moretti, and Company's modern-day version of how to cheat voters out of valid representation.

Their first state Senate reapportionment plan would have parceled Marin out among four senators with jurisdictions stretching from San Francisco to Redding. In each of the districts the voters in the Marin portion would have constituted a minority. When even Democrats retched violently over this disenfranchisement of our county's voters, the smoke-filled Senate office of the Elections and Reapportionment Committee chairman slipped out Plan 2 to its Democratic committee members only. This gem would put all of Marin into a San Francisco district except for the Tiburon Peninsula which would be deposited into another district extending 200 miles into Shasta County.

No reapportionment plan has yet emerged from the Assembly's Democratic plotters — only hollow-sounding bleats against the Republican-sponsored AB 1971. The latter would divide California into districts varying one per cent or less in population and would take into consideration growth patterns, natural boundaries, and common cultural and economic interests. Our Seventh District would lose part of Sonoma County and would become a more pronounced Marin County district. Similarly, the Republican Senate reapportionment plan would leave Marin intact with western portions of Sonoma and San Francisco counties in the Fourth Senatorial District.

Every Marinite, Republican and Democrat alike, should let the legislators know in no uncertain terms that we are inalterably opposed to any partition of Marin County that will rob us of our proper representation in Sacramento.

Dynamite Issue In Congress

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Some well-meaning people, who seem to attach greater importance to the outward observance than to the inner meaning of religion, have put members of Congress in an awkward position.

Through feverish lobbying and much petition-signing, they have created a situation in which the House of Representatives will be forced to vote — probably Nov. 8 —on a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The chief sponsor of the amendment, Rep. Chalmers P. Wiley, R-Ohio, says it is designed simply and solely to "restore voluntary prayer to public schools."

CASUAL LOOK

It sounds innocuous enough on a casual reading. It says:

"Nothing contained in this constitution hall abridge the right of persons lawfully assembled in any public building which is supported in whole or in part through the expenditure of public funds, to participate in non-denominational prayer."

But there is hidden dynamite in those innocent-sounding words. They could blow apart the basic guarantee which the founding fathers wrote into the First Amendment to insure that religion in America would remain forever free of governmental interference.

Many congressmen realize this and regard the proposed amendment as a disaster. But the lobby supporting it is so articulate and well-organized, they fear they will be hurt politically in their home districts if they can be accused (however unfairly) of "voting against prayer for school children."

COUNTER DRIVE

Baptists and other major religious bodies which have long defended religious freedom are now mounting a belated counter-campaign against the prayer amendment. They may be too late to keep it from rolling up the necessary twothirds majority in the House vnext month. If so, they will try to head it off in the Senate.

Religious leaders who oppose the prayer amendment (House Joint Resolution 191) say that it is premised on a falsehood.

"The falsehood," says Rev. W. Barry Garrett of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, "is that the Supreme Court has denied the right of voluntary prayer to school children."

Actually, all the high court did in its widely misunderstood rulings of 1962 and 1963 was to hold that a school or other governmental body may not require any child to pray or prescribe the form of prayer he is to use in a public school classroom. There never was any restriction on voluntary private prayers. Constitutional lawyers say the apparently innocent language of the proposed brief amendment could cut the heart out of the existing First Amendment, which has kept religion free and flourishing in this nation for nearly 200 years.

Consider closely some of the "harmless" phrases contained in the new proposal. It would introduce into the Constitution, for the first time in U.S. history, the concept of "lawful assembly." Who is to determine when an assembly is "lawful?" Does not this vague term open the door to future attemps by government officials to rule some religious assemblies —or other private assemblies — "unlawful?"

THE MISSING

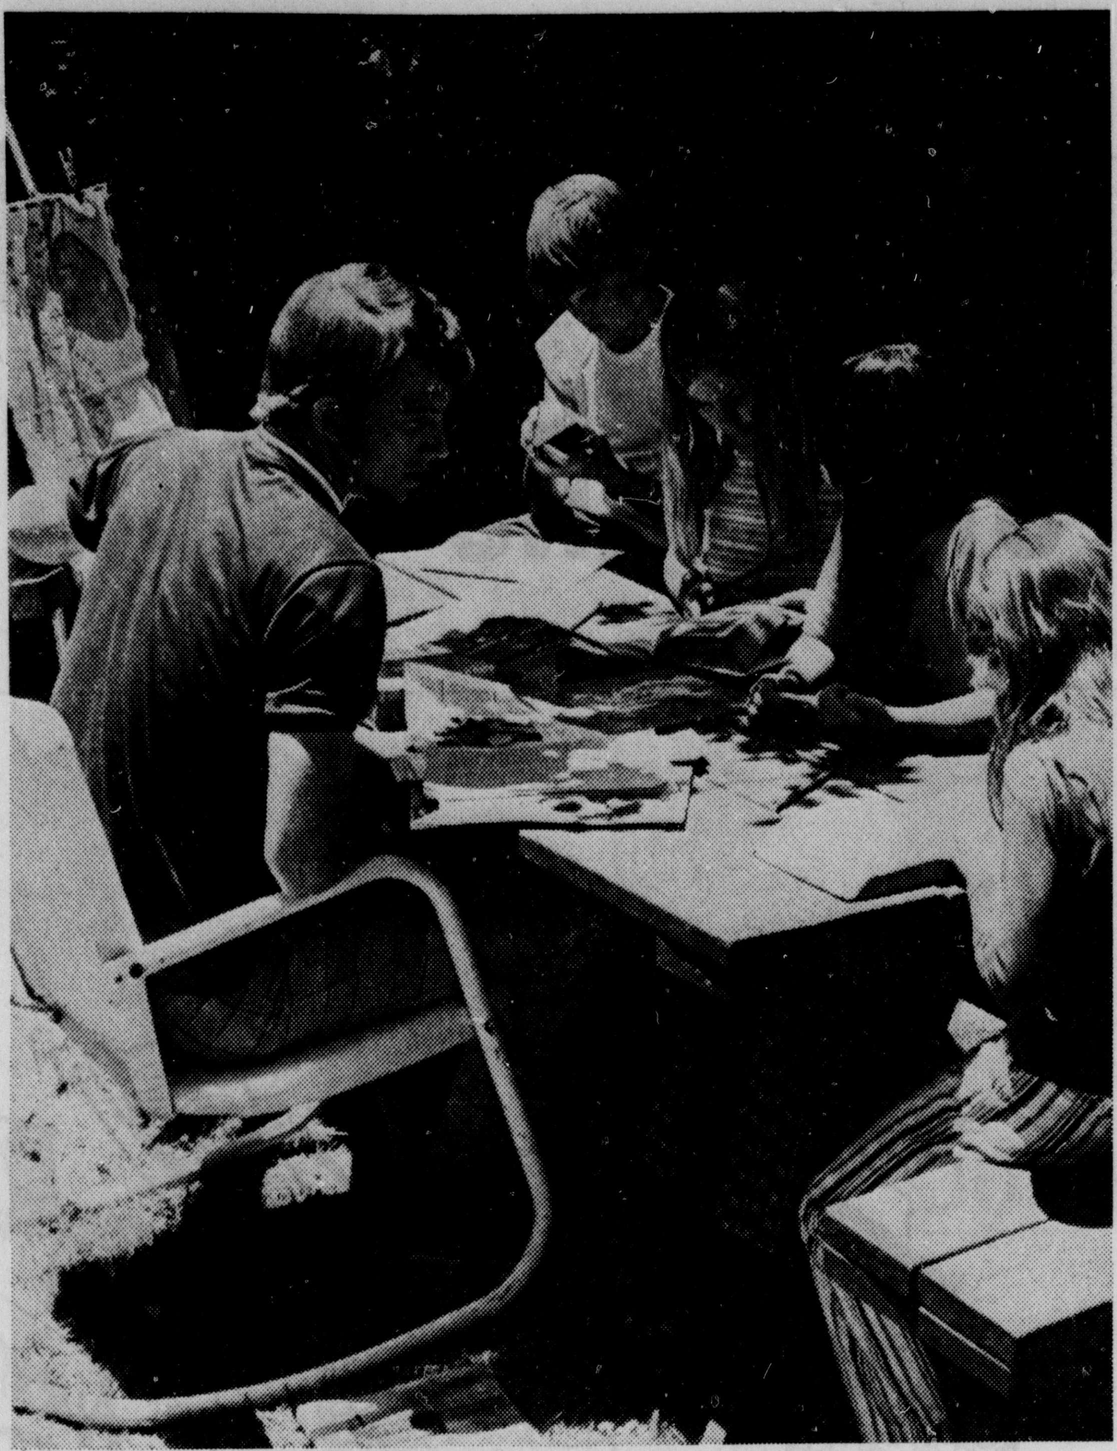
Second, and even more serious, the amendment says the prayers prayed in public buildings are to be "nondenominational." Exactly what does that mean? Experience has proved that a prayer which one man considers "nondenominational" may seem offensively sectarian to another person. Indeed, it could be argued that there can be no such thing as a truly nondenominational prayer.

The very act of praying presupposes the existence of a God who can be addressed in this fashion by His human creatures. From the viewpoint of all atheists and agnostics, as well as many members of organized religious bodies such as Buddhists, Unitarians and Jews, that basic presupposition is quite "denominational."

In any case, even if there conceivably could be such a thing as a non-denominational prayer, who is to determine what its content shall be? Obviously, the ultimate power of decision will rest with government — or some representative thereof.

Thus, it is argued, the proposed amendment would bring in through the back door the very kind of government authority over religious belief and practice which the original writers of the Constitution tried so hard —and so successfully — to forestall.

In this view, a vote against the "prayer amendment" woule be a vote for religious freedom as it has always been known, che ished and practiced in America.



A GEOGRAPHY LESSON — Gary East, a summer missionary from Missouri, points to Palestine on a map as David and Patty Spangler (facing the camera) look in their New Testaments. The other two children are not identified. Bible study was just one of the many activities of Tiburon Baptist Church's summer neighborhood vacation Bible school.

GUEST — Rev. Norman Dwight, an Evangelical Covenant missionary to Taiwan, will be guest speaker tomorrow at the 9:30 a.m. worship service at the Marin Covenant Church which meets at Miller Creek Junior High School in Marinwood.

A DATA BANK

Computer Matches Ministers To Jobs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Episcopal Church has begun using a newly developed data programming system for matching clergymen with job openings.

Rt. Rev. John H. Burg, bishop of the Diocese of Ohio and chairman of the Joint Commission on the Deployment of the Clergy, described the program as a national personnel inventory, or data bank, of regularly updated personal profiles of the ministry.

The Episcopal Church is participating with two other Protestant denominations, he said, in working with the National Council of Churches and Information Science, Inc., the firm that designed the method.

Called the Church Manpower System, it was underwritten by the Rockfeller Brothers Fund. Startup costs for the Episcopal Church participation were funded by the Episcopal Church Foundation, an independent organization of laymen, and it is being administered by the Church's Clergy Deployment Office.

"This deployment plan is designed to serve church and ministry alike by providing a speedy and effective method to help bishops and vestries to place the right person in the right assignment, thus reducing a problem that has been with the Church since its inception," Bishop Burt said.

He said that 4,000 of the approximately 10,000 Episcopal ministers in the United States has returned detailed questionnaires, and that bishops and vestries can apply immediately for assistance in the selection of candidates for openings. Dossiers are confidential, but any clergyman has access to his own file.

Jesuit University Makes Many Changes

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jesuit-run John Carroll University has made a lot of changes this year.

A rabbi was added to the theology faculty, a new policy permitted guests of the opposite sex to visit in dormitories, and beer was served in a student-run rathskeller.

Former Inmate To Speak On Reforms

Jim Penland, who has spent 12 of his 28 years in California prisons, will talk about prison reform at the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians, 240 Channing Way, San Rafael, at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

Penland, who claims the state actually spent $240 million last year to maintain its prisons rather than the budget figure of $110 million, is a member of the Committee for Prisoners' Union. He studied law in prison and is continuing his studies on the outside.

Penland will meet with members of the congregation for an informal talk-back session after the service.

STILL GOING, TOO

New Twist To Vacation School

By GIL GILBERT

Cindy thought God was the giant who would eat her brother up if he didn't take the garbage out.

Freddy said that he had seen Jesus in a movie and that he looked sick.

These two pre-schoolers and 181 of their peers and older brothers and sisters got a somewhat different picture of God-in-Christ at the Tiburon Baptist Church Vacation Bible School this summer.

Five schools met 10 afternoons at four homes and at the Green Field of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry.

Fifteen adults led in Bible teaching, singing, praying, pledging the flag, puppet making and showing and various crafts from beads to book covers.

Tiburon pastor Dr. Jerry Ashby amused them with his magic. Japanese minister Raymond Ozasa told them about foreign missions. Seminary nurse Mrs. Shirley Dines spoke about "God's helpers."

Golden Gate students John and Kathy Dillman led the team of workers, which included six "summer missionaries" — college students who devote their vacations to Bible teaching and Christian ministry.

"One of the best things about our summer Bible school is that it is still going on," says Ashby.

One of the schools meets Sunday mornings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Stewart, 35 Briarwood Drive, San Rafael. And there are two Monday afternoon groups meeting at the James D. Houghlands, 264 Karen Way, Tiburon, and at the David B. Friesens, 540 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley.

All the students gathered on the seminary green for a final "graduation party" at the end of the summer session.

"The workers all agreed that it was hard to tell who had gotten the most out of the school, themselves or the kids," Dillman said, "but there was no doubt that we had honored Christ and had reached people we had been missing in our regular program."

Norwegian Panel Will Study The Church, State

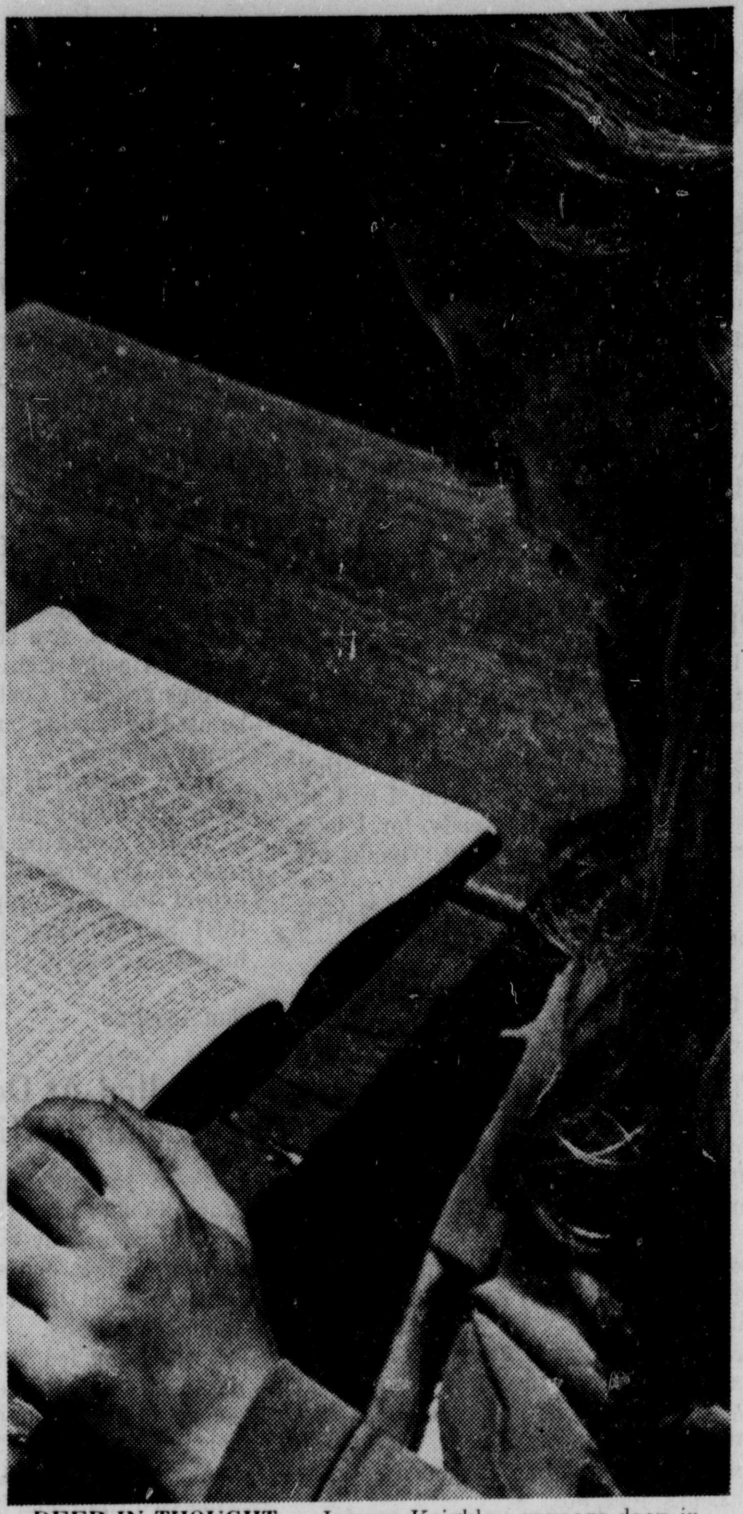
OSLO (GWF) — an official commission has been named by the Norwegian government to study church and state questions and to suggest alternative relationship models.

Members of the commission, which was created after considerable postponement, represent a variety of positions, observers noted. Some critics have pointed out the lack of young people on the body, however.

Among churchmen named to the commission are Prof. Einar Molland of the University of Oslo, known for his support of the established system, and Bishop Per Juvkam of Bjorgvin, who recently has strongly urged change.

A seat also was granted to a Free Church representative, Baptist theologian and educator, Principal Jens Oen.

A private committee last year was named by the unofficial General Church Assembly to study church-state relationships. Creation of this group has been interpreted by some as an attempt to preserve the status quo, though unofficial spokesmen for the committee describe it as a source of information and critical analysis of the work of the parliamentary commission.



DEEP IN THOUGHT — Joanna Keighley appears deep in thought as she awaits help with a difficult Bible passage. She was one of over 180 students who attended this summer's Tiburon Baptist Church's vacation Bible school.

Priest Chooses Real Extra Job Contrast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barry Wright, 33, a fully ordained priest in the Church of England, chose a real contrast for his moonlighting.

Rev. Wright, father of four, when not serving as assistant curate at the Church of the Holy Ascension in Plumstead, England, is a sergeant on the London police force, says the National Inquirer. Rev. Wright, who was elevated to the priesthood in December, 1970, has been a police officer for 11 years.

The Backward Ways Discourages Leader

SINGAPORE (UPI) — "If Prophet Mohammed were alive today he would be disappointed and shocked to see the state of backwardness among the world's Moslems," says Singapore's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs.

Rahim Bin Ishak, a Moslem of Malay descent, said forerunners of modern progress and science were introduced by the Arabs 500 years after the death of Christ but Moslems in most parts of the world now are backward.

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

Condrotte Selected For Reed Post

CHARLES L. CONDROTTE
New business manager

Charles L. Condrotte, former business manager for the San Rafael elementary and high school districts, has been hired as business manager for the Reed School district.

He was hired Tuesday to the $15,500-per-year post and replaces Victor W. Butler, who resigned in July to become a business consultant, according to Supt. Ralph D. Giovanniello.

Condrotte, 49, left his San Rafael post in July to become business manager of the Berryessa Elementary School District in Santa Clara County, Giovanniello said, but decided he didn't want the job when he got there.

He became business manager in San Rafael in 1962 after two years as customer service manager for the Spice Islands Co. and 21 years with Tidewater Oil Co. both in San Francisco.

The board appointed 10 persons to the district's research and instructional assessment committee, Giovanniello said.

They are Robert Hayes, David C. Kilmer, Charles Walters, Sharon Bass, Mary Ann Evans, Caroline Fanning, Jo McLeod, David N. Lytle, Reece Clark and Mrs. Eugene Stokes.

The board also approved goals for the finance committee but deferred appointments to the panel. Giovanniello said the committee will be responsible for making recommendations to the board on pending legislation and suggesting new methods of funding schools.

The Reed School District Board Also:

RESIGNATION — Accepted the resignation of maintenance man Frank Cardoza, who quit for personal reasons.

Department Of Justice Revamp

SONORA (UPI) —The State Department of Justice has been reorganized to provide greater support to local law enforcement agencies, Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger says.

He cited creation of a "bomb intelligence center" to assist in the investigation of bombings in the state as an example of the changes he has made in line with his inaugural promise to revamp the department.

"The center is able to receive, correlate, analyze and disseminate technical and strategic information relating to the illegal manufacture and use of destructive devices," Younger said.

He also told the 35th annual State Convention of the Judges, Marshals and Constables Association of California Thursday that plans were under way to install crime laboratories in eight high crime areas.

Whooping Cranes Arrive In Texas

AUSTWELL, Tex. (UPI)— Officials of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge said today the first of the world's largest flock of whooping cranes left in the world —60 birds —has begun to arrive at the winter nesting grounds on the Texas coast.

"The young birds will not be in for awhile because they fly a little slower. They will come in with their parents. They all fly as a family," the spokesman said.

Four birds have been seen at the wildlife refuge so far. The others of the nearly extinct bird are presumed en route from the flock's summer home in Canada.

The total world population of the big white birds is estimated at 75.

Indictments Remain In Kent Disturbance

CINCINNATI (UPI)—A federal appeals court yesterday refused to dismiss indictments against 25 persons charged with rioting during the Kent State University disturbances in which four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen.

The U. S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a decision of federal Judge William Thomas of Cleveland who refused last Jan. 28 to dismiss the indictments.

$775,000 Buys A French Painting

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Norton-Simon Foundation of Los Angeles paid a record auction price of $775,000 for a painting painted in the 20th Century—an exotic jungle scene by self-trained French artist Henri Rousseau.

The 4-by-5 foot oil was painted in 1910, the year of Rousseau's death. He was a retired Parisian customs official who painted on weekends. The painting was placed on sale at the Park Bernet galleries by Mrs. Robert R. McCormack, widow of the Chicago publisher. A companion painting is in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum.

Younger Says Today's Prison Population Smaller, But Meaner

WHITTIER (UPI)—The state prison population in California has shrunk in the last few years from 28,000 to 21,000 but the smaller it gets, the meaner it gets, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said yesterday.

Speaking before members of six Rotary Clubs from the area, Younger said that in 1960, 30 per cent of all men convicted of felonies went to prison but today it is only 10 per cent.

A state policy adopted several years ago of paying counties to put convicted felons under local probationary supervision rather than sending them to prison was a major factor in the decline of prison population, he said.

"Only the most dangerous and most violent are in prison today," he said. "Over half of those in prison are there for felonious assault, rape, robbery or homicide.

"Also the campus revolution has moved on to the prisons and into the prisons. The revolutionaries want to use the desperate, violent men that make up a large part of the prison population and these prisoners want very much to be used.

"Once the prisoner believes that he is in prison not because he held up a bank and shot a teller, but because of his radical political views, he begins to act like a martyr and is less responsive to reasonable discipline.

"So these men in prison are not average men. Most of them have repeatedly demonstrated that they cannot or will not control themselves and, further, that they cannot be controlled except by varying degrees of force.

"Many would not hesitate to kill a guard or fellow inmate in order to escape. The prison population is becoming increasingly hard to handle."

Fewer Wells Are Being Sunk Now

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—There were 35 fewer oil and gas wells drilled in the United States during the first half of 1971 than in the corresponding period of 1970.

American wells totaled 996 on July 1, 1970, and 961 at the same time this year.

Some Danes Helping To Solve Parking

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—Danish commuters have discovered a parking problem solution that is common to New York and other metropolitan centers in the United States. They park their cars near an underground station in the suburbs and take the train for the rest of the way to work.

Investigating an increasing number of cars parked at suburban underground stations, transport authorities found that 70 per cent were owned by people who live farther out of town and work in the center of the city.

GIANT GROWTH

Mitchell Reviews 20 Years' Service

Marin County Auditor--Controller Michael Mitchell, 45, who completed 20 years in county service this month, said he is amazed at the quick passage of time and the tremendous growth in the county in the past two decades.

When he became deputy auditor under the late Leon A. deLisle in October of 1951, the county population was 90,800 and the number of county employees 339. Today, the population is 212,300 according to the State Department of Finance, and the county employees total 1,391.

The basic county tax rate, which was $1.70, is now $2.89. "An example of the growth is the amount of disbursements by all entities such as schools, special districts, and the county," said Mitchell. "Total disbursements in 1951 was $22 million. Today it is $261 million."

Mitchell was born in San Francisco on Jan. 6, 1926, to Greek parents, Chris and Isabel Michelis. He got his name, he said, because his parents had difficulty speaking English when they arrived in San Francisco in 1920. An Irish immigration official had even greater difficulty pronouncing the Greek name Michelis. "The immigration official asked if Mitchell would be close enough. My father nodded, and so that's the name I was born with."

Mitchell moved to Marin in 1949 and came to work for the county on Oct. 19, 1951. He was appointed auditor-controller in December of 1962 to succeed the late deLisle.

Mitchell's policy as auditor-controller has been to encourage the public to ask questions and to understand how and where their tax money is spent. "My policy has been and will continue to be to provide as much information as I can to the public with no red tape."

Mitchell is always courteous in dealing with the public or other officials, but on occasion has locked horns with county supervisors and the county administrator on financial matters.

"I believe it is essential that there be an independent and experienced auditor-controller to provide proper check and balance in county government. The mere presence of and independent watchdog can prevent many adverse fiscal practices from taking place."

Mitchell considers flexibility to meet changing conditions and humility and empathy with the people as essential traits for a public official.

"I strongly feel that all of us in government should not lose sight of the dignity and respect we should show for our fellow man and that most important in all phases of government is the recognition that government is and should be the servant and not the master of people."

Mitchell's predecessor Leon deLisle and Eugene Connell before him served a total of almost 70 years as Marin County auditor-controller. With the voters willing, Mitchell said he hopes to say in 20 more years that three auditor-controllers have served Marin for one century.

More Deputies At Soledad Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Superior Court Judge S. Lee Vavuris has ordered 16 additional deputy sheriff bailiffs be present at the trial scheduled to start next Wednesday of "Soledad Brothers" Fleeta Drumgo and John Clutchette.

The judge said Thursday that the additional bailiffs, including four women, were needed for the orderly administration of justice.

The extras are in addition to the regular three bailiffs regularly assigned, but the judge said the added protection was agreed upon after consultation with police representatives and the sheriff's office.

A controversial bullet-proof window screen already has been set up to protect the judge and court officials.

The two defendants are charged with killing a Soledad state prison guard.

QUESTIONED BY BENNETT

Magnuson Denies El Paso Gas Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington has denied ever receiving political contributions from the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

His denial came Thursday during a stormy hearing in response to questions by lawyer William Bennett of Kentfield, the outspoken critic of corporations who serves on theCalifornia Board of Equalization.

Bennett testified before the Senate Commerce Committee headed by the Washington Democrat and vehemently opposed a bill introduced by Magnuson to exempt El Paso from anti-trust laws.

Bennett, a former assistant attorney general for California, was instrumental in winning a U.S. Supreme Court finding that El Paso illegally acquired the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corp. Magnuson's bill, cosponsored by more than a dozen other Western senators, would permit El Paso to retain control of the smaller company.

"I am seeking a disavowal from you that you have not taken a political contribution from El Paso either directly or indirectly," Bennett demanded from the startled Washington senator.

Magnuson sputtered that "we don't have to kowtow to you" but then went on to deny having accepted anything from the company.

"If you want the answer, the answer is no!" Magnuson shouted. "I think you should be ashamed of yourself to do this."

The chairman went on to say that Bennett's charges that El Paso was making "political contributions" to buy support for the bill to exempt it from antitrust laws "cast a cloud on every member of this committee."

Bennett said the committee should investigate El Paso because of its "political contributions" and "outrageous lobbying" to reverse the Supreme Court decision requiring itself to divest itself of the pipeline company.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., also accused Bennett of "the worst form of demagoguery" and demanded whether the state official was also accusing him of accepting political contributions from El Paso. Bennett said he was not.

Tunney also defended Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan against Bennett's accusations, saying he "just can't believe" Reagan would accept such contributions.

Bennett conceded he had no evidence, but El Paso's record was such that the committee should investigate before approving the Magnuson Bill.

Bennett in turn was accused by a California public utility official of having a conflict of interest in the matter but denied it under oath.

Joseph R. Rensch, president of Pacific Lighting Service Co. of Los Angeles, said Bennett was associated with a company that wished to acquire the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corp. and would make "a windfall profit out of this."

"I have no objection to Mr. Bennett making his money like the rest of us," Rensch said. "I only want this committee to understand what he really is—a promoter and not a consumer supporter."

Bennett, seated in the audience, leaped to his feet to object to being "maligned" by Rensch.

"What he is saying is an absolute lie," Bennett said, "and he knows it."

Bennett asked that both he and Resnch sit side by side at the witness table and testify under oath.

Magnuson and other supporters of the bill say their only purpose is to assure the Pacific Northwest and other parts of the West a stable gas supply. They say conditions have changed since the Supreme Court first ruled on the case in 1962, and that continued control by El Paso is now preferable.

The hearings were called by Magnuson at the request of Tunney and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who said they wanted to hear testimony on what the effect of the bill would be on California consumers.

A statement presented for California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger put him on record in support of the bill if it is amended to provide additional protection for the state's consumers.

The amendments, outlined by deputy attorney general Iver E. Skjeie, appeared to be acceptable to Magnuson.

"Your amendments will, I think, be good," Magnuson said. "We're going to look at them."

Skjeie said the state would oppose the bill if they were not accepted and support it if they were.

They include a guarantee that additional gas will be delivered by El Paso to Pacific Lighting even if it must carry another company's gas over its pipeline.

Work Instead Of Jail Term

Dane Jerome Durham, 23, of Ross, has been ordered to work 15 days for Marin County Parks and Recreation Department for drunken driving.

He was not ordered to jail for 15 days as incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Independent-Journal.

Durham, of 83 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, was arrested Sept. 10 in Larkspur.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed him on probation for three months.

Senate Approves Disability Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill increasing disability benefits for injured workers was approved 21-0 by the Senate Thursday.

The measure by Assemblyman David Pierson, D-Inglewood, would boost benefits beginning April 1 from the current maximum of $87 a week to $105 depending on his top earnings during the year.

It also increases worker contributions to the disability fund. The bill was returned to the Assembly for concurrence in Senate amendments.

Santa Rosa Channel Due

Redwood Empire Broadcasting Co. has established offices in Santa Rosa for the development of the area's first broadcast television station.

The company, which is owned and operated locally, plans to begin telecasting from its Santa Rosa studios in early Spring, 1972.

The full-color station will operate on Channel 50.

The Santa Rosa station will be received in an area which stretches from Richmond to Ukiah, and from the western Sacramento Valley to the sea. Additionally, all cable television systems in Sonoma, Napa, Marin, Mendocino and Lake counties will carry Channel 50 programs.

More Than Half Get Seven Channels

A growing majority — 57 per cent — of television homes in the U.S. are able to receive programs from at least seven television stations, according to Television Information Office director Roy Danish. This figure, which appeared in a special study provided to TIO by A.C. Nielsen Co., is up 4 percentage points from 53 per cent reported two years ago.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

New ones from the Elektra and Nonesuch labels:

LORCA — Tim Buckley — ELEKTRA EKS-74074: The clearn, high voice of Tim Buckley and the sensitivity of his lyric message have been an appreciation of mine since his first Elektra album. In this, his latest, the messages have grown to such length that the album contains only five long songs, with the title song running 10 minutes in length. Instrumental forces are more accoustic-oriented than before, with Tim himself plucking the 12-string. Tim's musical ideas fully match his lyric ones, a fact that one wishes were true of more triple-threat poet-composer-performer types.

JOHN CAGE & LEJAREN HILLER: HPSCHD; BEN JOHNSTON: String Quartet No. 2 — Visher/Bruce/Tudor, harpsichords; The Composers Quartet — NONESUCH H-71224: "HPSCHD" is John Cage's latest piece of chance music, though the chance factors are rigidly controlled within limits permitted by the composers. The title comes from the word harpsichard reduced to the six-letter limit of the computer used to generated the 51 electronic sound tapes which are combined with three different "live" harpsichords in the final production.

The scale of pitches of the electronic music bears no relation to the 12-note equal temperament of the harpsichords, which play various themes of Mozart during the piece — one of the performers being instructed to play anything of Mozart's he wants to whenever he wants to. In addition to all this, the album comes with a computer-generated list of settings for the volume and tone controls on one's own stereo amplifier. The idea is to follow the time indications with a stopwatch and turns the knobs as directed while the stereo disc plays. This makes the LP the first case where the listener's home stereo set is integral to the composition. Well, as Cage says at the end of his computer's print-out, "Good luck." The 1964 Ben Johnston quartet employs both 31 and 53-note-to-the-octave scales and requires amazing accuracy of intonation from the string players, who have no help from electronic means whatever. It is an ear-bending piece and much more exciting than the usual serialized stuff.

ERIC SALZMAN: The Nude Paper Sermon — Tropes for Actor, Renaissance Consort, Chorus, and Electronics — Stacy Keach/The Nonesuch Consort/Members of the New York Motet Singers/Joshua Rifkin cond. — Nonesuch H-71231: The Nonesuch Records commissioning program continues with another avant-garde composition. More than perhaps any of the others, Nude Paper Sermon is shaped on, by and through the medium of the modern stereo LP. It was composed in dozens of separate tracks on tape, which were later mixed and combined with live overlays to produce the final reult one hears on the dik.

The words, for actor, soloists and chorus, are written to suggest the contemporary verbal barrage from all those "who use words to manipulate others: preacher, politician, TV personality, news-caster," . . . record reviewer. The liner notesfeature a sort of play-by-play on what's happening, but this is one game that instant re-play is almost required to understand what happened. Haven't tried it yet, but the many-source nature of this material convinces me it ought to be a surrounding experience on pseudo-quadraphonic speaker set-ups.

CHARLES WUORINEN: Time's Encomium, for synthezied & processed synthesized sound — NONESUCH H-71225: This superlative piece of electronic music deserves a place beside Subotnick's several fine works such as "Silver Apples of the Moon" and "Touch," and Rudin's "Tragoedia." It is a fully-realized conception which makes more genuine music out of the RCA Synthesizer than Milton Babbitt ever could. Perhaps the reason is that Wuorinen used the Synthesizer's product much as basic sounds for musique concrete, transforming and distorting them later in various ways just as the natural recording of a bell or whistle was transformed in musique concrete. Some trip, this — both musically and technically.

AMERICAN BRASS MUSIC of IVES, BREHM, BRANT & PHILLIPS — The American Brass Quintet — NONESUCH H-71222: Another unusual album idea brought to fruition x Nonesuch with great skill and taste and naturally, at their usual bargain price as well. Ives' "From the Steeples and the Mountains" even throws in the Carillon of New York's Riverside Church for good measure. Henry Brant is a made genius and his music for brass is like nothing else ever heard. His "Fourth Millennium" is a journey for the ear that will bore no one. Wonderful close yet rich brass sound.

FRANZ BERWALD: Overtures & Tone Poems — Orchestra of the Swedish Radio/Sixten Ehrling — NONESUCH H-71218: Berwald, forgotten by his contemporaries and re-discovered at the turn of the century, has received several recording premieres of late. Here are six short orchestral pieces from his pen which will titillate the ear of seekers after the different in LP fare. "Elves' Game" was my favorite, for its thorough work-out given to the double-basses in the orchestra.

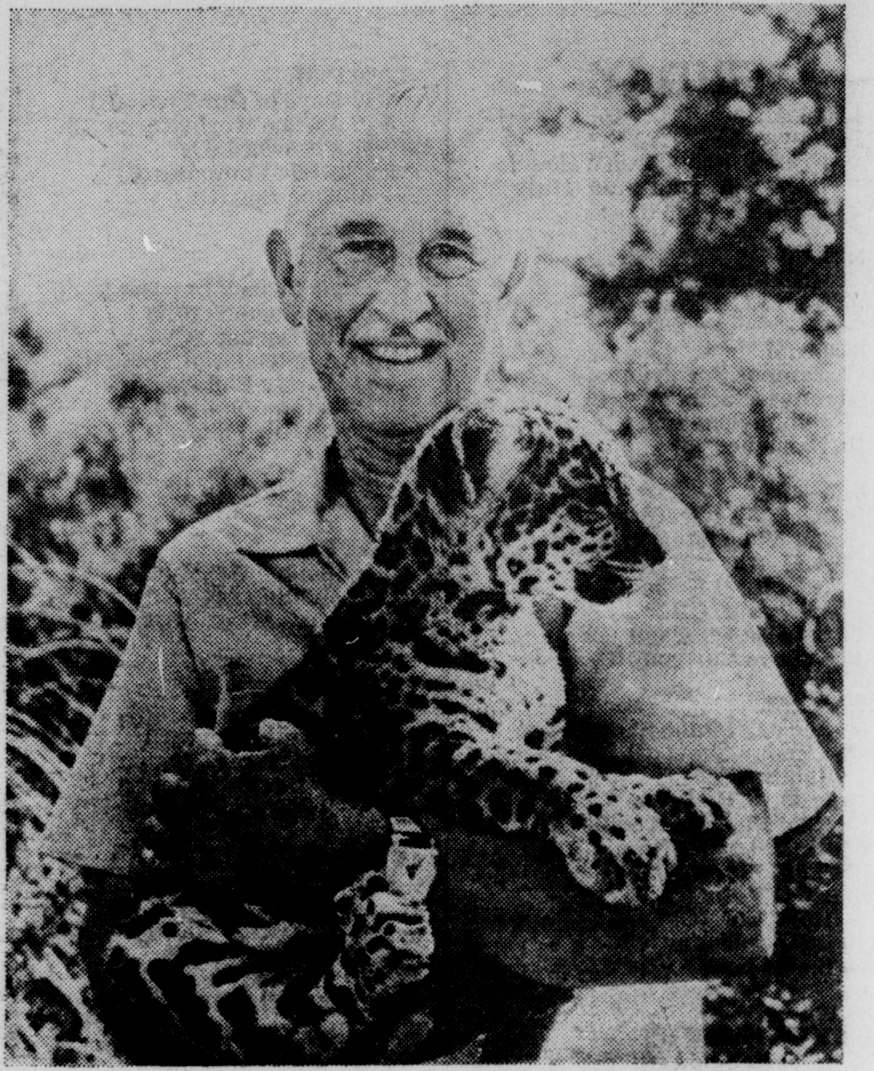
TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Did you notice the ethnic finesse used in the new CBS weekly series, "The Chicago Teddy Bears," a spoof on the Prohibition-gangster era of the 1920s in Chicago? Semi-fantasy though the program may be, it's stretching things a lot to make the principals of Hungarian origin. Any Hungarians in Chicagoland in that time probably were sweating it out in the steel mills of Gary or Indiana Harbor rather than peddling illegal booze and using strong-arm tactics against proprietors of Chicago bistros.

"Shirley's World" on ABC's new-season schedule does nothing for movie star Shirley MacLaine, nor does she do much for the program as a world-trotting photographer-reporter for a magazine. Neither she nor the idea of the series is potent enough.

The more you see of "lawyer shows" on television — the latest is ABC's "Owen Marshal, Counselor at Law" — the more you miss "The Defenders" of gradually fading memory.



MARLIN PERKINS, zoologist and conservationist, travels to remote centers of the globe to film wildlife for his "Wild Kingdom" show shown at 7 p.m. Sundays on Channel 4.

Wilds Probed For Viewers At Home

"Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom" has entered its tenth season on network television — one of the longest running programs in the history of the medium.

Probing the wild places of the globe, it now brings viewers each week a world they could never otherwise experience.

The setting might be any of the remaining untamed, untouched regions of the earth; the many strange and wonderful animals that inhabit these regions are the cast of characters.

EVERY WEEK Marlin Perkins — the program host and a distinguished zoologist — journeys to a different part of the wild kingdom. He may go to Africa to dart elephants from a helicopter; to the Arctic to trap polar bear; to South America for jaguar; or into the sea in search of a whale. Over the years, Perkins has visited both poles, and every continent and major ocean of the world in search of adventure.

Assisting Perkins in the expeditions is Jim Fowler, rugged explorer-naturalist and/or Stan Brock, formerly manager of the world's largest area cattle ranch in Guyana, South America.

The man behind the scenes is Producert-Director Don Meier whose guiding hand touches every stage of production from location to finished print. A member of the board of directors of the World Wildlife Fund, he combines an active interest in conservation with a distinguished career in television production.

EVERY half-hour episode emanates from location. One program may concentrate on a species of animal, another a particular region, while another may chronicle the life of a primitive people. The film — all in color — is obtained from a small staff of the world's finest wildlife photographers. Dedicated naturalists, they live with and know intimately the subjects they are photographing.

From days spent in a cramped blind may come several feet of film that capture the special moment when the great drama of nature is revealed. For the average show, almost thirty-thousand feet will be photographed.

The technical excellence and dedication to detail that have marked the series since its beginning have earned it many awards — including four national Emmys; in 1966, 1967, 1969 and 1970. The show has also won many film festival and technical awards. The program's conservation theme has also earned it recognition and praise from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, State Fish and Game Departments, the National Wildlife Federation and scientists all over the world.

Proposed Standard For Independents

A prime time standard for independent stations has been recommended by the Television Code Review Board.

If ratified by the Television Board of Directors, independent stations would be allowed a maximum of 12 minutes non-program material per prime time hour; network affiliated stations would be allowed nine minutes 30 seconds non-program material under the prime time standards

Novato: Typical Suburban City

Rural Land On Verge Of Boom

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on Novato was prepared by Mayor Joseph D. Gargiulo, his daughter, Ellen, and the Novato Chamber of Commerce.)

By JOSEPH D. GARGIULO

Novato has the dubious distinction of being a typical suburban community which came to life in the '60's as middle-class Americans deserted the metropolitan core areas and moved into the quiet rural atmosphere on the fringe.

While communities like Novato with its rural-like setting have much to offer, there are many things which helped to drive the people from the larger cities such as high taxes, poor schools, deteriorating business areas, riots or fear of riots, and crime increase.

JOSEPH D. GARGIULO
Novato Mayor

WITH THIS migration to the suburbs, bringing with it an increasing burden for providing better and safer streets, the "best" police protection, schools and playgrounds, and more recently — preservation of our natural environment — the question most often confronting the community leaders is, will these new residents accept the financial responsibility for providing these services and facilities?

We feel that they are receiving the highest return possible for each dollar being spent on municipal services, and that the local government is continually seeking more efficient methods for providing those services.

To do this successfully takes dedicated and forward-looking officials, active civic organizations, professional management, and citizens who take an active part in their community life.

AT THE same time there are numerous other problems facing all residents of the Bay Area, although here in Novato some of them are not yet critical: air and water pollution, preservation of open spaces, race relations, housing for the poor and elderly, refuse disposal, the Bay, ecology and youth, to name a few.

The city manager, Charles A. Brown, has summarized in his report, "Suggested goals and objectives" for the '70's, the following areas for immediate concerns: annexation and planning, city-county tax inequities, five year capital budget, industrial development, open space preservation, public buildings, public housing, recreation facilities, young adults, and city involvement in the solution of social problems of the community.

The last one is a new area of community and municipal responsibility which is assumed out of compassion for human needs. Novato has established and appointed a Citizens Advisory Committee to undertake evaluations of the city's social needs of the community and make recommendations to the city council.

IN JANUARY 1960, at the time of incorporation the population within the city limits, including Hamilton Air Force Base, was 18,000 and today the population is recorded at 32,000. This represents an increase of 78 per cent in the past eleven years since incorporation.

Population growth in this area is due to a multiplicity of factors. In the case of Novato, several growth incentives can be observed, or are expected to occur because of the following reasons: proximity to a central city, accessibility to the freeway, development and land values in South and Central Marin, local and nearby employment sources, terrain, climate, and its natural rustic beauty, and community facilities.

During the 1970's, Novato will become Marin County's largest city. The transition from the community's rural past to a new urban preeminence will be difficult, generating problems as well as opportunities. Recognizing the need to evaluate emerging changes and to clarify the goals of the community and its Downtown, the Novato City Council authorized a comprehensive planning study of the Downtown area.

WITH Federal support, the services of the urban and environmental planning firm of Sedway/Cooke, assisted by Arthur D. Little, Inc., economic consultants, were secured to undertake the study. The consultants also were aided by City staff and worked closely with an appointed citizens Downtown Committee. This study was completed last year, 1970. By careful planning and zoning, Novato is trying to retain the natural rustic characteristics of our community.

By using and preserving the natural charm of our hills, trees, creeks, open spaces, parks in planning our new downtown area. We have planned to give special emphasis to the physical form and appearance of the downtown in recognition of both its beautiful natural attributes and the intimate relationship between environmental quality and economic success of the city.

Chamber Report: On Way To Biggest

Novato today is a combination of many smaller towns that cropped up during its agricultural history.

It is no longer a "spot in the road," as viewed by Highway 101 travelers in days gone by, but well on the way toward becoming Marin's largest city.

The one-time farming community has sprouted into a city which covers 23 square miles containing six shopping centers, and has visions of attracting a regional shopping center.

WITH population projections for the Greater Novato area at 52,000 by 1975 and 73,000 by 1985, the city has adopted a downtown plan to meet the expected growth.

The 10 major features of the plan are:

1) For long term consideration, a regional shopping center be located on a 90 acre site immediately north of Olive Avenue with a rapid transit station at Olive.

2) North Redwood Boulevard (now Highway 101) would include office facilities and

Indians Once Roamed Novato Hills

By ELLEN GARGIULO

Novato's history begins not unlike that of the rest of Marin County. The Coastal Miwok Indians were the earliest inhabitants. The mild climate of Novato allowed them to go naked and the abundance of game, fish, berries and fresh water caused them to live happy and lazy lives.

Drake landed in Marin County in 1579 and claimed the land including Novato in the name of the Queen. But the English abandoned their claim, so two hundred years later, in 1776, Spanish explorers came and founded Mission Dolores in San Francisco. In that same year Marin County, including Novato, was explored.

THE INDIAN village of Olompali (located at the northern foot of what is now Mt. Burdell) was visited by two young Spaniards. In exchange for Indian hospitality, the white men helped the Indians build an adobe house — the first in the North Bay Area.

The original is gone but the second adobe, built by Camilo Ynitia, the son of Olompali, was made part of the Burdell mansion in 1863. Although the mansion is now burned down, the adobe structure is still visible.

After the founding of Mission San Rafael in 1817, Novato became a grazing place for church-owned cattle. Canada de Novato (Novato Valley) was first mentioned in the Mission records in 1824.

MEXICO divided the Novato area into land grants. Fernando Felix purchased Rancho de Novata in 1838. This ranch roughly stretched from the present San Marin to Black Point. In 1839 Juan Martin got Corte Madera de Novata which roughly included land west of Novato and north of Nicasio including where the cheese factory now stands.

In 1840, Ygnacio Pacheco got Rancho San Jose which now includes Hamilton Field and Ignacio. Camilio Ynitia, chief of the Olompalis, was granted official title to his land in exchange for helping General Vallejo. This grant included Mt. Burdell and the area north of the city of Novato including the present park development from Olive Avenue to DeLong.

3) East Grant Avenue be reconstructed into a pedestrian mall.

4) A civic and cultural center encompassing the existing City Hall site.

5) Reichert Hills (southeast corner of DeLong and Highway 101) suggested for combined housing and recreation use.

6) West Grant Avenue to be developed as a primary office center.

7) Limited expansion of the Downtown Center at Seventh Street and Grant Avenue with the emphasis on utilizing the existing Novato Creek area.

8) Creek-side parks and trails are planned through downtown from Seventh Street to Redwood Boulevard.

9) Diablo Triangle (southwest corner of South Novato Boulevard and Diablo) is suggested as a garden apartment complex.

10) South Redwood Boulevard to expand its present role for auto sales and service uses.

THE PROPOSED transportation network to accommodate the downtown area envisions several major arterials such as Novato Boulevard, De Long, Diablo Avenue Atherton Avenue, San Marin Boulevard and Seventh Street. Roadway loops around Grant Avenue are proposed to ensure easy access to commercial areas. Special provisions are made to provide for consolidation of parking.

Of prime consideration in the transportation system is the eventual rapid transit service with a station proposed in the vicinity of Olive Avenue and the existing Northwest Pacific Railroad right-of-way.

With this detailed study and the recommendations that followed, the City and the Novato Chamber of Commerce are presently pursuing a program of implementation.

WHILE MUCH of the plan depends on economics and the growth factor before implementation can take place, aspects of this total plan could be considered for implementation in the very near future. Depending on the results of funding and economic studies, some of these programs could be initiated in the year 1971-72.

Existing now either in plan or operation are a few other areas of commercial concern which will have a substantial impact on the business development of Novato.

GNOSS FIELD, The Marin County airport, though still in its infant stages with two fixed base operators, a 3300-foot runway and tie down space for about 100 planes, already provides a positive cash flow to the county.

With the increase of facilities at the airport and the development of land around it zoned for light industrial use, together with the forecast for more use of general aviation as a form of recreation and personal transportation, it is anticipated this will be an important economic factor for Novato.

The outcome of applications for joint use at Hamilton Field are not known to date, but this could conceivably bring about an economic impact on the community.

THE PLANNED North Marin campus of the Marin Community College District will be materializing within the near future. Classes are underway at Hamilton AFB and Novato High School this fall term. This is expected to generate the need for more housing, services and goods.

Hamilton Industrial Park which for several years was developing slowly has recently been sold and is now progressing with several new warehouses being completed and approval for more in process. Another twenty acres of industrial land just north of Hamilton AFB on Bel Marin Keys Blvd. has received tentative approval from the County and is available for development.

The Petaluma River Basin remains a reservoir untapped for recreational use. This could be of major importance in the future.

Another recent development that can be a determining factor is the acquisition of Pt. Reyes National Seashore which already is attracting thousands of visitors and tourists. As it develops and progresses, Novato could very well establish itself as the Gateway to Point Reyes.

Kit Carson came through Novato in 1829 when he traveled to San Rafael from the Suisun Bay Area to help suppress an Indian rebellion. In a second occasion, Carson came through Novato when he was serving as John C. Fremont's guide during the Bear Flag Rebellion.

Fremont's forces were heading from Sonoma to San Francisco and they camped at the same first adobe site. Only a few days earlier a group of Americans had encountered a Mexican military force at that site. This was the only armed battle of the Bear Flag Rebellion.

IN 1856, two easterners, J. B. Sweetser and Francis C. Delong acquired the Novato Valley. This partnership planted over twenty thousand fruit trees, mostly apple, to supply the fruit demands in the West. By the 1860's they shipped apples to as far away as Australia besides to the whole U.S.

As more settlers came to Novato, there became a need for a church and school, so Sweetser and Delong built a combination one room school and church in 1858. The population increased during the 1870's with the settling of many Portuguese and Italian farmers and dairymen in Novato.

A bigger school and church house with a bell tower was built in 1873 on Grant Avenue near the present Denny's Restaurant. Three other schools were built at the turn of the century in Black Point, Olompali, and Ignacio.

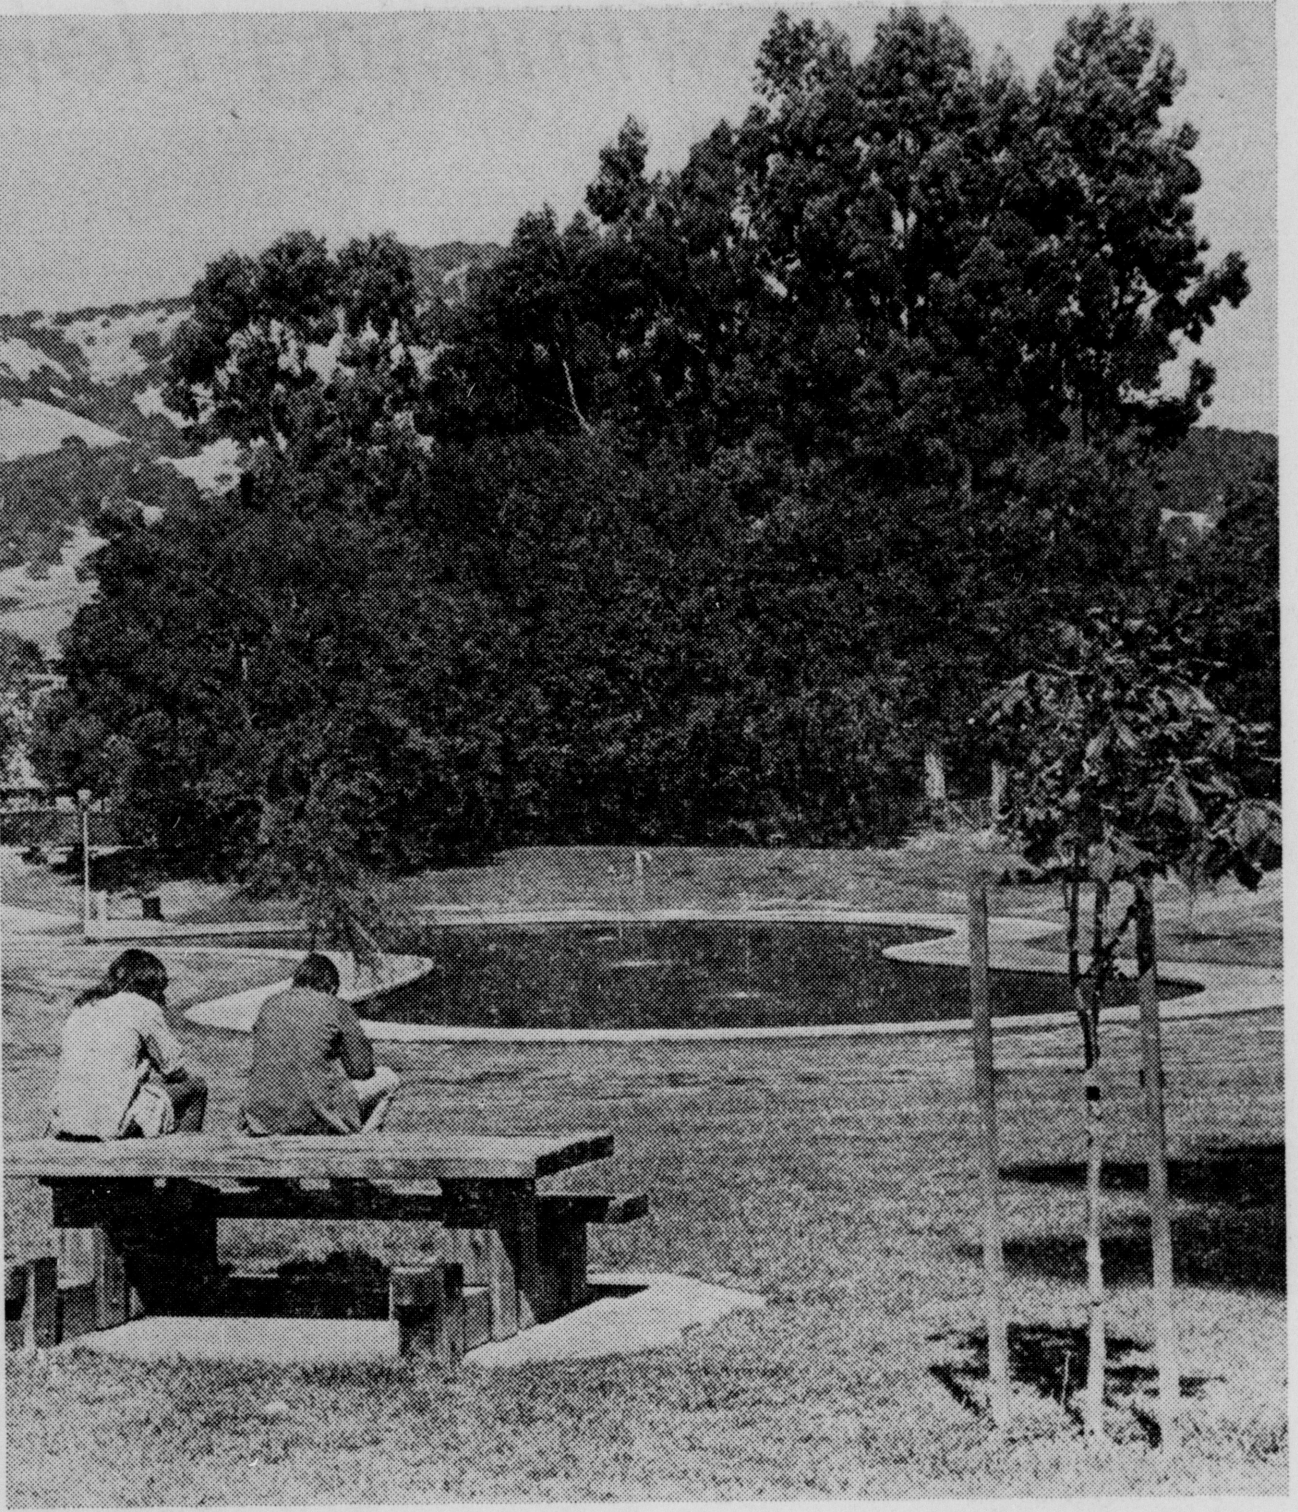
THE OLD TOWN of Novato was originally located near the present Nave Shopping Center along Novato Creek. Large vessels were able to navigate up the creek in order to pick up fruit, vegetables, and cow hides at Novato.

In 1888, Delong subdivided 6,000 acres of his property to start the town of Novato on Grant Avenue between the present highway and the railroad station. The church which now houses the Novato City Hall was built in 1898.

During the 1920's, Novato started her role as a bedroom community for San Francisco. New landowners worked in San Francisco during the week and came up to Novato by train to work their farms on the weekends. The present Community House was built as a town effort in 1923, showing the community spirit of Novato during that time.

THE BUILDING of Hamilton Air Force Base in the early 1930's did not affect Novato greatly although it did provide (as it still does) many jobs for Novatoans. Novato remained a small rural community until after World War II.

During the 1950's, Novato became the fastest growing area in Marin County experiencing the rapid growth of subdivision development. Novato doubled its population between 1950 to 1960, going from 9,000 to 18,000.



PIONEER MEMORIAL PARK in the center of Novato is a restful area that is the city's only major park, but there is hope that much of the open land in the area can be set aside for other parks before it is lost to development.

The Old Swimming Hole A Memory

By PAUL CANE

"Oh, the old swimming hole! When I last saw the place; the scene was all changed like the change in my face."

James Whitcomb Riley's comment about the "swimming facilities" of his day (which were, like as not, nothing more than moss-banked, eucalyptus-surrounded ponds) is certainly appropriate today.

Swimming pools, and the people who use them, have undergone great changes since the days of Ann Curtis and Charlie Sava in San Francisco's old Crystal Plunge.

MODERN super-complexes such as the International Swim Center in Santa Clara, are a far cry from the "water tanks" of yesteryear. And so are the people who swim in them. As the facilities themselves improved, the ability of people to take care of themselves in the water has proportionally increased.

Mrs. Jack (Beth) Kaufman of Greenbrae, now 76, has probably done as much as anyone in the United States to further the cause of water safety.

At the age of 29, Beth and a group of companions watched helplessly as a friend drowned in the waves off a Ventura, Calif., beach. "None of us knew the first thing about life saving," she recalls. "It was awful."

This tragedy inspired young Beth to enroll in life saving classes under Wilbur Longfellow, the founder of the American National Red Cross, and from that time on has continued a relentless crusade for water safety programs through the present day.

Marin County's first top-notch competitive swimmer was Eleanor Garatti of San Rafael, who was a national champion in 1920.

MORE FAMOUS, however, is Ann Curtis, who thrilled the country with two gold and one silver medal in the 1948 Olympic Games in London, England. Now Mrs. Ann Cuneo, swim instructor from Terra Linda, she looks back on those competitive days with pride: "When you stand up there (the award stand) and they play the National Anthem while Old Glory is raised, and they award you that gold medal, you can't help but be thrilled to the tips of your toes."

Perhaps Mrs. Kaufman's greatest accomplishment was initiating the Amateur Athletic Union's (AAU) age-group swim program, where youngsters from 6 to 17 are permitted to compete in races with others their age.

It was a long and arduous task to get the unprecedented program approved by the AAU, back in 1951, but in the end it was accepted — with the net result of involving every member of the 1964 and 1968 U.S. Olympic teams during their early teen years.

MRS. KAUFMAN and Mrs. Cuneo, in recognition of their dedication to the improvement of swimming and water safety in the United States, were inducted into the National Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Out of the age-group program inspired by Mrs. Kaufman have come many competitive swim clubs and organizations in Marin County.

Don Swartz, coach of the Marin Aquatic Club which is considered to be the top age-group club in Marin today, says that while swimming and water safety have come a long way since the 1920's, there is still much to be done in the way of developing a really top flight recreational and competitive program in the County. "Competitively we've kept pace with the times, but the facilities in Marin County are at least ten years behind our competitive talent," he observed.

THE MARIN Aquatic Club, co-sponsored by the San Rafael Park and Recreation Department and by the Tamalpais Union High School District, is only one of the many competitive clubs in Marin today.

The Dolphins of Marin, Hamilton Air Force Base Voodoos and the Novato Aquanauts are other AAU clubs, and a non-AAU, summer league program is conducted throughout the county, with teams representing nearly all the tennis and country clubs in Marin taking part.

Swartz supports his contention that the "Bounty County" lacks sufficient pool facilities with these facts: he observes that in the Santa Clara-Los Altos area, there are no less than four 50-meter (regulation olympic size) pools within 10 miles of each other, but there isn't a single regulation olympic-size pool in Marin County. "A football team, to reach its maximum capability, must practice on a regular football field some part of the time; in the same way, a swimmer, to be really prepared for big competition, must have practice experience in the regulation pool, which is 50 meters long." To get this invaluable training at the present time, Swartz says his swimmers travel to Petaluma daily to use one single lane of the municipally-owned facility there.

IN CONTRAST to the lack of public pools, the private pool building business is booming, according to Art Strasser of Marin's Anthony Pools. "Our sales are up over 50% from last year," he observes. Strasser feels that people are now more interested in just clean recreation than ever before. "People would rather spend more time in a relaxing recreation like swimming than working to earn more money," he said.

As private pool building has risen in the past, the drowning rate has risen. Statistics show that 20,000 drowning deaths occurred in the U.S. last year.

Public officials realized the need for some prevention of these needless deaths as far back as the 1950's, when a county ordinance requiring a fence around all pools was put into law.

SWARTZ, however, feels that this only sidestepped the real problem. "What was really needed then was a good, solid recreational-lifesaving-water safety program that could eliminate many more of these drownings."

Addition of a 50-meter pool complex will facilitate this end, he says.

Currently emerging as a competitive swimming power even under the handicap of present pool facilities, Marin County boasts such talent as Denise Ham, Jo Hislop and Robin Bachrach, among many others. However, Mrs. Kay Campion of the Marin Aquatic Club says, "Let's face it, until we can get more pools, especially 50 meters, and more and better training time, we just can't do right by our dedicated kids and they'll have to go elsewhere."

Mel Augustine: Strong Man Of Peace

Probation Officer Acts On Philosophical Base

Profile Of A Marinite

Emilio (Mel) Augustine, 40, the good-natured probation officer at Marin Juvenile Hall, has an avocation that few people would suspect.

He is an accomplished judoist of Olympic caliber, with a record of 12 major wins in the American Athletic Union championships and holder of a fifth-degree black belt.

He carries his 205 pounds so compactly on a 6 foot 1½ inch frame that his size is deceiving. Few of his colleagues or the juveniles he has supervised for almost 14 years were ever aware that this soft-spoken gent with the disarming smile could toss you over his head and twist you into a pretzel in one easy motion.

HIS STATURE in the gentle art of self defense became more widely known only last August when he went to Ludwigshafen, Germany, as coach-manager of the United States International Judo Team of 1971 to compete in the world championships.

The young (average age 21) American team of seven members came in eighth among the 59 entries. This, said Augustine, is an excellent showing in view of the fact that other countries give official backing to the sport and subsidize their athletes.

Never once has Augustine resorted to judo in anger. "I'd just as soon walk away from a fight," he explained. "The philosophy of judo I use every day. But mayhem and brutality are the farthest removed from the principles of judo. It teaches discipline of mind over matter, being considerate of others, recognizing their strengths and weaknesses. You respect the other person's point of view."

"YOU BECOME more tolerant because you recognize that no one is perfect; that everyone has weaknesses and shortcomings as well as strength. You don't ridicule, insult or hurt your fellow man because you know what pain is."

How does that philosophy operate in the case of a probation officer facing a group of youngsters who are anti-adult and anti-society?

"Never put them down without a good reason," said Augustine. "You try to serve as a model that they can respect. When you look at it from their point of view, you can see that many adults have not earned the respect of youth."

AUGUSTINE gave this example: A youth asks for a chance to drive or own a car. Parents give a flat refusal, with no explanation or with reasons that have nothing to do with car ownership. Parents would do better by discussing alternatives. Talk about the cost, gasoline, insurance, payments, cost of upkeep. To own and enjoy a car costs about $2.50 or $3 per day. Once the youth and parents arrive at these figures, the youth gets the incentive to save up for a car, or he decides he cannot afford the $3 per day.

This gives the youth a role in the decision-making.

"Parents send their children to school, presumably to teach the children to think for themselves. And when the children begin thinking and making suggestions, the parents say 'no' without even listening."

Many "problem" children are brought to Augustine, but most of them turn out to be no problem at all.

HE ENROLLS some of these youngsters in a judo school which he operates in Albany. He has about 60 boys and some girls, ranging from tots to adults.

"I ask them to keep their hair clean, and their uniforms white. I treat them with respect and ask them to maintain personal cleanliness out of respect to others in the class, and they comply voluntarily."

Never once was he forced to oust anyone from class because of dirty hair or uniform.

In his work with youth at Marin Juvenile Hall, he had to use physical restraint only once. Several years ago, an intoxicated youth went on a rampage and rammed his fist through plate glass, suffering a severe gash on his arm. He continued to thrash around, kicking and swinging. Augustine managed to control the youth by holding his head from behind so that a tourniquet could be applied to the bleeding arm.

ON ANOTHER occasion, about five years ago, a husky teen-ager was brought before the juvenile judge at a hearing at Juvenile Hall. The youth became angry and decided to split. Swinging a chair at bailiffs, he ran into the hallway.

"I happened to be standing in the hallway, blocking his way," recalled Augustine. "He looked at me, and I looked at him, and nothing happened. He decided not to make a break for it."

This has been the pattern most of his life, said Augustine. "I've been able to talk to them and depend on logic rather than force."

He has had two brushes with death, both accidental.

In 1960, three weeks before he was to compete in a national judo tournament, his car hit an oil slick in rainy weather on the north end of the Waldo Tunnel and plunged 525 feet down the cliff. He clung to his car all the way down and came out with minor bruises.

IN 1969, he was attending the world championships at Olympic Stadium in Mexico City when struck by a stray bullet.

"My wife and I were walking along the street, and there were two Mexicans fighting. All of a sudden there's a shot, and I'm on the ground, shot through the right thigh."

Fortunately, the American team doctor, Joseph Fitzimmons of San Jose, was nearby and quickly got him into surgery.

Augustine lives in Berkeley with his wife, Joan, a former Berkeley school teacher, and their three sons.

Orchestra Is Expandable

Select Group Expands When Melody Requires

By DON KEOWN

One might expect that a two-and-a-half hour Monday after-school Marin Youth Orchestra rehearsal, plus play with the school orchestra and perhaps a band as well, private music lessons and practice at home would satisfy the creative urges of any talented boy or girl.

But an especially gifted and dedicated core from that Marin Youth Orchestra has signed up for an additional four hours of music this school term as members of the new Orchestra Piccola.

EVERY Saturday morning these young musicians report from throughout Marin to San Rafael High School for a 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. session of rehearsal of Early Baroque and contemporary chamber music, sometimes as an orchestra and sometimes as sectional groups.

For youths already devoting many, many hours to their music, it is a long session, even when broken up by lectures and by rest periods every hour.

Isn't it actually just a bit too much?

Not at all, answeres their conductor and instructor, Hugo Rinaldi. "They thrive on it. They arrive for every rehearsal fresh and eager, and they leave still stimulated."

FURTHERMORE, Rinaldi adds, for all the time they spend on their music, the Orchestra Piccola members still do well in their school work and are generally A and B students.

The new Orchestra Piccola comes in two sizes.

The basic group is composed of 14 members, all string instrumentalists, with harpsichord.

But for certain music the membership is increased to 40, including some woodwind and brass instrument players.

The Orchestra Piccola performers are selected on the basis of the chair they hold down in the 85-member Marin Youth Orchestra — first chair players, first, second chair players, next, etc.

LIKE THE Marin Youth Orchestra, the Orchestra Piccola is sponsored by the Marin Symphony Association. And those two organizations are but part of a four-point program now being sponsored by the symphony association for music-minded youth of the county. Also included are the Workshop for Strings, and the Music for Minors series.

The Marin Symphony Association, incidentally, is currently in the midst of its 1971 membership campaign, seeking added supporters for such projects as the youth orchestra and the Orchestra Piccola.

Hugo Rinaldi notes that the cooperation and unity achieved in Marin through the symphony association, the schools and private music teachers might well be unique for the entire country.

"I have never known such coordination and harmony to exist anywhere else," he says.

OF THE Orchestra Piccola he says, "It developed from the expressed wishes of 16 string players for a further opportunity to explore the concerto grosso, and particularly the music of Vivaldi and Handel."

Such music, he adds, is inclined to be less flamboyant, more subtle and intimate.

"And in an era where the popular rock music supplies

them with all the flamboyance they require, I think many of these young people find the motets and madrigals and such a refreshing change of pace."

RINALDI explains: "The chamber music played by the Orchestra Piccola does not depend for its effects upon great splashes of sound or a great variety in the tone color. One is only aware of the musical essence, of the composer's innermost intentions, and is not distracted by extraneous glamor.

"Furthermore, chamber music has always challenged the greatest composers to their best efforts. Make a list of chamber orchestra works of the masters from Vivaldi to Webern, and you have at once a catalog of their finest compositions.

"It is my personal belief that we are in an era of a new renaissance in chamber music similar to the 18th and 19th centuries when every cultured person played an instrument and every small town harbored a chamber orchestra."

AND IF through working as a smaller chamber group the young musicians really get to know the composers, they also develop an empathy for one another.

"The intimacy and teamwork demanded of musicians by chamber music causes them to get to know and to appreciate each other," Rinaldi says. "Where else than in chamber music can one find such selfless teamwork, such flawless balance and ensemble, such a manifestation of the human spirit?"

Marin music-lovers will have their first opportunity to hear the new Orchestra Piccola when it makes its concert debut at the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building next February with a four-piece program, two to be played by the small 14-member unit, two by the larger 40-member group.

THE ENTIRE Marin Youth Orchestra is scheduled for January and May concerts at the Veterans Building.

Rinaldi is confident that the music to be heard then will demonstrate amply why some boys and girls are willing to forego precious hours of their already limited leisure time to spend their Saturdays with chamber music.

He sees it as "one kind of search for beauty and truth and love," all objectives very much in the minds of today's more motivated young people.

And he asks for them: "After all, isn't that what life is all about?"

YOUNG MUSICIANS arrive from many Marin communities for the Saturday rehearsals, many by bicycle, complete with instruments aboard, to gain another experience in their musical careers.

"Tom Jones" Reincarnated

A START IN LIFE by Alan Sillitoe; Charles Scribner's Sons, 352 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Tom Jones is alive and well in merry new England. He has been reincarnated in the guise of Michael Cullen, who like Jones is of uncertain paternal lineage. Raised, and I use the word loosely, by his unwed mother, he learns early to see life as something to be used, just as his mother had been in the war years. As a product of war-time England, Mike, like others in his condition, resents the implications of the word bastard which is used freely by all characters in this sometimes hilarious adventure story.

The story is told in first person colloquial narrative, and the reader is caught up in one series of adventures after another. From childhood, which he disposes of as an "intense and wonderful love-affair that was stamped out by the willful circumstance of growing up," he comes to young manhood as a cynical but likeable rogue.

Lying and stealing are more natural to Mike than their opposites. But if these traits are to be criticized they must also be tempered by the honesty of our hero's acknowledgement of them. He is not vindictive or bitter at the vagaries of a yo-yo type existence.

Throughout this tale, which takes us to Mike's mid-thirties, we see our lover-adventurer in and out of beds almost as often as he is in and out of scrapes. A strain of frustration but not despair is constantly present in his life. The cast of characters is varied, amusing, and all quite different. Like the proverbial bad penny they keep popping up and influenceing Mike's life in amusing and sometimes philosophical ways.

Our hero is buffeted by winds of fortune which knock him about somewhat maliciously. He seems, however, to survive quite ably in this wind-blown fashion. Throughout it all Mike remains true only to himself, but even then he is not too sure of any pre-ordained direction in his life.

If you are looking for a good story with elements of danger that can make you laugh while keeping you in suspense, then "A Start In Life" should suit you well. Be prepared for surprises and settle back to enjoy yourself.

Troops In Turmoil

DESTROY OR DIE by Martin Gershen; Arlington House, 322 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

Subtitled "the true story of My Lai," this account sets forth the mood and condition of Charlie Company before the tragedy. It is painful reading.

Gershen is a professor of journalism at the University of Illinois. He spent six months talking to the soldiers of Charlie Company, plus Army brass and officials. His conclusion: ". . . the Americans who were thrust into that situation cannot be condemned."

Gershen maintains that American society as a whole must accept responsibility for My Lai. He states that the Army took a calculated risk at My Lai 4 with a company of sick infantrymen who went berserk and it (the Army) lost.

"At My Lai (4) an undetermined number of Viet Cong suspects were killed inadvertently by an irrational company of men no longer psychologically capable of controlling their acts. The failure at My Lai was caused by bad Army intelligence, faulty leadership, inadequate troop indoctrination, poor judgment and a questionable counter-guerrilla policy."

Life Magazine printed a series of photos taken at My Lai showing two little boys, about 6 and 3 years, on a road. The bigger boy moves in front to protect his little brother —to no avail. Both were shot to death.

If we accept Gershen's thesis, all of us share in this act. The hand that pulled the trigger was not responsible. This theory of the collective conscience mitigates the rule of law, morality, and society's right to punish its own.

Dealing with an event so emotion-charged requires a scalpel. But Gershen uses an axe. He largely ignores the fact that some soldiers at My Lai did not participate in the slaughter. He completely ignores the fact that millions of soldiers in World War II endured more combat for longer periods — and saw more comrades die. Yet they did not slaughter captured enemy (with rare exceptions), let alone children and pregnant women.

Gershen fails to make proper distinctions between the nature of man (a rational animal) and other animals. He does not comprehend that while there may be reason for a wrong act, this reason does not per se constitute an excuse.

Sexual Adventures Fail To Make A Full Novel

BICYCLE ON THE BEACH by Peter Viertel; Delacorte Press, 362 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

If you can accept the premise that a fifteen year old boy has something to offer, sexually, to a mature, married 27-year-old woman, then you may enjoy "Bicycle on the Beach".

That's about all the book has to offer, except for the repetition a thousand times of "I love you," and "We made love" and "Let's make love, what time is your husband coming home?"

There's the exploration of Carl's naivete, the continuing threat of Hitler's terror in Europe and the California Jews attempts to bring relatives to safety. But Carl, the "wife fixer" as he is called by an aspiring second mistress, is the hero and his high school problems and his sexual prowess are really what the book is all about.

The woman, Pamela, has a nine year old daughter, so it's not maternal affection that she has for Carl . . . it's physical fullfillment that she's seeking. Her husband seems more than willing to adapt himself to her needs but for over two years the strange affair runs on. The husband, in name only, must find his solace elsewhere, Pamela is faithful to Carl.

Feminist Claimed Returned

THE RETURN OF FRANCES WILLARD by Jeffrey Furst; Coward, McCann and Geoeghegan, 171 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

In 1939, when Stephanie Hale was 15 days old, the psychic and mystic Edgar Cayce gave the infant a life reading and pronounced her a reincarnation of Frances Willard, the 19th Century temperance and suffragette leader.

Whether Cayce's pronouncement was correct, or whether it so motivated and influenced Miss Hale in later years as to determine her direction, there did develop a body of evidence linding the WCTU founder to the Virginia Beach housewife.

"The Return of Frances Willard," the latest addition to the fast-growing shelf of literature by or about Edgar Cayce, is Jeffrey Furst's not unbiased study of the Hale-Willard case.

Furst, a school teacher associated with the Edgar Cayce Foundation, is no great shakes as a writer. But he is writing from conviction, and as such he is persuasive, despite the sometimes disorganized presentation. The result is a book that will solidify the belief of already confirmed Cayce believers, and which will cause even skeptics perhaps to pause a bit and wonder.

Gentile Poverty In The Forties

ENTERING EPHESUS, by Daphne Athas; The Viking Press, 442 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

A novel set in Ephesus Virginia, in 1939, this is the riches to rags story of the Bishop family. A sweet story with a little teen-age sex thrown in for spice, it follows the fortunes of P.Q. Bishop, who once ran a bank and now operates a laundry service on his bicycle. But most often it is a story seen through the eyes of Urie, his oldest daughter.

When Mrs. Bishop and the three teen age girls arrive in Ephesus the only house available, within their limited budget is "across the tracks." The house is worn and tattered, but they cope. (Something of the whole story line of gentile poverty reminds one of Louisa May Alcott and the Heroics of "Little Women") No heater? Tear down the back side of the barn, piece by piece. No decent clothes for the opening of school? Make an old velvet dress over. They survive . . . they argue and philosophize, they freeze and sweat, they read and learn.

Learning is the most important ... they learn to steal, among other things. But with gentility. Everything the family does is done properly, even when Mrs. Bishop is caught stealing. She goes to court in style, complete to white gloves.

It is such a long time ago, 1939, 1940, 1941 ... the years covered by the book. There is no empathy left with these times and these people. Yet this is the way life was. The situation of the Negro in this very Southern town are lightly skimmed but the problem of the "poor white" is thoroughly probed.

This is a book that should be read by those in their twenties.

Then perhaps, they would understand more why the needs and the desires of those in forties seem to be so centered on material success. This maybe what Daphne Athas is trying to convey in her charming description of Ephesus.

Cripple Creek "Strike" Richer Than Comstock

MONEY MOUNTAIN by Marshall Sprague; SEA ROUTES TO THE GOLD FIELDS by Oscar Lewis; paperbacks, Ballantine Books, $1.25 each. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Newly added to the "Comstock Editions" reprint series of western historical paperbacks are Marshall Sprague's "Money Mountain" and Oscar Lewis's "Sea Routes to the Gold Fields."

"Money Mountain" is the story of Cripple Creek, Colo., a strike far richer than Nevada's Comstock Lode through less known to most Californians. Sprague went to contemporary sources for much of his material. He did not hesitate to fictionalize some of the events, but his account loses no accuracy for this.

Oscar Lewis went into considerable detail about the vessels that brought gold seekers to California, both "around the horn" and via Panama, in "Sea Routes to the Gold Fields." The book is sometimes repetitive, but is a classic description of the migration by water, which has received much less attention than that by land.

Both are worthy additions to the paperback history shelf.

A Rambling But Revealing Look At Manson's Family

By DON KEOWN

THE FAMILY by Ed Sanders; Dutton, 412 pages, $6.95.

Ed Sanders, book dealer, poet and editor, tells us in his introduction to "The Family: The Story of Charles Manson's Dune Buggy Attack Battalion," that he spent a year and a half in the most intensive research, exploration and undercover work, gathering his material for the book.

One believes him, for certainly he has collected a multitude of facts, surmises, speculation and myths about America's most weird criminal band of the 1960s.

Unfortunately he then wastes much of that effort by demonstrating a total lack of ability to organize or to evaluate that material, and by presenting it in a pseudo-hip style that is more annoying than entertaining.

While Sanders has the credentials himself, having been associated with the Hippie movement, one suspects that the unfortunate tone and jargon is his attempt to capture the "helter skelter" theme impressed by Charles Manson upon his ragtag followers.

Still, perhaps, Sanders is only doing his own thing in his own way. In that case, publisher E. P. Dutton and Co.'s editors should have done their's — with blue pencils and scissors.

As it is, there is something of the early Jack Kerouac in Sanders' writing style, although it is not quite that unrestrained. While it worked for a time for Kerouac, the times have changed. And the style is far less appropriate for this kind of journalism than it was for Kerouac's accounts of his personal meanderings and philosophizing. In "The Family" it sounds immature and out of focus in its breeziness against the horrors that are being described.

More than once, one finds himself wishing for a glossary or a translator to put the slang into the kind of language one might better expect from the holder of a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Greek.

Even more critical is Sanders' seeming incapability of distinguishing between what is relevant and what is irrelevant to the sordid and chilling saga of the mad Manson clan. Instead, he serves it all up to us — facts that are essential to the bloody Manson story, facts that are connected only indirectly, and facts that appear to have no connection or relevancy whatsoever — plus a considerable amount of material that is not fact at all. There is room for speculation and surmisal in this kind of book, and it can even make a valuable contribution to the understanding of the subjects. But Sanders, too often, simply tosses his in, without support or explanation.

All this is served up as a sort of mishmash in which the chronology is often hopelessly confused. And for all the immense amount of material he has gathered so laboriously, Sanders still leaves us with disconcerting gaps in the Manson story. And with key questions that go unanswered.

Is there, then, any real reason for reading "The Family"?

Rather surprisingly, the answer is yes. For with all its faults, the book does contain an almost astonishing amount of of information about how, and occasionally even why, one band of young Americans went off on a rampage of murder and other crimes, committing those acts with a deliberation and calculation that justifies to a degree at least Sanders claim that these were "ritual" slayings.

One will have to ignore Sanders' aggravating style and endure the disorganization of the book. And one will have to make his own judgments as to the validity of some of the author's theses.

Just how much influence did such occult and pseuco--religious groups as the English-born Process Church of the Final Judgment exercise upon the sleazy Manson and his unstable band? Just how close were the ties maintained by Manson with the professional underworld from his earlier prison years? Were Manson and his gang Hippies? We are told Manson hated Hippies, and yet later on Sanders refers to them as such. How big a part in the mad schemes of Manson and his "family" did their irrational hatred and fear of the Black Panthers play, and how much of that stemmed from the same dark roorts of racial prejudice that lurk in most of us?

In retrospect, it appears that Manson, for all the resemblances in life style to the offbeat cults, to crime rings, to the communes and to the professional criminals, borrowed most from the gangs of motorcycle toughs with whom he associated and whom he tried to use. The utter ruthlessness and mindlessness with which the Tait and LaBianca slaughters were carried out seems indicative of some such Nazi-like influence.

There was also a link between Manson and Southern California's celebrity strata that perhaps played a role in the Tait killings particularly. Sanders gives us the names of only a few such personalities who were involved with Manson, but hints that there were others.

And again, there is the theory that the Manson ring's involvement in dope, both as users and traffickers, might have provided the motives and the impetus.

Sanders is never able to give us clearcut reasons for the crazed actions and weird beliefs of the "family." Instead, he simply covers all bases and suggests at various points all possibilities. Even the war in Vietnam rates a mention, although it seems possible that Charles Manson was less affected by it than any other American.

Anyway, there it is — all the dirt that Ed Sanders could dig up about the meanest, filthiest, maddest, most dangerous, most fanatical group of social outlaws this country produced in the past decade. The author has obscured his information with misinformation, innuendo, insinuation, irrelevancy and some substances difficult to identify, and put it all together in an irritating manner and a confusing disarray.

But somewhere there among that disorder is "The Story of Charles Manson's Dune Buggy Attack Battalion" as promised in the sub-title — or at least a good part of it.

And it becomes apparent that Charles Manson and his scruffy, giggling gang of obsessed psychotic killers and looters pose the acid test for those of us opposed to capital punishment. Manson is a made-to-order argument for the zealots who insist upon an eye-for-an-eye. Believe the life of Manson worth sparing ahd you are, indeed, a committed foe of the gas chamber. So even this unspeakably evil, and no doubt half-mad, man might be said to be serving a social purpose.

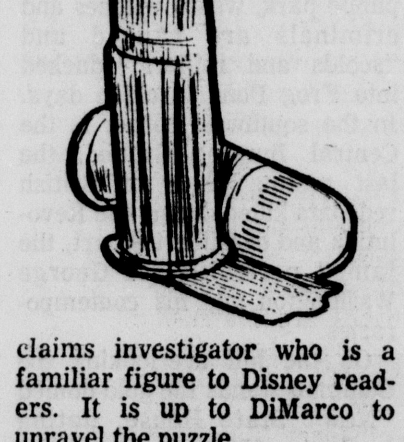
THE CHANDLER POLICY by Doris Miles Disney; Putnam, 188 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Doris Miles Disney has built up a large following, mostly female, with her well-crafted novels in which she places a heroine in trouble and then lets her character fight and flounder her way out of her distress, usually with the help of a strong male.

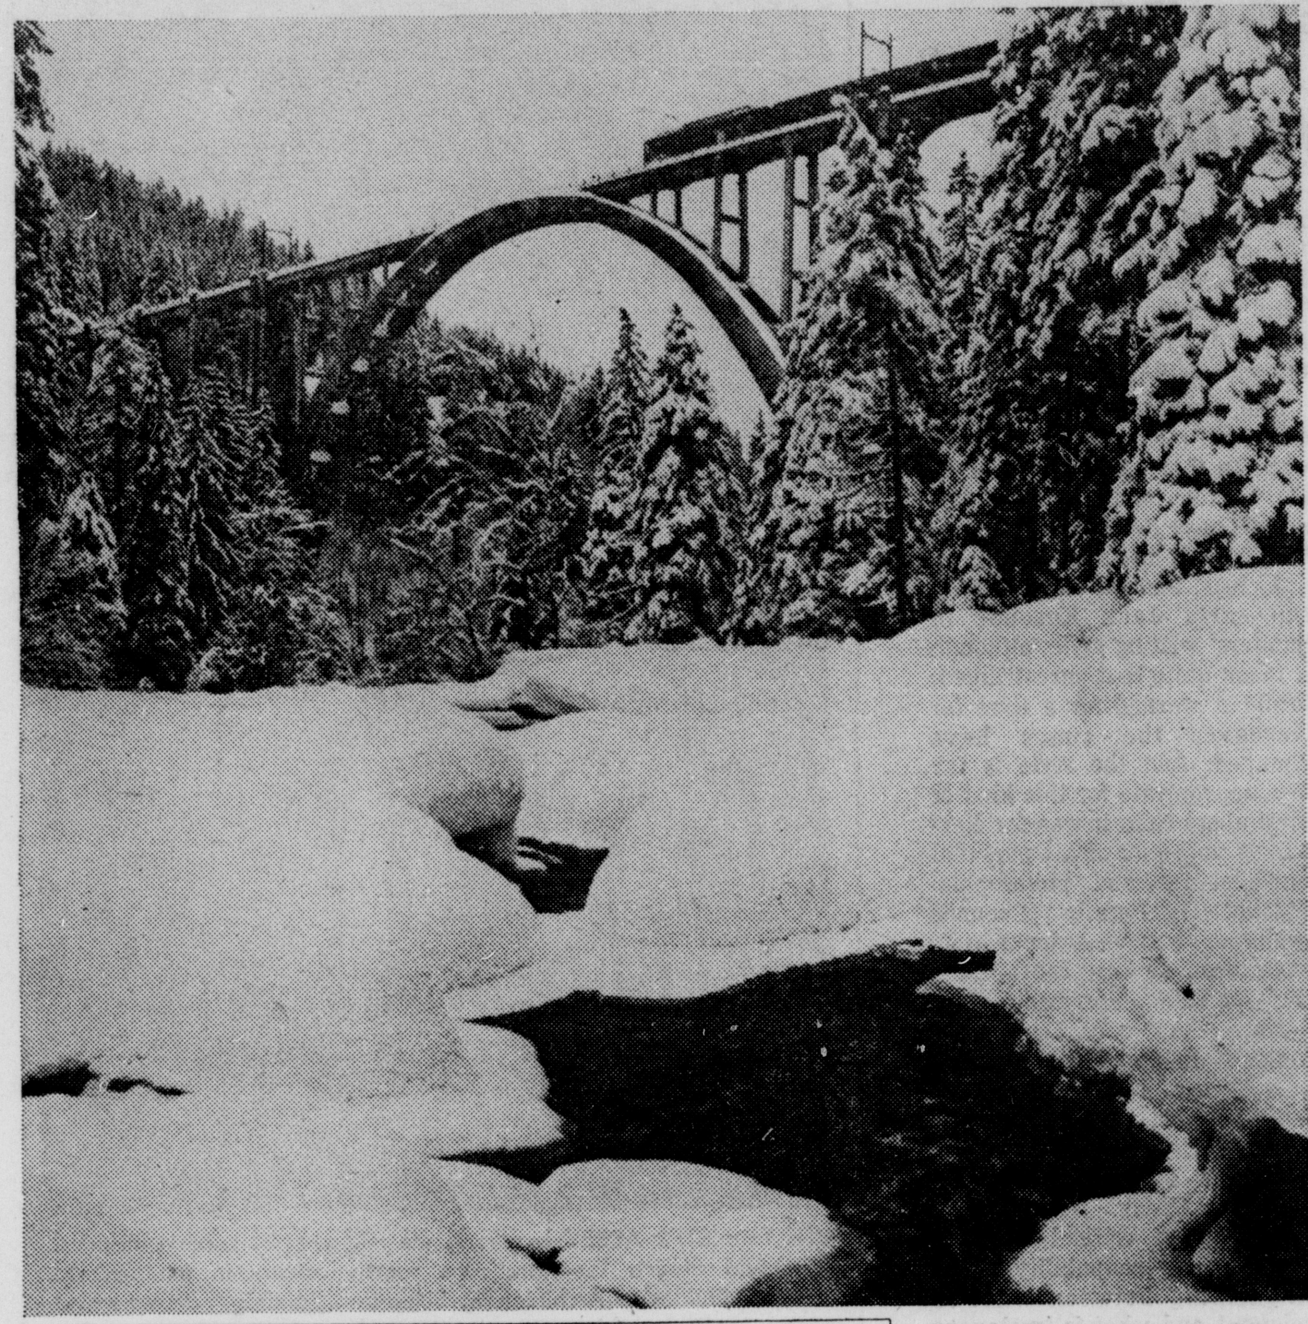
"The Chandler Policy" follows that loose formula. Hilda Nielsen, middle-aged widow, befriends a strange man, who later turns up wounded, and then disappears.

Coming to the aid of Hilda, and into the life of the missing or dead man's wife or widow, is Jeff DiMarco, the insurance claims investigator who is a familiar figure to Disney readers. It is up to DiMarco to unravel the puzzle.



Unfortunately this usually reliable author is not at her best with this novel and it is likely to disappoint many of her fans.

Mountain Climbing The Easy Way



A TYPICAL railroad bridge seen throughout Switzerland is proof that the Swiss have conquered extremely difficult terrain to provide transportation. As a result passengers have memorable views of some of the most scenic sections of the country.

Switzerland is said to be situated in the heart of Europe. While this may be true figuratively speaking, geographically the country will be found to occupy a position slightly lower down, in the stomach region, as it were, of the continent.

Be that as it may, about one fact there is general agreement: Switzerland is a country criss-crossed by mountain chains whose sole purpose seems to be to act as a barrier to traffic.

THIS LATTER, however, does not care in the least: it simply passes underneath or climbs over the wall. Indeed, railway tunnels as well as pass roads have slyly overcome the barriers formed by the mountains.

The tunnels take care of the people who are in a hurry, the mountain passes allure those in quest of unusual sights. Their wish is easily fulfilled: the train takes them close to the mountains, where the yellow postal coach takes charge, whisks them over one or several passes and delivers them to the railway again.

Most often the postal routes in the Alps serve as feeder lines between railways. In some instances they link side valleys dear to the tourist's heart, such as the Val d'Herens, the Val d'Anniviers and the Saas Valley in the canton of Valais, or the Val Bregaglia and the Val Mustair in the Grisons, to a railway station.

An excursion over a mountain pass on board a postal motor coach is one of the most rewarding experiences Switzerland has to offer to tourists. An astonishing variety of scenery unfolds as we travel along; first the plains, then the gradual ascent towards the mountains, the alpine pastures, sparkling mountain brooks and lakes, sheer rocks, deep-cut gorges spanned by bold bridges, snow and ice, and green meadows again as we descend on the other side.

HERE AND there a colorful village or hamlet dots the landscape, or a hut lost in the wilderness, and higher up the lofty and remote grandeur of the Alps pervades the scene.

But there is no need to be scared. You can fully rely on the postal coach, and above all on its driver, who knows his vehicle and his track through and through and is not afraid of his responsibility.

Mountain climbing the hard way is not everybody's business. But thanks to Switzerland's modern transport facilities all better-known passes and many lofty peaks are made accessible to old and young alike. Offering people an opportunity to discover a new world is a most gratifying task indeed. The Swiss Postal Coach Service does everything it can to make the tourist's travelling experience as pleasurable as possible.

Boston Preserves Links To History

By MURRAY J. BROWN

(BOSTON) — Despite what you may have heard, Boston is more than the home of the bean and the cod where the Lowells speak only to the Cabots and the Cabots talk only to God.

It's an interesting city which can offer visitors a wide variety of attractions and activities.

I found that out again during a recent visit to Boston which, while growing into a modern metropolis, has jealously preserved its links to its proud past.

YOU DON'T have to be a history buff to enjoy walking along the meandering 1½-mile Freedom Trail through the downtown section of the city.

The trail starts at Boston Common, the country's oldest public park, where witches and criminals are hanged and "scolds and raillers" ducked into Frog Pond in olden days. In the southwest corner is the Central Burying Ground, the last resting place of British redcoats killed during the Revolution and of Gilbert Stuart, the famed portraitist of George Washington and his contemporaries.

On the hill overlooking the Common stands the gold-domed "New" State House, dating back to 1795, designed by Charles Bulfinch of Boston, who was one of the finest architects of his time.

ACROSS the street from the Common is the Park Street Church, where abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison spoke out so strongly against slavery, and the Granary Burying Ground. The headstones read like history — Samuel Adams, John Hancock, Paul Revere, victims of the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770, Benjamin Franklin's parents, Mary Goose, known to the world as "Mother Goose."

Then there is the King's Chapel, with its square tower, built in 1754 — the first Episcopal church in Boston and, after the War of the Revolution, the first Unitarian church in the new United States. Gunpowder was stored in its cellars during the War of 1812.

A marker on School St. denotes the site of the country's first public school, whose pupils included young Ben Franklin, Cotton Mather and Ralph Waldo Emerson. Nearby is the Old South Meeting House, which dates back to 1728, where angry colonists hatched the Boston Tea Party to protest "taxation without representation."

Other highlights on the trail include the Old State House with a ring of stones outside circling the site of the Boston Massacre; Faneuil Hall, known as "The Cradle of Liberty"

Hints For First Time Travelers

If you are planning a holiday abroad for the first time, your travel agent can be a valuable source of information. Their counseling usually includes some of the more basic information that can head off frustrations and add to one's enjoyment of a European vacation.

Prepared by TWA travel advisors, here are some helpful hints aimed especially at first-time travelers and those whose budgets allow no margin for unnecessary spending.

AT SOME airports you are likely to observe a fleet of vehicles whose owners are ready to relieve you of your luggage and whisk you to your hotel. Don't succumb unless you are prepared to pay double the price of a metered cab for the same journey. Better yet, board the regular airport coach; average charge in most cities, one to two dollars.

On arrival, convert five to ten dollars into local currency for ground transport, tipping and other miscellaneous needs.

Establish your hotel rate on arrival and ask if the tariff includes taxes, service and continental breakfast. Don't be timid about asking to see the accommodations and satisfying yourself that the rate is the one quoted to you by your travel agent, or whoever arranged your booking.

RELY ON the hotel concierge if want directions anywhere, if you want to know when the museums are open or if you are in the market for theatre tickets. An obliging concierge can be indispensible in sorting out your problems and acting on your requests.

Better than a wake-up call (that the switchboard operator may simply forget) is your own travel alarm clock, especially if you have a flight to catch or a train to board in the early morning.

Don't convert large sums of money beyond your estimated requirements, otherwise you may find yourself with a surplus and no way of getting back dollars.

CONDUCT ALL your financial transactions at banks or other authorized money-changing centers. Know the current rate of exchange and watch for any discrepancies.

Don't feel obligated to tip the bellboy who picks up your suit for pressing and another who delivers it a few hours later. It's rarely the same individual — the rotation system is designed to provide tips for both pickup and delivery service.

Ask the hotel for your statement a few hours before checkout time, or settle your account the night before if you are planning a morning getaway. This will give you a chance to rectify any errors and allow you to convert dollars to the amount of your bill, unless you are using a credit card for payment.

DON'T BE surprised if the hotel staff forms a small queue to bid you a fond farewell. But, if service is included (and generally it is), you don't have to go on a tipping spree to satisfy all the smiling figures that suddenly appear. However, if the maid did a quick repair on your wife's dress, or if you had other extra services, you will want to dole out a proper gratuity. And, don't overlook the concierge if he responded to your many requests.

Avoid touts on the streets trying to steer you to second-class shops, or offering to exchange dollars at high rates of return.

GENEOLOGY

Old records yield such meager facts
To make ancestors live again.
Just names and dates cannot conjure
The love they felt, the joy, the pain.

Who cares the nature of these men,
That bore the name today I bear?
Why delve so deep into the past
To find the common bond we share?

Though now they sleep 'neath grasses green;
In country graveyards neatly filed.
Their hopes and dreams have now become
The heritage I give my child.

SAN RAFAEL — HELEN COTTON WATSON

APOLLO, an All-America award winning rose is a soft yellow hybrid tea rose on a strong, sturdy bush, with classic blooms of delicate sunrise yellow suffused with shadings of red, often five to six inches across.

PORTRAIT, another All-America award winner, is a pink hybrid tea rose which has fragrant two-tone pink flowers and more than ordinary resistance to disease. The urn-shaped buds open to a combination of rich pink outer petals and a creamy, shrimp pink center.

Growing Herbs Is Practical

Freshness is written all over home-grown Herbs. Anyone who has crushed some Thyme and savored its fragrance, or that of fresh-picked Parsley, knows there is no comparison between these and their store-bought counterparts.

The fragrance of Herbs that come right out of the garden into the cooking pot adds to the fun of growing them.

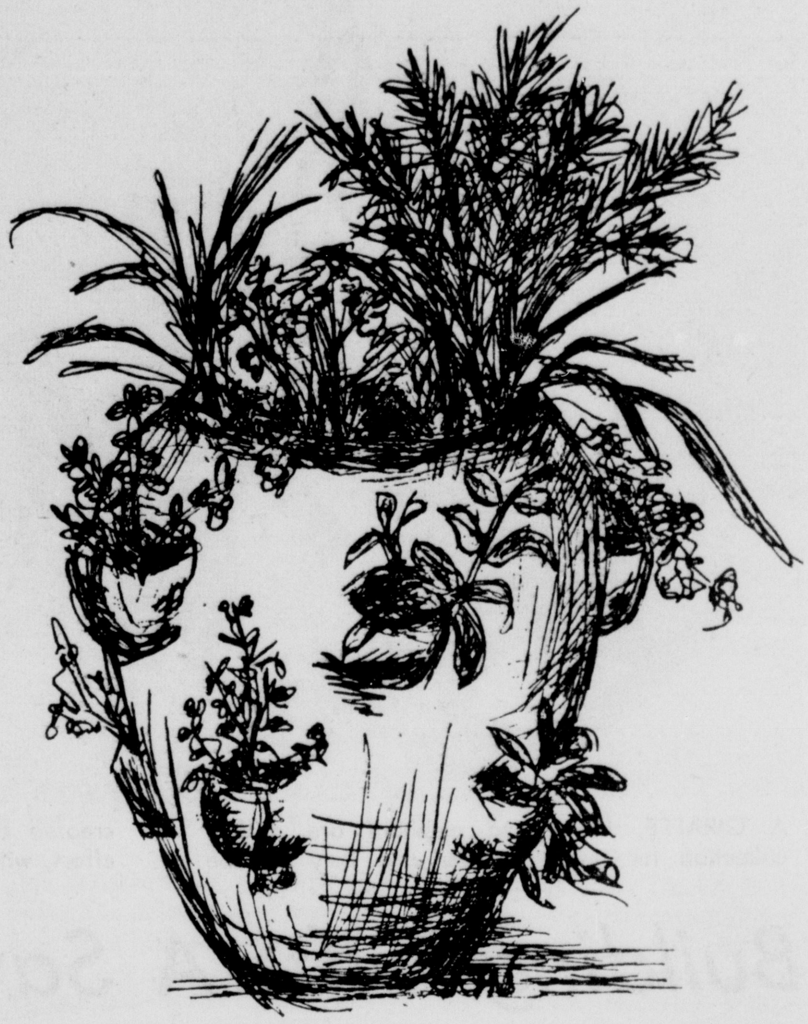
If you like to cook, or appreciate good food, a Herb garden of your own is a practical endeavor. You can be as elaborate as you wish, but actually the space required to grow Herbs is minimal.

POTS WILL do the job for you, as will a planter box or a small corner of a flower bed. Most Herbs are as nice to look at as they are to eat, so growing them near the outdoor living area—or with easy access to the kitchen—is something to consider.

Apartment dwellers and residents in mobile homes can grow and display Herbs in pots or in containers mounted against a wall or fence. They are attractive grown in strawberry jars or barrels. The Herbs are close by for cooking purposes—and are refreshing decorations.

IN THE garden, don't overlook Herbs for interesting accents. Parsley, for instance, is a lovely border for a bed of flowering annuals. As a border unto itself or as a circle at the base of a tree, Parsley looks as fresh as it tastes.

Mint is a veteran of plantings near a water faucet where its breath can be savored whenever the gardener turns on the hose. Nurserymen suggest confining its roots in a container, however, since it is rapid to spread. Garnish salads and cool drinks with Mint and watch the pleasing smiles come forth on the faces of your guests.



HERBS CAN be grown and displayed handsomely in pots, planter boxes, or in containers mounted against a wall or fence.

NURSERIES have a wide selection of Herbs for planting now. Selections include the standbys of the kitchen: Thyme, Marjoram, Rosemary, Sage, Savory and Sweet Basil, plus others such as Oregano and a myriad of mint choices. The plants are well-established in nursery containers and are easily transplanted into other containers, or into the garden, where you can start enjoying immediately the luxury of fresh herbs in your cooking.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Many cool season vegetables are available as seedling transplants in nurseries. Onion seeds may be sown, or sets planted now for next spring and summer's crops.

✓ You can green-up the fall lawn and give it new life with a feeding this month. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper lawn food for the type turf you have.

✓ The planting season is in full swing for spring-blooming bulbs. Hurry to get the varieties and colors you wish to add cheer to your mid-winter and spring garden. Nurseries have large selections to choose from right now.

✓ Improve drainage in poorly-drained beds by raising the soil level. This is simply done by "boxing" the bed with layers of bricks or one-by-six or one-by-eight headerboards.

✓ Treat yourself and your garden to some blooming Chrysanthemums. The autumnal hues add warmth to the indoor decor and, in the garden, are welcome sights for all who view them.

Garden Page

Perfect Basic Element

The picture of a perfect lawn to us is one that contains two basic elements: grass and trees.

Not that you can't have a fine lawn with grass alone, but the addition of one or more trees often breaks up the rectangular effect and enhances the setting.

CHOOSING THE right tree for your lawn is as important as choosing the right kind of lawn seed. Modern landscape practice dictates the planting of small to medium size trees that will not overpower the landscape.

A favorite for this reason is the European White Birch. This white-barked deciduous tree is most effectively planted in groups of three at four to six feet apart. Growth is slender and graceful, the pendulous branches having a light, airy look about them.

You can search a long way before finding a better lawn tree than the Sweet Gum.

THIS IS A real journeyman in California gardens, a specimen tree that takes to the foreground or background with equal success. It is one of the few that really colors up in mild winter sections before dropping its leaves. Growth is tall, moderate. Leaves are maple-like and attractive spring through fall.

Poppies Easy To Grow

No flower pops up much faster than the California poppy. Broadcast the seeds where you want the flowers and, almost before you know it, there they are.

This flower is the perfect answer to what to grow in that hot, sunny spot where the soil is clear sand.

YOU don't even have to plant seeds each year because California poppies seed themselves.

And they're so striking in their brilliant colors that the place you selected to plant them will be one of the beauty spots in your garden.

There are single, semi-double and double-flowered California poppies. Those with the additional petals are, perhaps, a bit more effective, especially at a distance.

THE traditional colors are yellow and orange but nowadays to those must be added pink, copper, scarlet, rose, amber and white.

Aurantica is the original California poppy. A good mixture with single flowers is named Sunset, Mission Bells strain produces both semi-double and double blooms and for largest, blinding orange flowers, choose the variety Honolulu.

All through the summer and into fall California poppies will open in your garden. Few flowers are so easily grown.

Bougainvillea In New Colors

Bougainvillea comes in many newer colors which are earning wide appeal.

Whatever the color — the familiar red magenta pink or orange — there's no mistaking that the plant is Bougainvillea. All the colors are bright and the shrubs bloom profusely.

Heavy watering of these sun-loving vines produces lush growth but less vivid flower color. You can remedy this by watering less during the long blooming season.

A GIRAFFE, horse and elephant are a fine collection for any youngster and they can be created by a handyman with a little time and effort, with some fun in the doing.

Building Gifts A Saver

By STEVE ELLINGSON

It's nice once a year to empty out your pockets for somebody special . . . but if you have six children, a dozen cousins and nine friendly neighbors, you'd have to apply for Federal aid to make every Christmas gifts as priceless as you'd like.

So what to do? Get out your hammer and saw, of course. In a few evenings and a weekend or two, you yourself can build gifts for everybody on your list. It's surprising how easy and how fast you can do it, once you get started.

THREE IDEAL homemade gifts are pictured here with young Eric Gordon. A few scraps of wood and the full-size patterns are all you need to complete any one or all of them.

The giraffe makes a dandy place to hang up small jackets, hats and things of that kind. It has a whisk broom tail — just the thing for keeping clothes brushed. And, of course, every little tyke needs a rocking horse, or better yet, a rocking elephant.

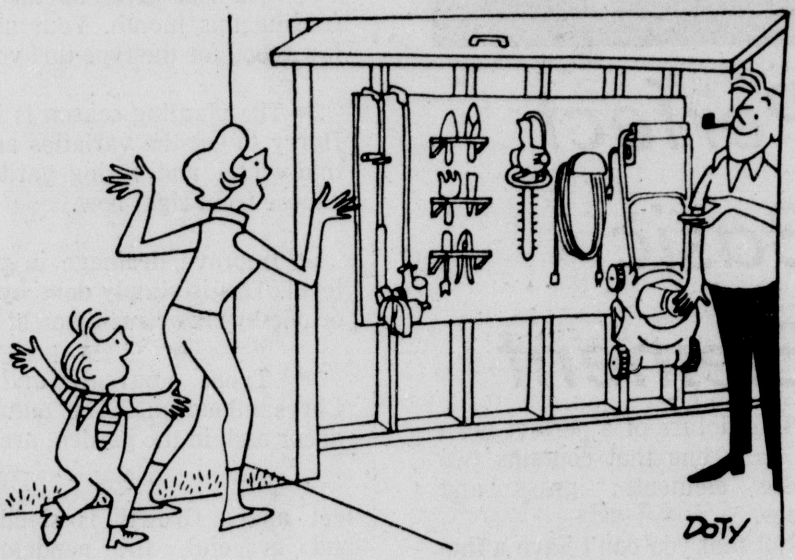
To build any one of the little animals pictured here, you need only to trace the full-size patterns on wood, then saw out the parts and put them together.

Painting is easy, all that's necessary is to trace the features such as the eyes, nose, bridle, or giraffe spots on the wood, then paint over the tracings.

ANY NOVICE can do it, and I might add, with great success. The patterns list the required materials and give step-by-step directions along with helpful illustrations.

To build all three of the little animals pictured just sent $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2382, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409, and ask for Patterns 56113.

Cement Tiles To Ceiling



One of the quickest and most economical ways to repair a plasterboard ceiling is not to. Instead of laborious patching operations it can be simpler to install a new tile ceiling.

In a situation like this, if the old ceiling is still relatively smooth though somewhat unsightly, new tiles can be cemented directly to the plasterboard. This type of installation is fast and easy.

Plasterboard, sometimes called dry wall or sheet rock, can develop several unfortunate maladies as a ceiling material. Seams can separate and become visible, and nail heads pop into view. Leaks may cause dark water spots to appear.

REPAIR STEPS might include leveling, countersinking nails, mixing and applying plaster, taping seams, and painting.

On the other hand, tiling over a plasterboard ceiling is a task that any reasonably handy man or woman, for that matter, can do with a minimum of tools and supplies.

What's more, doing the job yourself saves on labor costs — no small consideration in today's economy.

The Armstrong Cork Company estimates that the ceiling of a 12 by 15 foot room can be covered with its Chandelier acoustical tiles for as little as $65, including adhesive.

To install, daub Armstrong ceiling cement on the four corners and center of a tile. Press the tile into position on the ceiling.

The tiles have tongue-and-groove joints to facilitate assembly.

To hold a tile in place while the cement "sets up," put two staples in each exposed flange. Staple guns can be purchased or rented inexpensively (or sometimes borrowed) from the building supply store where the tiles are bought.

The finished ceiling is not only pleasing to look at but adds comfort to a room from the standpoint of sound conditioning.

Handyman's Pages

Screens, Plants Save Side Yard

In many neighborhoods, houses are built only five feet away from one side property line.

The plan allows generous space for garden or terrace on the opposite side of the house and at the rear, but what to do with that five-foot-wide strip puzzles many homeowners.

Even though space is restricted, the side yard can become a charming garden with the help of a screen, a path and a few well chosen plantings.

THE PATH will be needed for access around the house, the screen as a boundary marker and backdrop, and the plantings for effect.

A number of different materials could be used for the path — crushed rock, brick, flagstone. Or it could be made of rectangular building blocks, sunken so their top surface projects no more than a half inch above ground.

Spacing between the blocks should be close, for nothing is more disconcerting than having to hopscotch over widely separated stepping stones. Laying them in a neat, straight line is best, too, perhaps broken at the mid-point by a cluster of four blocks to make a short of landing.

THE PROPERTY line screen will be all-important in determining appearance of the side yard. If there are no urgent privacy requirements, it should be low and in a pattern that renders clean, crisp lines with strong shadow patterns.

An excellent effect is produced by four-foot-tall slat screening built of cedar two-by-twos . When two-by-twos alternate with spacings of equal width, the pattern is particularly trim, yet open and almost delicate. Spacer blocks, cut from two-by-twos and nailed to top and bottom rails, will do the job.

A nice bit of detail can be added with lengths of one-by-one-inch cedar used as a molding over the joint between slats and rails. If a molding piece is added, cut spacer blocks long enough to be seen.

Frequently, side yard screening is abruptly terminated by a gate set at the far corner of the house. The result is harsh, and the narrow side yard becomes tunnel-like.

INSTEAD OF the gate, two additional sections of the screen can be built, set at right angles to each other. One section would be an eight-foot-long continuation of the side panel screening, but stepped up to a six-foot height.

The other panel, matching in height and length, would turn the corner past the house.

The right-angled panels will give complete privacy to the back yard, just as a gate does.

In planting the side garden, restraint is the most important ingredient. A minimum number of plant materials here make the best showing if care is taken to contrast foliage texture and color, as well as heights and masses. A flowering fruit tree, of dwarf variety, can make an exciting accent espaliered against the screen, and thick, fluffy groundcovers like English ivy and periwinkle can be used if planted in low containers to restrict growth.

IN THE corner, where the screen turns past the house, use one bold piece, and plant a shade tree behind the screen, just near enough to it so that some branches will overhang.

Consult your nurseryman in selecting a tree that will grow to the approximate height you desire, and not get out of hand. And one that does not create too great a problem when it drops its leaves.

There are a number that meet these requirements and which thrive in Marin.

Papering The Piano

A reader tells us he rejuvenated an old piano by covering it with wallpaper which blended with the paper on the wall of the room in which the piano was located. He said the wallpaper didn't hold too well until he discovered that it was necessary to roughen the surface of the piano by sanding it lightly.

Carport Adds Bonus Areas

More than just car shelter, a carport should be designed also to provide storage and activity areas and enhance the looks of house and yard.

The new structure should relate to the house in style and color, although the materials may differ. For instance a well-planned carport of western wood will complement a brick house.

If the garage has been converted into new living space, or if the carport is to shelter a second car, it can be placed in front of the garage. This utilizes the existing driveway.

THE CARPORT can be placed directly in front of the house, but careful styling, landscaping and construction are vital to overall appearance.

If the carport is to be part of a sundeck, patio, pool or other activity area, keep in mind the direction of the sun's rays, prevailing winds and view angles or privacy.

A carport provides a wealth of storage possibilities, built-in along one or several walls, above the rafters, or as covered parking for bicycles and outdoor equipment.

Electric Plug To Halt Hazard

Over eight decades have passed since Thomas Edison introduced the phenomenon of his electric light to an amazed world.

In many ways electricity remains a mystery to man, yet it is an essential part of our contemporary society. However, at the flick of a switch electricity can become a killer. Perhaps the figure of approximately 1000 lives per year being taken by electric shock is not so staggering, considering that over 200 million people live in this country.

Nevertheless, it is still a wanton and needless waste of human life.

MANY means are being employed to reduce shock fatalities and one such method is the 3-wire plug. The third wire of this plug acts as what is called a ground conductor and serves as one of the protective means for the device.

Such protection is accomplished through the ability of the wire to force the fuse or circuit breakers to "blow," thereby eliminating any shock hazard. Though originally found primarily on power tools, 3-wire plugs are now used on many appliances.

WHEN a situation arises regarding "blowing" fuses or circuit breakers, it should be emphasized that this happens for your protection. There is nothing wrong with the fuse.

The fault lies elsewhere; either with the appliance which forces this reaction or because the circuit has been overloaded.

In either case, the fuse is just doing its job of protecting you and warning that something is wrong. Should an instance occur wherein there is a fault in an appliance but a fuse doesn't "blow", the appliance becomes an extreme hazard as it remains "live".

THEREFORE, if one were to contact the "live" metal enclosure of that appliance and something which is grounded (radiator, refrigerator, water pipe, etc.), shock and possible electrocution could result.

Perhaps your home is not equipped with grounding type receptacles. If this is the case, an adapter is available to accommodate the 3-wire plug. But always make sure the green grounding lead of the adapter is connected to the faceplate of the receptacle.

Another point to be remembered is never to remove the ground pin from a 3-wire plug. This would allow the plug to be used in a 2-hole receptacle, but the protective capability is rendered useless.

In offering the above information, Underwriters' Laboratories sincerely hopes you gain a better understanding of some of the many ways electricity can become your master.

Garage To Sauna

One of the many nice things about a sauna is that it can be added almost any place in the house — at the end of a hallway, in a closet or even in the garage.

Along with remodeling their house one couple revamped a detached garage into a garden house, with a family-size sauna, swimming pool bathhouse, and a study.

This is a pleasant and practical combination. The family and their guests have found a swim after the sauna can be relaxing as well as cooling. And the sauna is just a few steps from the study, handy for unwinding after catching up with office work or balancing the family budget.

THE SAUNA essentially is a hot-air bath of high heat and low humidity that relaxes and cleanses the bather by inducing perspiration.

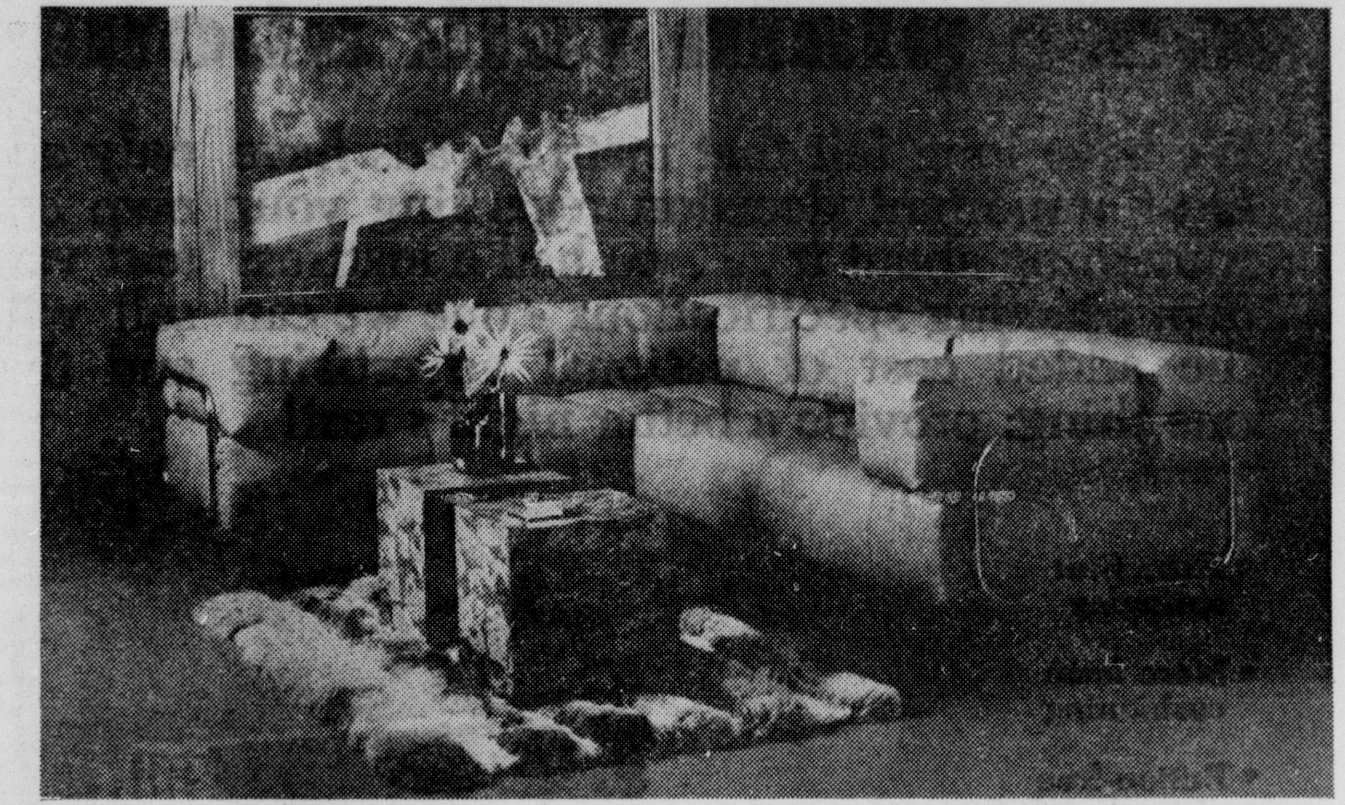
City dwellers and rural residents alike throughout the country have discovered life can be beautiful at 185 degrees Fahrenheit in a sauna, even though they may wilt outside when the mercury's in the 90s. The secret is the relative humidity, never over 20 percent, sometimes as low as six to eight percent in the sauna room.

The reason a sauna can be added so easily in almost any location is that no plumbing is required. Just room enough for at least one person and a heater to dash water onto occasionally.

TO BUILD a sauna you need lumber — western red cedar and Idaho white pine are popular with professional builders — the heater and the controls.

In the garden house sauna, the floors are one by four inch cedar laid flat, the door and walls are lined with cedar boards, and the benches are of two by four inch cedar laid flat.

Many designers prefer western cedar as it does not stain as readily as some other species, does not shrink, retains its attractive appearance and aroma and is cooler to sit on as it doesn't absorb as much heat.



A COMPACT sleeping area can fill the bill when unexpected visitors arrive or when spare rooms are not available, and with some imagination serve a double use in the waking hours.

A Foamy Convertible Bed

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Looking for a way to get more sleep space in a well-packed interior? You may have to do some creative shopping, but there are some fresh kinds of convertible sleeping ideas hitting the consumer level.

Thanks to contemporary Italian designers, one school of thought evolved. They began playing with upholstered blocks of foam. So many blocks made a seating area; so many smaller blocks provided backrests, another block provides a resting place for the arms of the sitter.

THEY STARTED clipping these foam forms together with giant steel clips — like big paper clips — and occasionally they would add legs as support, but the basic concept was for all the components to settle right on the floor in a no-nonsense approach to interiors.

It didn't take long for American designers to pick up the idea and take it another yard or two. Now, several manufacturers have added the sleep-ability to the concept.

One example is Craft Originals. They've developed an 86-inch sofa with a seat-sleep surface 37½ inches wide. The chunky bolsters and armrests cut that width down to a comfortable sitting depth during the day. By pairing the sofa with a 74-inch love seat, as shown, Craft makes it possible for the homeowner or apartment dweller to create a compact L-shape grouping spacious enough for two adults to stretch full length.

ANOTHER SIMILAR concept is being offered by Simmons, the people who created the original hideaway sofa. They skip all the hidden mechanisms for their newer sleep unit and follow the removable bolster idea. Again the big clip of steel works to hold bolsters in position. Simmons also has a daybed product that has a slight pitch for seating, an extra comfort factor.

When you make up this bolstered sofa bed at night, why not skip the usual tuck-in sheets. Try a bedroll approach. I've mentioned this before and have had friends live successfully with bedrolls at home.

The day you change linens, merely place the fresh sheets and blankets on the unbolstered surface; folding back hems and perhaps adding an extra top sheet to cover the blanket. The next morning simply fold the linens in half, vertically, and start rolling from top to bottom. Pillows and bedroll can be tucked into a cupboard until the next evening. There's a knack to it — but once mastered, it's a cinch and easy on the housekeeper.

I think children would be more easily conned into housework if such systems were evolved for everyday bedmaking. I, for one, have stopped using heavy bedspreads atop my bed linens. Colored sheets are decorative enough for me and they save energy morning and evening.

PRELUDE TO CEREMONY

Supporters of San Anselmo's controversial "mundialization" commitment joined hands outside city hall yesterday to hoist a flag pole that will fly the United Nations banner, symbol of the world citizenship concept. The pole, acquired through donations when the city found it was improper under U.N. regulations to fly the U.N. and American flag on the same pole, officially will be dedicated at 3:15 p.m. tomorrow, despite objections from opponents of mundialization. Raising the pole, alongside the American and California flags, are (from left) Rick Klein, Paul Hiding and Nils Eriksson.

JEWISH COMMITTEE

Rock Opera Under Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The popular rock-opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" is potentially harmful to improved Jewish-Christian relations, the American Jewish Committee said today.

The committee released a line-by-line study of the current New York production of the pop musical version of the Passion of Christ. The study was done by a Presbyterian and concluded:

"But in arbitrarily laying nearly all the blame (for Christ's death) on a group which the viewer knows to be Jewish whether the text says so or not, 'Jesus Christ Superstar' is, if nothing else, insufficiently thoughtful, potentially mischievous and possibly a backward step on the road toward improved Christian-Jewish relations."

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, national director of interreligious affairs for the AJC, was even stronger in his comments about the study.

He said the rock-opera, "despite all its advance acclaim, is potentially harmful as an instrument of anti-Jewish prejudice.

The study was done for the AJC by Gerald S. Strober, a former Presbyterian pastor who is currently a consultant to the committee on interreligious education.

"'Jesus Christ Superstar' unambiguously lays the primary responsibility for Jesus' suffering and crucifixion to the Jewish priesthood," Strober said.

"The priests are portrayed as hideously inhuman and satantically evil: Contemptuous, callous and bloodthirsty," the study said, adding: "There is no warrant in the New Testament either for the attribution of primary guilt or for the caricatured characterization."

Strober points out that for almost all of the lines attributed to the Jewish priesthood and which paint the priesthood in such negative terms, there is no Biblical support.

He cites, as one example, the lines in the scene entitled "Judas' Death" in which it is suggested the priests savagely beat Jesus before his death.

He cited several Gospel verses to show that Jesus apparently was struck but that the blow was "insulting rather than disasbling, and the Gospel accounts do not agree on who struck it."

"There is no shred of evidence that Jesus was ever subjected to a purposeful, savage beating by any of the priests or at their order," Strober said.

In sharp contrast to the view of the Jewish priesthood, Strober said, is the portrayal of Pontius Pilate.

"If the play weights and scales against the priesthood over and above what the New Testament accounts warrant, it lightens them beyond all the evidence for the other chief agent in the trial of Jesus: The Roman governor, Pontius Pilate," he said.

Strober said the play casts Pilate as "a rather weak but well-meaning man who sympathizes with Jesus from the moment he meeets him and is kept from helping him only by the demands of the mob."

His study said that most of the play's characterization of Pilate is unscriptural and nonhistorical, "designed to minimize his role in Jesus' scourging, trial and death and thereby maximize that of Jesus' Jewish antagonists ..."

"Roman and other sources," he said, "leave no doubt that Pilate was an exceptionally harsh governor even by the far from lenient stanards of Roman occupation government."

Strober did say, however, that the play "avoids the worst pitfalls into which earlier works of the type have fallen."

"It does not repeat the myth of the Jews as Christ killers codemned by God for all time; it does not claim that all Jews of Jesus' time knew him and forsook him."

But Strober did conclude the play "is less than fair in depicting the role of Jewish individuals and institutions in the passion of Jesus, as we know it from the New Testament."

And he said the play "bypasses the transcendental meaning of the Passion.

"Christian belief holds that all humans —then, now and always, —contribute to Jesus' suffering by their sins," he said.

Buses May Roll Dec. 6

The Golden Gate Bridge District has set Dec. 6 as the tentative date for launching its fleet of 154 luxury buses which will carry Marin and Sonoma commuters to and from San Francisco, Dale W. Luehring, district general manager, said today.

The system will replace Greyhound's failing 103-bus commute service, which lost approximately 600,000 passengers in the past year, Luehring said. The bus firm has asked the state Public Utilities Commission for permission to discontinue the unprofitable service on or shortly after Dec. 1 and current plans call for Greyhound to operate through midnight Dec. 5.

Luehring repeated long-standing promises today that the bridge district would provide more comfortable, dependable buses, as well as a greater frequency of service and more bus routes into the neighborhoods.

(Routes will be set Wednesday at a meeting of the bridge board's transportation committee, with frequency of service and fares to be considered by the district's transportation and finance committees at a later date.)

The district's initial goal is to serve 6,000 commuters each day, compared to the approximately 4,000 now served by Greyhound.

The district has purchased 132 new luxury buses from General Motors and will lease 20 of Greyhound's newer vehicles, with an eye to replacing those with "even better buses, possibly with gasoline turbine engines, in a year or so," the general manager said. Two buses now serving the Sausalito ferry will also be a part of the fleet.

All the newly purchased vehicles will feature fewer and more comfortable seats and

British Troops Kill Sisters In Belfast

Pair Uses Disguise In Attack

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British soldiers today shot and killed two sisters they said wore men's clothes and attacked troops with gunfire and nail bombs from a car, an army spokesman said. A third woman in the car was wounded.

Police identified the dead sisters as Mrs. Mary Ellen Meehan, 30, and Miss Dorothy Maguinre, 19. An army spokesman said both wore men's British-type blazers.

"The troops were involved in a small search of two houses when a car came around the corner," the army spokesman said. "Two shots from the car were directed at the soldiers."

He said the soldiers fired back, hitting the car, which continued up the street, turned right on Ross Street and crashed. A hostile crowd prevented the soldiers from recovering the bodies. An ambulance team recovered them.

The spokesmen said a third woman in the car was wounded. Another woman, not linked to the incident by the spokesman, was found in the same area of Belfast with a bullet wound in her leg.

Shortly after the incident in the Cape Street area of Belfast soldiers reported a taxicab drove away from the district. Troops unsuccessfully tried to stop it and soldiers reported seeing what they thought was a body wrapped in blankets in the back seat, the spokesman said.

Gerry Fitt, Republican Labor Party member of both the Northern Ireland and British Parliaments, immediately demanded an investigation into the deaths of the sisters.

Seamus Leary, 18, said he saw the incident from a doorway in which he was standing when the car drove past.

"All of a sudden a soldier yelled out 'stop,'" Leary said. "The car didn't and the troops

Governors Report On Soviet Tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Six governors told President Nixon today that he could expect a "most enthusiastic" welcome in Moscow although Soviet leaders were aware it would not provide an instant solution to all U.S.-Soviet differences.

The governors spent 70 minutes with the President reporting on their two-week swing through the Soviet Union and Romania. The said they had long conversations with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Later, Nixon took a drive through the Maryland countryside to the presidential retreat at Camp David. Rainy weather kept him from going by helicopter as he usually does.

White House press spokes man Gerry Warren said Nixon wanted to hear both about the talks and about the governors impressions of the Soviet attitude toward his own Moscow visit next May.

"The governors said all the Soviet officials they met were most enthusiastic about the prospect," Warren said. "At the same time they said the people they talked with were aware of the many differences which divide the two nations and that the visit xhould not be expected to dissolve these differences."

The governors, representing the National Governors Conference, were Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Gale Bumpers of Arkansas, William G. Milliken of Michigan, Stanley K. Hathway of Wyoming and David Hall of Oklahoma.

They told Nixon that they had been impressed with the hospitality and courtesy they had received from the Soviet and Romanian leaders and people.

Warren said that a return visit by their Soviet counterparts is in the planning stage and the President said he hoped the Soviet officials would receive the same courtesy and hospitality which the Americans had encountered.

The White House would not disclose whether the governors carried any messages back and forth between Nixon and Kosygin or Ceausescu.

Two other governors, Luis Ferre of Puerto Rico and John A. Love of Colorado, also made the tour but remained to travel in western Europe when their colleagues returned today.

Besides Moscow the governors visited Leningrad, Kiev and Pblisi in the Soviet Union on the tour arranged by the State Department.

HESTER SLOWS WAR

U.S. Base Is Damaged By Typhoon

SAIGON (UPI)—A typhoon with winds up to 138 miles an hour slashed into South Vietnam's northern sector today, severely damaging a U.S. military base, smashing hangars and helicopters and leveling large sections of Vietnamese towns and cities.

Tens of thousands of Vietnamese fled inland from the South China sea coast area as Typhoon Hester roared in from the Philippines where it had killed at least six persons.

The winds and massive rainfall destroyed up to 90 per cent of Quang Ngai, a provincial capital of 12,000 population 318 miles from Saigon, government military spokesmen said. Threee nearby district capitals were virtually levelled by Hester, they said, and heavy damage was also reported in the coastal city of Da Nang to the south.

U.S. spokesmen said the typhoon winds collapsed aircraft hangars and destroyed a hospital and "other buildings" at Chu Lai, home of the Americal Division, 335 miles northeast of Saigon. At least 10 Huey helicopters, worth about $250,000 each, were destroyed or damaged.

Casualty reports were scanty because of disrupted communications but spokesmen listed at least one Vietnamese killed and said "several" Americans were injured.

The storm halted military activity in the northern sector and spokesmen reported little fighting elsewhere in Indochina.

A lull settled over the Cambodian border area, 80 miles north of Saigon, that had seen heavy fighting in the past month, following the withdrawal Friday of American units from the scene.

South Vietnamese soldiers killed 17 Communists in the Mekong Delta of South Vietnam and six more in a nearby district of neighboring Cambodia in two clashes Friday, the high command said.

U.S. B52 bombers flew three missions in northern South Vietnam, dumping nearly 300 tons of bombs on suspected Communist positions just before the typhoon struck inland, spokesmen said.

The typhoon winds frustrated attempts by U.S. and South Vietnamese helicopters to rescue stranded storm victims and made flying impossible.

The storm was remarkably similar to another that hit the same area almost exactly a year ago. That typhoon-- nicknamed Louise—killed at least 150 persons and left an estimated 200,000 homeless.

U.S. spokesmen said late Saturday that the 91st Evacuation Hospital at the Chu Lai base, scheduled to be closed next week as part of President Nixon's withdrawal plan, was destroyed. Patients were temporarily transferred to other buildings and will be evacuated to other hospitals when aircraft can carry them out, spokesman said.

Owner Slighted By Low Property Rating

Marin's Assessment Appeals Board members were startled yesterday by a West Marin property owner who complained that County Assessor Bert W. Broemmel had assessed his property too low.

Vincent J. Sacconanno, an architect who lives in an 11-room home at Drake's Beach Estates, told the board that he felt slighted and hurt that the assessor put only a market value of $35,000 on his home and half-acre parcel.

He pleaded with the appeals board to raise the value to $92,000.

Chairman Julius H. Selinger and board members James F. McConnell and Edward P. Murphy were flabbergasted, but ruled Saccananno did not have documentary evidence to back up his request for a raise in assessments.

Sacconanno said he bought the property in 1969 for $78,000. He claimed he also had $118,000 in loans against the property but failed to back up his claims with documents.

Saccananno acknowledged the property was being eyed by the federal government for inclusion in Point Reyes National Seashore. He said he had "no ulterior motive," but merely wanted "a fair evaluation of my assets."

He explained that banks would question the worth of his property when he negotiated for a loan, if they found the assessor had valued his property at only $35,000.

Sacconanno's home is located at Furlong and Dover roads. He argued that a doctor sold a neighboring home for $60,000 cash plus five acres of property at Cypress Point on Tomales Bay. He contended his property is worth at least that much.

Nol Plans No Dictatorship

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian Prime Minister Lon Nol told the cabinet that revocation of National Assembly legislative powers "does not mean a government of dictatorship," a spokesman said today.

Information Minister Long Boret said at a news conference he was "clarifying possible misunderstanding" following a speech by Lon Nol Wednesday.

"Lon Nol told a cabinet meeting Friday that the absence of a National Assembly does not mean a government of dictatorship," said Long Boret. The Assembly was stripped of its power Oct. 16.

SWEEPING REFORMS

Prison Report Not 'Watered'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The director of an 834-page study urging the abandonment of San Quentin and Folsom Prisons and sweeping reforms in the penal system has squelched charges the report was "watered down."

Robert E. Keldgord, the Oakland criminologist who was responsible for the $266,000 report, Friday denied suggestions that the State Board of Corrections, which has had the study since June, altered it.

"It is indeed the document that I and my colleagues submitted to the board on June 28," he said in a telephone interview.

Raymond K. Procunier, director of the Department of Corrections, also said, "It's the same, word for word, that he turned in."

The federally financed study, ordered by the Reagan Administration and released Thursday, basically suggested the bulk of the correctional system should be moved to the community level with regulation and financial assistance from the state.

The report made more than 200 recommendations including shorter prison terms, better living conditions for convicts, better trained correctional personnel, hiring more minority group members to work in prisons, higher wages for prisoners, elimination of two-man cells to decrease homosexuality and conjugal visiting at all prisons.

San Quentin and Folsom Prisons, both built in the 19th century, were too old, too large, ugly and depressing, the study said.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, said Friday he was concerned whether it was the same report submitted to the board in June. The Coordinating Council of Prisoner Organizations also suggested it was "watered down."

But Keldgord said that in light of the length of the report the board did not take an excessively long time to review it.

He said the recent San Quentin violence also diverted the board's attention for some time from the document.

The criminologist asserted that some news reports contending the study had been diluted were based on comparisons with the first and second drafts rather than the third and final copy.

"It would be extremely inaccurate," he declared, "to say that any pressure was applied" and resulted in softening the study's recommendations.

Corrections Chief Procunier said that he did not have "any big fights" with its suggestions, contending that they did not represent "anything big or new."

But he said he doubted whether San Quentin or Folsom would be closed because there was not enough money to construct other institutions.

However, he declared, "If anybody gave me $150 million I'd be glad to close them."

U.S. Claims Victory In Seat For Taiwan

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— The United States claimed success today in its campaign to save a U.N. General Assembly seat for the Nationalist Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Word weary delegates paused for weekend celebrations of the United Nations' 26th birthday before plunging into the decisive phase of the debate with voting expected late Monday or Tuesday.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers and U.S. Ambassador George Bush told President Nixon in Washington they were confident Nationalist China's seat would be saved.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler told newsmen that Rogers made the comment during an hour-long meeting that the secretary of state and Bush had with Nixon.

Bush's spokesman at the U.N. would not discuss numbers. He said there was a majority for the U.S. proposal which agrees to seat Communist China in the assembly and the Security Council while retaining an assembly seat for the Chinese Nationalists. He conceded that the margin could be slender.

Many diplomats believed the outcome would be decided by as slim an edge as three votes. Most held that the result hinged on the votes of 10 or 12 undecided countries.

"We feel we have a definite majority," U.S. delegation spokesman Nicholas L. King said.

The U.S. delegation held a meeting of its cosponsors Friday and informed sources said the optimism expressed publicly also was expressed behind closed doors.

Bush, apparently reflecting the optimism, left town for the weekend. He planned to attend a U.N. Day celebration in Washington today and go on to Houston, Tex., for a U.N. day dinner on Sunday.

There still were five speakers to be heard in the China debate when it resumes Monday afternoon. There was no China session scheduled for Monday morning. But delegations exercising their right to explain their vote beforehand were expected to delay the balloting until Tuesday.

Scheduled to be heard in the debate proper on Monday were representatives of Tunisia, Honduras, Albania, China and the United States. Mongolia, Japan, El Salvador, Malaysia, Singapore and Austria signified desire to explain their vote and more delegations were expected to join the list.

At the close of Friday's proceedings, 46 countires had pronounced themselves in favor of Peking and 24 in favor of Taiwan. The vote was expected to be decided by the 60 countries that did not speak in the China debate.

Log Regulations 'To Stay Same'

REDDING (UPI) — The chairman of the State Board of Forestry says his agency will continue to set logging regulations despite an adverse court ruling nullifying the board's authority.

"We'll continue as usual until we hear otherwise," Chairman W. B. Carter said Thursday.

The 1st District Court of Appeal has ruled the board and its district forest practices committees unconstitutionally set rules because their members are dominated by the logging industry. The decision is on appeal to the State Supreme Court.

The Appellate Court issued the ruling last month in a suit brought by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors, who appealed a Superior Court ruling which stated they had no authority to regulate Bayside Timber Co.

SUPREME COURT

Bayh Team Will Check Nominees

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Birch D. Bayh, D-Ind., who led the successful battles against two of President Nixon's previous Supreme Court nominees, has ordered his personal staff to make a complete investigation of the President's newest choices.

"These two men are clearly better qualified than many of those whose names have been so crudely floated by the administration," Bayh said Friday. "But we must still be sure that these nominees are given the most careful and thoughtful consideration by the U.S. Senate."

Bayh said the Senate's earlier rejection of Judges Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell indicated the Senate will not accept a nominee without legal distinction, personal integrity and a commitment to human rights.

Bayh also criticized the selection process the administration went through before settling on Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist. He said the process had been turned into a "public spectacle, a political football game in which the American public is an unwilling participant and all of those whose names are paraded in the press are the unfortunate losers ... that is the game the president has played these last two weeks."

The White House issued what it called an emphatic denial of Bayh's suggestion that the names of six nominees submitted to the American Bar Association had been deliberately leaked. Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said the speculation was not encouraged by the government.

After Nixon revealed his choices Attorney General John N. Mitchell told the ABA he would not consult the group again if the President has another occasion to pick someone for the high court. The ABA consultation was a courtesy which Mitchell himself initiated.

Lawrence E. Walsh, chairman of the ABA committee which considered the nominations, replied to Mitchell Friday, urging him not to stop consulting the lawyers' group. He said the names became public not because of what any member of his committee did but because "newsmen ... were informed ... by personalities we questioned."

Walsh said it was probably better anyway to have the names leak out so that any adverse information can surface before the formal nomination is made.

The two nominations formally arrived at the Senate Friday afternoon and the Senate Judiciary Committee wil begin its confirmation hearings sometime duricg the first week of November.

The overall reaction in Washington continued to be favorable, although Capitol Hill activity was slowpaced Friday because many lawmakers had left town for the Veterans Day weekend.

Arms Race Attacked By A U.S. Cardinal

VATICAN CITY (UPI)— Cardinal John J. Krol of Philadelphia, in a strong denunciation of the arms race, accused world leaders of not using "one half" of their intelligence, ability or will to bring about peace.

Other speakers at the 3rd International Synod of Bishops Friday attacked male superiority, worldly honors for cardinals and bishops and churchmen who think of sin only in terms of sex.

The 60-year-old Krol, a conservative in the U.S. Roman Catholic Church hierarchy, assailed the arms stockpile in the United States but stopped short of formal condemnation of any nation or individual. He addressed both the Synod and a news conference.

Referring to the stockpiling of arms, especially in the United States, the Cleveland-born Cardinal said, "the point I was trying to make was that this has gone to such an absurd limit now—extreme—that we are far beyond what even our own bill of rights and constitution call for. It calls for providing for common defense, insuring justice and domestic tranquility."

Krol also cited, but did not condemn, U.S. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird during an attack on the arms race.

"I'm very aware of naval matters because of what Laird said not too long ago," said Krol, referring to an Oct. 13 statement by Laird on the Soviet Union's growing fleet of missile-firing submarines. "It is the same madness, the same futility. At what point are you going to stop?"

Asked if he would recommend the United States not match Soviet military might, Krol replied:

"My personal conviction is...that we need to take some risks for peace. We are not using one half of our intelligence, ingenuity or will to obtain peace."

Earlier he told the 210-member Synod that the stockpiling of arms—"growing year by year"—is a leading cause of world injustice.

Archbishop Leo C. Byrne of St. Paul and Minneapolis, another member of the "official" U.S. Synod delegation, criticized governments, organizations and individuals who exploit women or even pay them a lower wage than men doing the same job.

Cardinal Francois Marty of Paris called on fellow prelates to renounce their worldly honors and titles and suggested they receive no more pay than the lowliest parish priest.

Cardinal Paul Gregoire of Montreal deplored the fact that many churchmen, when they think of sin, think of sex instead of "serious faults" such as crimes against justice.

A Brazilian prelate, Bishop Valfredo Tepe, urged Pope Paul VI to name younger bishops.

"All the decisions in the church, said the 53-year-old Tepe, "are being taken by mature men, 50 years old at least".

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Talks Continue

HONG KONG (UPI) — Talks between Dr. Henry Kissinger and Chinese officials entered their fourth day today and diplomatic sources said negotiations apparently have been going "very smoothly" on preparations for a visit by President Nixon.

There has been no official word on the progress of talks between Kissinger and his assistants and Chinese officials.

However, the diplomatic sources who have contacts in Peking, said they believed sufficient progress may have been made to enabel the two sides to set a definite date for the presidential visit.

Goes Bankrupt

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Horn & Hardart Baking Co., the firm that pioneered the Automat — the quick meal without a waitress — has gone bankrupt.

The 83-year-old firm filed a petition in U.S. District Court Friday asking to be placed in reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act.

'Wildcat' Strike

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia zoo remained closed to the public today because of what officials aptly termed a "wildcat" strike. The strike came Friday when 120 animal and grounds keepers and commissary workers walked off their jobs following an announcement that 30 employes would be laid off in an economy move.

Mobilizes Troops

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India began mobilizing 600,000 army reservists today, while both India and Pakistan continued to charge each other with border violations.

Orders were issued late last night for the territorial army, composed mainly of retired army personnel under 60 years of age, to report for duty immediately. Smaller numbers of air force and navy reservists also were ordered back into uniform.

Mobilization orders for the reservists came after a lengthy cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon, but sources in the defense ministry said that the actual decision was made by India's service chiefs, who acted under an earlier authorization.

Ends Vacation

ATHENS (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew left for home today voicing pride in his Greek roots and praise for the military-backed government's support of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO.

Premier George Papadopoulos saw him off at the airport with a pledge his government is "working day and night" to bring democracy to Greece.

"I leave with renewed respect for the efforts of the government of Greece in carrying out its country's role as a member of Nato," Agnew said. He added he always had been proud of his Greek roots and he was returning home "with that pride strengthened and reinforced."

Fashion Honor

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Fashion Group honored Mrs. Richard M. Nixon last night as the "best in taste and most feminine woman of the year" but the First Lady was almost speechless.

She could only manage to whisper a hoarse "thank you" when she accepted the award, a "crystal tribute" in the form of a gently arching pair of wings climbing from a solid crystal base.

Sets Radio Talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon plans to make a Veterans Day address to the nation on radio tomorrow night at 4:30 p.m. PDT, according to the White House.

The White House said the President would spend the weekend at Camp David and make the speech from that mountain retreat.

A Formal Welcome

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Tito of Yogoslavia will be accorded a formal welcoming ceremony at the White House next Thursday when he begins his visit to the United States.

After the ceremony, the White House said, Tito and President Nixon will confer privately and Tito will be the guest of honor at a state dinner that evening. The two chiefs will meet Oct. 30 for additional talks.

Petaluma Road Name Changed

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Planning Commission has approved changing the name of Weise Road to Stadler Lane in rural Petaluma.

Residents told the commission Thursday that although the street off Eastman Lane is officially recorded as Weise Road, it is commonly called Stadler Lane and is known to the post office by that name.

The commission approved the change, noting that members of the Weise family, for whom the road was named, no longer live in the area.

Marin, So. Sonoma Road Funds Set

I-J Special Report

MONTEREY — The California Highway Commission yesterday voted to budget $6.3 million for Marin County and Southern Sonoma state highway projects in fiscal 1972-73.

The sum included $2 million for start of construction on the long-awaited Novato Bypass of Highway 101, $2 million for widening Highway 101 to eight lanes between Richardson Bay Bridge and Greenbrae interchange, and $1.9 million for work on two Highway 101 interchanges in Petaluma.

Total cost of the six-lane Novato Bypass is expected to reach $14 million for the 5.4-mile project. The future freeway will swing easterly of downtown Novato from a point south of the present Highway 37-South Novato Boulevard interchange to another new interchange 1.4 miles north of Atherton Boulevard.

Right-of-way purchase and project design have been virtually complete for some time, according to Alan S. Hart, district engineer for the state Division of Highways. The budget allocation should result in advertising for construction bids early next spring, Hart reported recently.

The Richardson Bay-Greenbrae project will cost about $2 million. It will in effect be a continuation of work now in progress that includes widening the Richardson Bay span.

The East Washington Street overcrossing of Highway 101 in Petaluma will be widened from two to four lanes at a cost of $1.3 million, and a $600,000, four-lane overcrossing will be built for Caulfield Lane at Highway 101 with the newly budgeted state funds.

The highway commission approved a total of $56.4 million for projects in the nine Bay Area counties. Marin County's total of $4.410 million for the two major projects and some lesser work is the third smallest among the nine counties. San Francisco was earmarked for $2.6 million, and Napa County projects were voted $970,000.

Heroin Pusher Given Stiff Prison Sentence

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Myles Washington, 42, convicted of masterminding a $4,000-a-day heroin operation for at least one year before it was broken up in 1970, was sentenced Thursday to 15 years to life in prison.

Washington, described by police as one of the major suppliers of heroin in the Los Angeles area, drew the maximum sentence.

Two other defendants in the heroin operation also received stiff sentences. Tommy Crane, 28, was sentenced to 10 years to life, and Cornelius King, 44, to one to 10 years.

Prosecuting attorneys said the sentences were among the most stringent ever meted out here to narcotics offenders.

Weather Probe Is Destroyed

VANDENBERG AFB (UPI) —The loss of an advanced weather satellite leaves the United States without nighttime cloud watching coverage for at least several more months.

The new weathereye was destroyed Thursday when its Delta Rocket rammed it back into earth's atmosphere because of a control system failure after successfully propelling it into a preliminary orbit 200 miles high.

The $10.5 million failure was the first in 22 weather satellite launchings dating back to 1960. It was the space agency's second unsuccessful launch in 12 unmanned space shots this year.

Group Opposes Measure B

The board of directors of the Marin Conservation League has adopted a resolution opposing Measure B on the Nov. 2 ballot, for a Sonoma-Marin aqueduct.

The leadership of the 2,200-member league declared that "no such plan should be acted upon until a comprehensive program relating to water supply, ffood control and sewage disposal is developed in relation to an adopted countywide plan as approved by the voters."

The league directors charged that "little consideration has been given to the ecological impact" of the proposed plan to bring Russian River water to the Marin Municipal Water District.

When he was arrested in 1959, Hendrickson, a one-time bankrupt plumber, was head of furnace and heating manufacturing plants in Sebastopol and Los Angeles.

The embezzlement of $3,740,000 from the Long Beach bank came to light after a bank cashier committed suicide, leaving a note admitting his own guilt and implicating Henderson.

just opened up on it. I could not believe my eyes."

Leary said no shots were fired from the car.

Fitt said he knew the sisters personally and Mrs. Meehan's husband denied she was wearing men's clothing, although both women wore slacks.

"What I am told is that the army told the car to stop. When it didn't do so immediately, they just opened up on it. The people inside the car just didn't have a chance," said Fitt.

Gerrard Meehan, Mrs. Meehan's father-in-law, told newsmen "the girls had heard there was some trouble in Leeson Street, rattling (garbage) bins and that" in the Roman Catholic Falls Road area of Belfast.

"A friend drove them down and as they turned a corner an army saracen (armored car) cut across their path and a shout rang out, 'stop that car.' A volley of shots rang out and both of them had the backs of their heads blown off," said Meehan.

Crowds for a time surrounded the car and prevented the approach of soldiers who first thought they had shot one man, the spokesman said. The soldiers discovered the bodies were women when they got to the car, he added.

An 8-1-2 hour bomb scare at Belfast's biggest luxury hotel, its second in 48 hours, ended today with the pop of a champagne cork.

The management of the 12-story Europa hotel ordered champagne on the house after British army explosives experts defused a bomb containing an estimated 35 pounds of gelignite.

Majo. George Stiles, the army's senior explosives officer in Northern Ireland, termed the bomb "one of the biggest of its type we've yet met, a thoroughly sophisticated device."

An architect called in as a consultant said the charge could have collapsed the 15-month-old building had it gone off in the lobby.

cleaner facilities and will carry 45 passengers; 112 of the vehicles will have reclining seats, he said. There will be no advertising in the buses.

Promising more service into neighborhoods in Marin and Southern Sonoma counties, Luehring said, "It is our goal to try to reach 50 per cent of the commuters within a quarter mile of where they live."

The bridge district plans to operate a 24-hour maintenance facility for the buses on 10-acres of land on Jacoby Street in San Rafael, adjacent to Highway 17. A temporary maintenance shop is currently being rented by the district across the street from the permanent site.

Eighty of the new General Motors buses have arrived at the facility, Luehring said, with the remainder expected to be delivered within the next two weeks, at the rate of six or seven a day. District personnel, he said, now engaged in checking out the new vehicles to insure they are in working order and installing fare boxes and other equipment needed to ready them for service.

In addition to the San Rafael operation, the district will maintain satellite stations in Santa Rosa and Novato where the buses will be parked overnight to be ready for early morning service. The district is currently negotiating for a site at Coddington Airport in Santa Rosa and has several locations in mind in Novato, though no formal choice of a site has been made.

Luehring said today the only obstacle which could prevent the new bridge district commute service from beginning Dec. 6 would be problems in negotiating with unions involved in providing the service. But he said talks with the unions, including those which represent Greyhound drivers, appear to be going smoothly at this point. Greyhound drivers will take over most of the jobs in the new commuter service.

MEET JULIUS, THE COUGAR

Poised and alert, Julius, a 4-month-old cougar, was the attention of his owner, a brunette who identified herself only as "Melody," a resident of San Rafael, during a gas stop in Corte Madera yesterday. Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean spotted the cat while on another assignment, and snapped the picture as the animal rested on the hood of his owner's car at the Tamalpais Drive service station. The owner said she was reluctant to disclose her full identity and address for fear of cougarnappers and trespassers wanting a look at the cat.

IN BOND DISCUSSION

Seeger Warns Of Water Cutbacks

The chief office of the Marin Municipal Water District, amplifying earlier warnings, said curtailed water use is a definite possibility next summer if the Nov. 2 election proposal to tap the Russian River supply fails.

William Seeger, district general manager, also told the district board more drastic water preservation measures might be necessary if both the election loses and rainfall is light this winter.

Seeger made the remarks in response to board inquiries about the effect of possible failure of the Nov. 2 measure that would enable the Marin district to contract with Sonoma County for Russian River water. Cost of a delivery system has been put at $137 million.

Seeger said the district has the power to compel water use restrictions, adding that lawn-watering and irrigation would be the first targets. District residents, he said, could be required to restrict lawn watering to a limited number of days.

Beyond that, Seeger said, explaining that the district has been dipping into reserve supplies for the past two years, new water connections could be stopped, in effect imposing a construction ban. And while he said he woun't recommend it, Seeger told the board a dam and reservoir might have to be constructed at Walker Creek near Tomales.

Construction of the first step in the Sonoma-Marin project — a line to the North Marin Water District for temporary supply until an equeduct to the Russian River is built — would begin in the spring if the Nov. 2 measure passes.

Seeger said a safe operating level for water dispensing is 30,000 acre feet, or 22,000 acre feet less than the total district supply. (An acre foot of water equals 3330,000 gallons.)

However, the district used 34,000 acre feet two years ago and 32,000 acre feet last year, according to J. Dietrich Stroeh, district engineer. This amounts to a 4,000 and 2,000-acre-foot "overdraft," Stroeh said.

Seeger, noting district critics have accused him of scare tactics and overkill in explaining water needs, told the board, "I'm telling it as I see it as a water engineer."

The Marin Municipal Water District board also:

CONDEMNATION — Authorized a condemnation suit on land owned by the Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. and the Northwestern Pacific Railroad to permit the Manzanita pipeline relocation.

DEED — Accepted a $1,000 deed from Robert C. Jensky to use his land for a temporary 25,000-gallon tank while the district constructs a 500,000 gallon tank at the Bret Harte tank lot.

EXTENTIONS — Approved pipeline extensions to Marinview Unit 4, a Tamalpais Valley subdivision, and to the Larkspur Square Shopping Center under construction.

The Joshua tree measures up to 40 feet in height and displays cream-white blossoms in clusters 8 to 14 inches long, according to the National Automobile Club.

New Look Advances For Miller Avenue

A safety and beautification plan for Mill Valley's Miller Avenue — which may take years to implement — has been approved by two city bodies and sent to the city council.

The planning commission and architectural advisory committee voted Wednesday to recommend council approval of the plan, according to planning secretary Evelyn B. McCrary.

The plan involves reconstruction of the busy thoroughfare between Reed and Willow streets; traffic signals and turn lanes at Miller and La Goma Street; undergrounding of utilities in the quarter-mile stretch, and a bicycle path on the south side of the street.

Parking in the middle of the street will be replaced with a 16-foot landscaped median strip. Parallel parking will be retained on the south side and controlled access parking turnouts constructed on the north side of Miller.

According to Edmond C. Kagi of the Sausaltio planning firm of Sasaki, Walker Associates, between 15 and 20 per cent of the area's parking will be eliminated.

The project would be built in phases, Kagi said, and "may take years." The first phase, to be financed partly through a $42,000 federal grant and partly with city funds, is expected to cost about $65,000, according to Stanley M. Bala, Mill Valley city engineer.

Construction on the project would begin before next June, Bala said.

Magee Asks Court To Drop Counts

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee, continuing his one-man legal campaign from his cell, has filed a new petition with the state Court of Appeal asking that charges against him be dismissed.

In the petition received by the court yesterday, Magee claimed he has been denied his right to a speedy trial. In another petition yesterday, the convict, who has long blamed his present plight on lawyers, asked again that he be allowed to act as his own attorney.

He currently is represented by a court-appointed lawyer, Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles.

In the neatly printed and signed petition, Magee said that Graves was illegally appointed and then "stepped forward and started filing" documents used to "defraud petitioner out of his rights to a speedy trial."

Magee earlier had agreed in a court hearing in Marin to have his case tried after Angela Davis's, which has not yet started.

Veterans Building Opening Bill 4,000 Less Than Budgeted

Total cost of the grand opening of the Marin Veterans Memorial Building on Sept. 25 came to $27,549, almost $4,000 less than the $31,400 budgeted for the gala event, it was disclosed yesterday.

However, 1,476 paying customers contributed $15 per ticket or a total of $22,140 in admissions, bringing a net loss to the county of $5,409. Courtesy passes admitted 181 others.

Leon G. Kalimos, executive director of the memorial building, said the cost of the opening was surprisingly low, particularly because none of the polish and amenities of a glittering opening were deleted for the sake of economy. "We achieved our purpose, got good publicity from critics, and put on a high-level fashionable affair," said Kalimos.

The total attendance of 1,657 on opening night has not been surpassed at the building since, Kalimos said. Total seating capacity is 2,088.

Kalimos listed this breakdown of the opening night cost:

Cost of the orchestra, music, and guest artist, $12,450; tickets and advertising, $3,680; box office (ticket sales), $300; ushers and hat check, $108; stage hands, $476; parking attendants, $102; food catering, $6,000; champagne, $1,920; souvenir books, $1,137; and miscellaneous expenses for such items as searchlights, decorative plants, two buses to bring patrons from the Hall of Justice parking lot, parking labels and flasher signals.

The only other opening night expense, not directly connected with the memorial building itself, was the preconcert reception and dinner for about 80 persons, held at Holiday Inn.

Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella said the bill for dinner came to about $900, but added the cost was under negotiation because the county had questioned some of the items.

Soledad Trial Delay Refused

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A state court of appeals Friday refused to delay the trial of the "Soledad Brothers," set for next Wednesday.

The defendants, George Clutchette and Fleeta Drumgo, each asked to be given a peremptory challenge to disqualify judges presiding over the trial.

They also asked that pre-trial Judge Carl Allen be disqualified on grounds of bias.

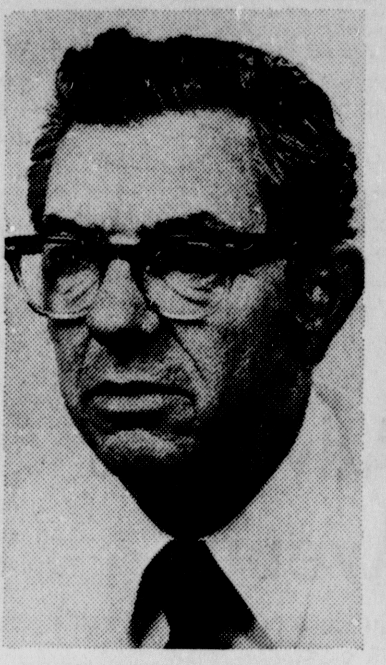
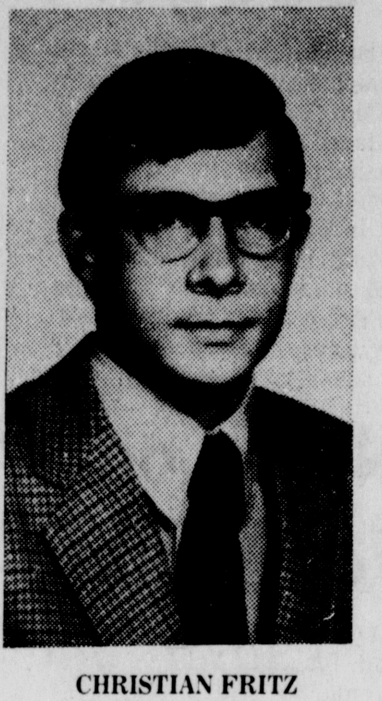
Richardson Bay Race Draws 5 Hopefuls

(One of a series of articles to be published this week and next by the Independent-Journal, outlining the issues and presenting the candidates in the local elections Nov. 2)

JOSEPH FRANASZEK
Seeks board vacancy



DOUGLAS de LA FONTAINE
Board president



CHRISTIAN FRITZ
Student seeks seat

Two 18-year-olds and two incumbents are among five candidates seeking two vacancies on the Richardson Bay Sanitary District board in the Nov. 2 election.

The candidates are:

Douglas John de La Fontaine, 47, of 2 Eagle Rock Road, Mill Valley, a salesman for Golden Grain Macaroni Co. of San Leandro. He has been on the board four years, the last two as president. His wife, Trudy, was co-chairman of the committee opposed to annexation of Strawberry to Tiburon.

Joseph John Franaszek, 18, of 17 Juno Road, Tiburon, a student at the University of California at Berkeley.

Christian Garrett Fritz, 18, of 700 Hawthorne Drive, Tiburon, also a Berkeley student. He and Franaszek are running on the same slate.

John N. Radovich, 48, of 33 North Knoll Road, Mill Valley, a valuation engineer with Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Francisco.

Beverly Vandiveer Wheeler, of 6 Felipa Court, Tiburon, floor manager at Stan's For Sports, San Rafael. She currently serves as board secretary.

The candidates say there are two major issues in the race — odor from the district's treatment plant at Tiburon and Trestle Glen boulevards, and proposed consolidation of Southern Marin sanitary districts.

All the candidates oppose the odor, long a sore point in nearby Little Reed Heights, but Fritz and Franaszek blame the present board for not solving the problem.

"There has been an odor control problem for six years," said Franaszek, "and after long discussions by the board, the citizens were so disgusted they hired their own consultant to report on what's wrong with the plant."

The incumbent candidates — de La Fontaine and Mrs. Wheeler — also recognize the problem, but maintain the board has done all it can.

"We have problems with odor, but that's being worked on," said de La Fontaine. He cited installation of a chlorinator and sludge incinerator last year at the plant as proof.

The odor issue has figured in past board elections. Three current directors, all residents of Little Reed Heights and running on an odor control platform, were swept into office in 1970.

Mrs. Wheeler and de La Fontaine cite their experience on the board as reasons for their retention. Mrs. Wheeler has been a director 12 years, while de La Fontaine is a four-year veteran, the last two as chairman.

"The board needs experienced people because of the problems facing us," said de La Fontaine. These include the proposed merger of Southern Marin sanitary districts, he said.

De La Fontaine favors the merger, but said he doesn't want "a countywide district with an appointed board, but one directly responsible to the electorate with the legal means to get rid of them (directors) if they prove unresponsive."

During his tenure on the board, he said, "the tax rate has declined 10 per cent, due largely to my efforts."

In her 12 years, said Mrs. Wheeler, "I've voted to cut taxes, to expand, update and modernize our treatment facilities, to build a sludge dewatering furnace to burn sludge and do away with unsightly drying beds."

She, too, supports consolidation. "I firmly believe the future of Southern Marin sewage treatment and waste water treatment and reclamation lies in the consolidated efforts of all the sanitary districts in Southern Marin," she said. In fact, she added, the same should be done in Central and North Marin as well.

She does not believe, however, that the responsibility for treating sewage should be turned over to the Marin Municipal Water District or the North Marin Water District. They are not equipped to do the task, nor do they have the staff, funds or lines to handle sewage, and such transfer would create a "political monster—the largest, strongest and most powerful political taxing agent in Marin," she said.

Fritz, Franaszek and Radovich all support consolidation. "There has to be a start made," said Radovich. "The first step should be consolidation. In this way the districts can make their goals and wishes known to the State of California."

Fritz said he questions whether the multiplicity of sanitary districts in Marin are efficient and ecological, and residents would realize tax savings through consolidation. "Also," he said, "air and water pollution don't recognize district boundaries."

Other points of his and Franaszek's platform: strict comiance with a Regional Water Quality Control Board ruling which found the district in violation of its standards; elimination of the $40 per meeting paid directors, with the money to be used for district needs, and increased responsiveness to citizens by the board.

Radovich said he thinks "a new person often sees a challenge where someone else only sees a problem."

There are 3,493 registered voters in the district. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Moran Fined For Drunken Driving

A state Public Utilities commissioner has been fined $250 in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

Judge Robert A. Smallman also placed Thomas Patrick Moran on probation for a year after he pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge.

Moran, 53, of San Rafael, was arrested June 16 when, according to the California Highway Patrol, he was seen driving erratically on Highway 101.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Uncertainty Is Market Keynote

New York (UPI)—Uncertainty normally breeds weakness and this told the story on Wall Street as stocks declined for the second week in a row.

The mechanics of phase II of the administration's economic program confused investors. They worried, too, about the world monetary crisis. And even a quarter-point cut in the prime bank interest rate disappointed them.

President Nixon had urged the banks to lower interest rates in order to spur business expansion and consumer spending, two steps deemed vital if the economy is to recover along the lines outlined in his Aug. 15 economic message.

The bank prime rate, from which other rates are scaled upwards, was trimmed to 5 3-4 per cent from 6 per cent, but as one Wall Street analyst remarked "a lot of people were disappointed the cut was not a half-point."

In addition, the reduction had been expected for about lwo weeks, and analysts observed that by the time it finally materialized it was of little suprise to the investment community.

"Nobody really knows where the economy is going," said Fred Anschel, director of research for Josephthal & Co. He said although he is optimistic for 1972, evidence is far too flimsy for investors to be anything but cautious for the near term.

Albert M. Klein of Edward A. Viner & Co. said business hasn't responded as well as many people had hoped to the President's new economic program. He noted that because of the market's depressed condition a lot of money is being diverted to bonds.

"Nixon's program was heralded as a new era in American economic history, but what people didn't realize was there was first going to be a transitional period," said David S. Liebowitz of Equity Research Associates.

Liebowitz said investors were disappointed the plan hasn't worked out yet, but he believes Nixon will accomplish his goal for a stronger economy over the next six to nine months. "The stock market is going to be stronger during that period because the economy is going to be stronger," the analyst concluded.

LBJ To Lecture

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York University announced Friday former President Lyndon B. Johnson will deliver a lecture on banking and investments in America to the university's graduate school of business administration Nov. 15.

GEORGE KOLTANOWSKI
Chess master

Chess Expert Will Appear

International chess master George Koltanowski will appear in a tournament at 7 p.m. Nov. 12 in the Commons at Sonoma State College.

Koltanowski will play 30 boards simultaneously, lecture on chess, play a game blindfolded and do a knight's tour. Playing boards may be reserved by telephoning Thomas Harris, Commons manager.

Koltanowski, a native Belgian, has written books on chess in Flemish, French, Spanish and English. He also writes a chess column for daily newspapers.

The western meadowlark is not really a lark. It belongs to the same family as the blackbird.

$150 Fine For Pot Possession

Martha Dixon Skinner, 26, of Mill Valley, has been fined $150 for possessing marijuana.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed her on probation for one year after she pleaded guilty to one of two misdemeanor charges of possessing pot.

The second count was dismissed by Judge Smallman at the request of the district attorney's office.

Mrs. Skinner, a Tamalpais High School District secretary, was charged with possessing the weed July 31 when police visited her former residence in Larkspur after neighbors complained of loud music, and again Sept. 16 when marijuana was seen in her wallet when she went to show a Larkspur policeman her driver's license after he stopped the school district car she was driving.

Environmental Study Program Is Announced

CHICO (UPI) — Chico State College in California will take part in a program developed by the National Park Service geared to environmental studies from kindergarten through high school.

The program involving school-age youngsters and teachers will concentrate on the relationship of the outdoors to music, art, politics, economics and other aspects of modern life.

Trio In Muir Beach Race

(One of a series of articles to be published this week and next by the Independent-Journal, outlining the issues and presenting the candidates in the local elections Nov. 2)

Three persons, including two incumbents, will vie for two seats on the Muir Beach Community Services District in the Nov. 2 election.

The services district provides water supply to the small coastal community, maintains roads and provides recreation services. If the community's 81 registered voters approve Measure E on the ballot, the district will be responsible for fire protection as well.

The candidates are:

Richard C. Bain, 36, of Cove Lane, a civil engineer with Brown and Caldwell Engineers, San Francisco. He is chairman of the board, having been elected a director in 1968 and reappointed last year after moving away for three months.

Mary O. Mosteller, 49, of Sunset Way. She is a homemaker and has lived in Muir Beach about 15 years with her husband, Gerald, a carpenter.

Virginia Torres, a teacher. She did not respond to the Independent-Journal's request for biographical information.

According to Bain, "Water supply is the most important thing the district does and I have a background in water supply and waste water treatment."

He said he originally was asked to run by friends because of his experience in working to improve water quality. "When I first came here (about four years ago)," Bain said, "The water just wasn't fit to drink." It's much better now, he said.

The problem facing the district now is leaking water pipes, and the board is embarking on a program to replace them, a program Bain supports.

Mrs. Mosteller said she is running because "I believe all members of the community should if possible participate in some way or another in community affairs. This is my way of fulfilling what I consider to be my responsibility."

Mrs. Mosteller has served on the board since she was appointed to fill an unexpired term last year.

Having lived 15 years in Muir Beach, she said, "I'm pretty well aware of community problems." "One of the most pressing," she said, "is the need for fire protection," and she backs Measure E, which would turn protection over to the district.

If the measure passes, she said, she hopes the Bello Beach Volunteer Fire Department, which now provides "holding action" protection until the Marin County Fire Department can arrive, will turn its fire truck over to the district.

Bain agrees that passage of Measure E would be a good thing for the community. The need for greater protection was brought home last month, he said, when a home on Sunset Way was gutted by fire.

Polls in Muir Beach are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Old Adobe District To Lease Another Classroom

The Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, has approved leasing an additional portable classroom to help meet an influx of new students.

Donald Parker, Miwok Valley School principal, said the board approved lease of the classroom unit from Speedspace Corp. at its meeting Thursday. The district will pay $2,700 per year for the unit.

Parker said 50 new students have entered the district in the past two weeks, with the greatest crowding problem at La Tercera School, where the new unit will be placed.

The board heard Parker report that construction of the Miwok Valley School is more than half complete and should be ready for occupancy in late February or early March, as scheduled. The board approved the sale of $305,000 in bonds to finance a previously approved six-classroom addition to the new school.

The Old Adobe School District board also:

SCIENCE — Approved purchase of 24 science kits at a cost of $5,000.

STUDY — Named Bernard Eldredge School principal Daniel Longaker to work with Dr. Dan Montgomery of the Petaluma City Schools on a 12-month school plan study.

VACATION — Encouraged Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan to take a two-week vacation. The board lauded him for a high degree of responsibility he has shown to his job, but said five days vacation in four years was not enough.

Crossroads Rezoning To Be Studied

Rezoning of a portion of the crossroads area of Highways 101 and 37 from planned residential to planned commerical will be considered by the Novato City Council at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House.

The area originally was zoned commerical for a large shopping center, but the designation was changed to residential when the city's downtown plan recommended a major shopping center be placed on the Pinheiro Center.

The council also will consider annexation of 35 acres at the end of Seventh Street north to San Marin Drive.

Other items to go before the council include an agreement with the Novato Unified School District for use of school buses for recreation and an appeal of planning commission denial for a Taco Bell on Highway 101 between Vallejo and Olive Avenue.

Riles Calls For Citizen Leadership In Education

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— State Superintendent of Schools Wilson Riles has called on citizens to take the leadership and in developing schools that provide quality education.

Appearing at a Commonwealth Club luncheon yesterday, Riles referred to recent failures to pass school bond issues. He said the campaigns were dominated by school officials and board members and "it's my feeling we're going to have to stop this."

"The schools do not belong to the school boards or to the administrators," he said, "they belong to the people."

"If the people want a better school system, they will have to take the leadership to see that we have it," he said. He said part of the school's present difficulties are "that people tend to wait around until the court gives them a direct order."

This was a reference to California's school property tax, which was declared unconstitutional and to racial integration.

Another example is San Francisco itself, which recently integrated its schools by bussing at the order of a court, Riles said. "The people in this community have known a long time—10 or 12 years — that something had to be done about the integration program and they didn't act."

Safety — A Check For Seeing

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—It is the priceless gift, the gift of sight. Yet before the end of the current year, an estimated 34,300 more persons will have lost it.

It is impossible to measure the cost in agony to that many more persons labelled legally blind —the total now stands at 437,000. But the cost in dollars at least can be counted at $1 billion per year in direct aid to the sightless, another $1.7 billion lost in productivity such as wages.

Yet, those who deal with the problem call at least one-half of the blindness cases preventable.

Let's review some of the work being done in both prevention and cure.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness estimates that $16,303,646 is available for major public and private sources doing research in blindness and eye diseases.

By contrast, though, consider that we spend $242,580,000 yearly for lipsticks or $45,170,000 for bubble bath salts, tablets, oils and the like.

Even so, progress is being made. Dr. Wilfred D. David, the physician who is executive director of the society, says it operates in three major areas of prevention.

One is working with parents and educators to provide visual screenings for pre-school and early school level youngsters so that any problem can be located early. "An eye is old at seven," is the way a Society spokesman puts it. And the U.S. Public Health Service, which estimates there are about 56 million children under 15 with visual problems, says the number may increase to 75 million by 1980.

MUCH IS being done in the area of cataracts and glaucoma, which are major causes of blindness. According to the National Health Education Committee, a statistical source, senile cataracts cause 05.6 per cent of the blindness in America.

Glaucoma causes 13.5 per cent, most often affecting the over-40 age group.

Glaucoma often lies undetected simply because it shows no overt symptoms. The society recommends that every person over 35 have a professional eye exam at least every two years.

THE SPOUSE GAP

Conscious Steps Must Be Taken To Close The Chasm

(Condensed from the book, "The Spouse Gap")
By ROBERT LEE
and MARJORIE CASEBIER

Along with the necessity of seeing each other as unique persons, couples have the need to take conscious steps to close the gap that has developed between them. Let us then take a look at some of the specific ways this might be done. Remember that these are not panaceas or cures, but suggestions that point to the process of finding new life together. Each couple must discover what works for them.

First, then, we suggest that you find a way to renew the meaning of your marriage together in terms of your present desires and expectations. Certainly, the goals and ideals you originally had in mind when you embarked on your life together have been reached or have changed or are no longer appropriate to your situation. Now, at mid-life, is the time for spouses to discuss and to discover their mutual feelings about the meaning of their marriages.

RENEWAL of marriage implies movement toward the future. Attempts to cling to the past and from that perspective to control and predict the marital relationship will crush the life from the marriage. If one longs for the past, he cannot enjoy or be fully present in the here and now, which is where we must do our living.

Part of living in the present is accepting the fact that everyone shows signs of aging at some time or another. It is foolish to hang on to youthful looks indefinitely. Certainly careful attention to proper clothes and colors, hair styles, and fashions can enhance appearance. Good posture, proper exercise, and diet are also important, both for looks and for general physical health. But knowing when to let go of the past and accept nature's will gracefully is the key to living one's present life. In the long run this moving with the process of life has distinct advantages.

Perhaps your renewal of meaning in marriage will lead you to seek time apart for contemplation and reflection. There are couples who take part of their vacations each year for this. One spouse said that by the time he had been away from his wife a week he could hardly wait to get back to her! Maybe a sabbatical leave from marriage every 10 years or so would bring partners back together with new perspective and vitality.

A SECOND pointer for your exploration is to find common pursuits appropriate to your new age and stage. What had meaning at an earlier time may no longer be satisfactory. Over and over we return to the quote from Balzac: "Marriage must constantly conquer the monster that devours. Its name is habit." Finding common pursuits in study, in art and drama, in travel, and in other activities that will provide realms of meaning and conversational points of contact is essential.

Such common pursuits can be applied also to areas of social service. Get involved in a political party, or church activities, or social agency volunteer work and you may find that as you give yourself to some form of service, your marital health increases as well.

A third way to help recreate your life together — and this may sound facetious — is to keep alive the sense of chase. To be sure, the sense of chase will not and should not be the romantic tumult it was in early youth, with bouquets of flowers (though such a surprise is nice sometimes!), wild passion, and a literal chase around the car or couch. But a lively sense of pursuit in the manner of courtship attentiveness, persuasion, and spontaneity will keep the relationship exciting. Each person thereby affirms the partner continually as a desirable, needed person.

ALSO IMPORTANT is the willingness to be spontaneous about making love. Such spontaneity can recharge waning potency and bring spice back into the sex life. There are some people who cling to the old wives' tale that sex is debilitating to a middle-aged man. Actually, it can be just the tonic he needs to send him into the day's work with energy and exhilaration.

A fourth way to go at the task of bridging the spouse gap is to reserve time for each other in your marriage. In a sense, this suggestion underlies the previous three parts, for unless you take time for yourselves together you won't be able to see each other as persons, find common pursuits, or keep alive the sense of chase.

Finally, a fifth way to go about the task of recreating a life together involves the process of self-renewal. Or to put it in the vernacular: "Learn, baby, learn." This means recognizing that much of our disinterest and boredom with each other stems from the simple fact that we are not terribly interesting people to one another. Too often we quit growing, quit learning, quit renewing ourselves. Middlescence is just the time to start changing all of that and to embark on the task of continuing education throughout the rest of our lives.

Studies show that if couples can weather the storm of their middle years, if they can pass through the valley of the spouse gap, having faced all the fears and dangers that lurk there, then the outlook is very bright. As men and women move into their 50s, having adjusted to their crises, they have a higher rate of marital happiness and satisfaction. Often there is a kind of Indian summer or a second honeymoon in store for them.

THE WELL-MADE marriage is a rhythm in which gaps are inevitable, but in which also spouses can build bridges to close the gaps if both are willing to risk knowing and being known. It is a basic paradigm for human relationships, as male and female enter into a responsible, responsive, relational kind of love in which both grow and change and inter-act together and with others, and so fulfill their destinies.

FASHION DESIGNERS' VOTE

China Enters The World Community

Marin Women

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York designers beat the diplomats to the vote.

While the debate goes on at the United Nations on the East Side of town on how to admit mainland China to the world community, the results already are in from the fashion manufacturers on the West Side.

China's in.

The spring collections which major manufacturers-designers are currently showing buyers and press lift directly from so many Chinese motifs it's hard to keep track of them. Obviously, the minute President Nixon announced he was going to Peking to see Chou En-lai, the designers got out their costume histories and went to work.

LATEST TO lean heavily on the Orient for ideas is Donald Brooks, the award-winning designerwho does couture clothes for the stores and also dresses theater and movie stars.

Brooks copies the wide-brimmed coolie hat, with open crown and in airy-looking straws either black or white, showing them with daytime costumes.

The throat-hugging mandarin collar was everywhere in the Brooks collection. He used the frog (loops of fabric) closings on the sides of dresses and coats, and transferred such Chinese motifs as the kite, the puzzle and the lotus flower to prints of silk or wool.

Hardly Chinese, but at least oriental, were his fabulous evening prints done with kimono sleeves sweeping almost to the floor. The model started down the runway with arms folded primly in front of her, geisha style, then opened the sleeves wide to show how Brooks had worked the orangered and green lacquer silk print.

THE OTHER major trend in the Brooks collection was the ruffled look for late day and evening. Matter of fact, ruffles abound in most spring collections, part of what the fashion industry calls the return to soft, feminine fashions.

Brooks used intricate little ruffles to collar and cuff some late day and evening dress. In others, ruffles formed the whole bodice and skirt, af in one long black taffeta number with bare top.

Sweeps of ruffles were used to trim bodice and skirt of one deep green taffeta that got a hearty round of applause from the Brooks audience.

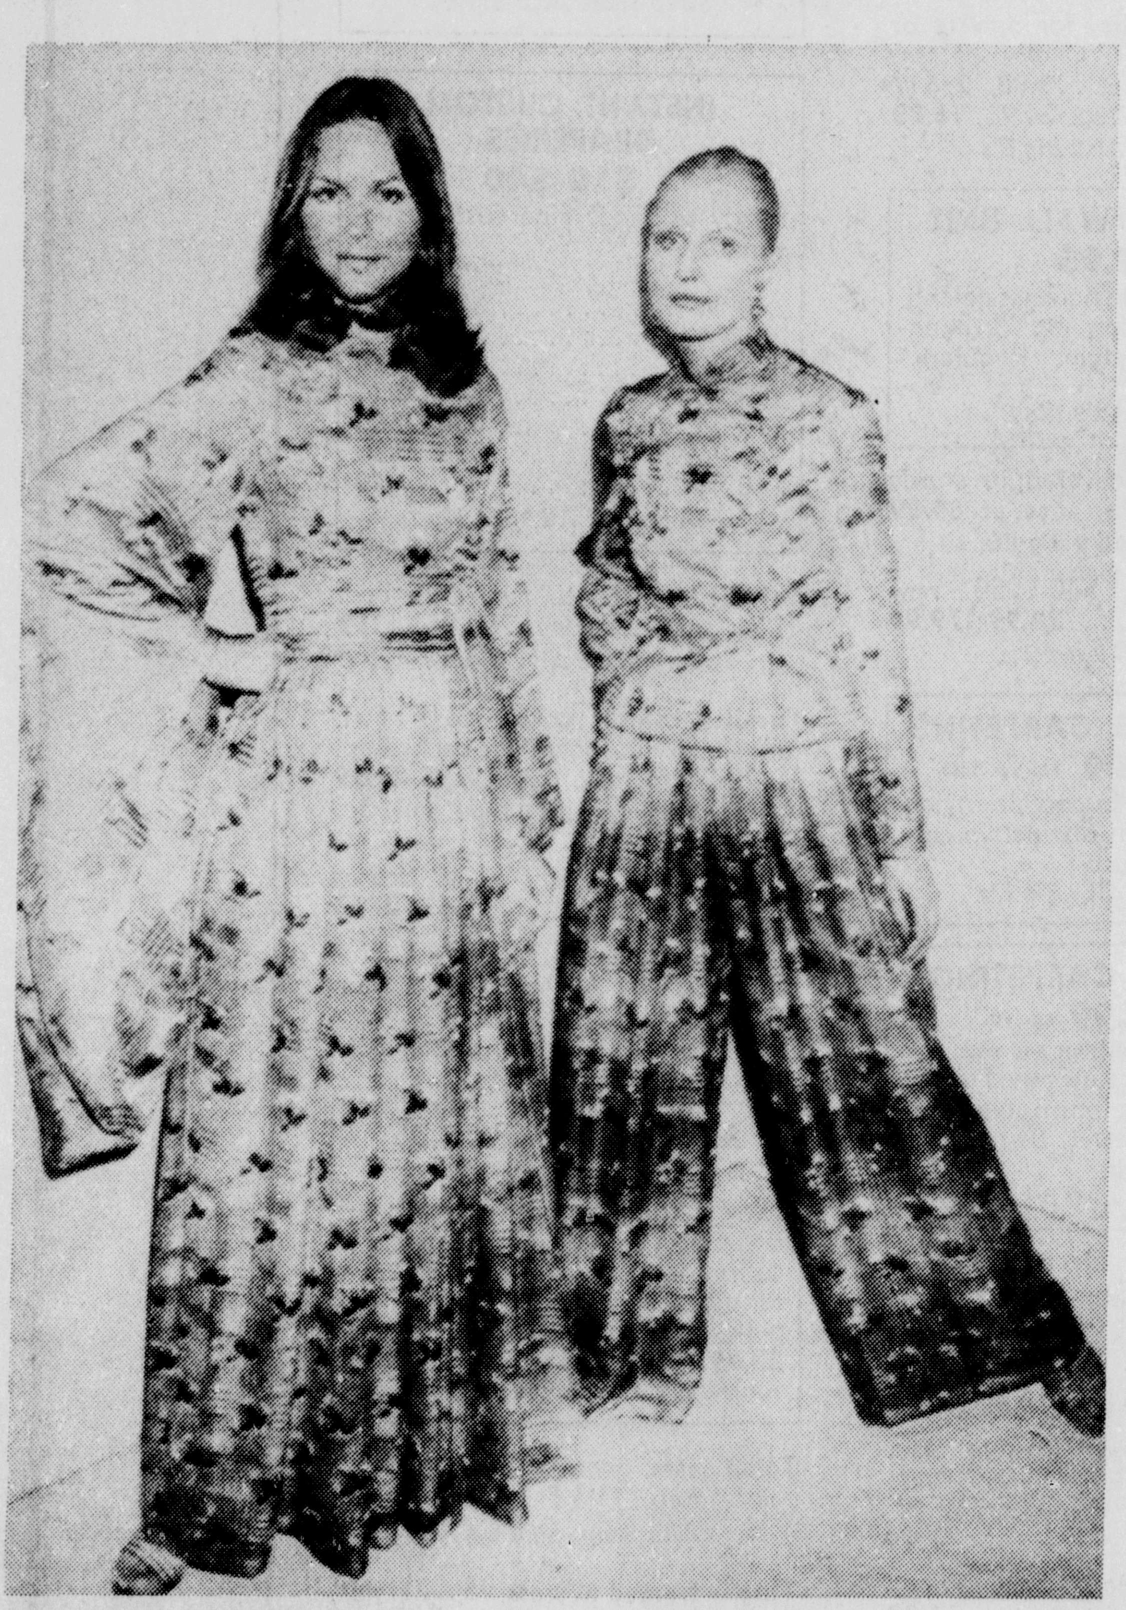
Some of the Brooks clothes looked prim as a schoolgirl's outfit. Others were daringly bare, as in his black crepe dress with bare midriff and low-slung hipster style skirt. A golden crepe evening gown was slashed in front all the way to the waist.

As in other collections, the big sleeve, cut dolman-style in one piece with the bodice, is a Brooks favorite. It looks elegant in the soft chiffon and organza prints.

THE OTHER major designer who showed his collection Wednesday was Geoffrey Beene who played the military theme throughout. He adapted military uniform shapes, notably the Navy's middy, dropping the collar on some dresses and coats to the waist to make a squared-off cape.

Beene leaned heavy on patriotic red, white and blue combinations. His opening group were three-piece pants costumes in wool and linen, all in red, white and blue.

New in footwork at the Beene show were Beth Levine--designed shoes, a different one for each foot. One shoe was a navy pump, the other was navy with a red wedgie inset.



DONALD BROOKS leaned heavily on Chinese and Oriental motifs for his spring fashion collection. He showed these evening clothes with the Mandarin collar, using frog-loop closings. The motifs are the Chinese kite, puzzle and lotus flower, combined with kimono sleeves. The costumes are silk and wool prints.

Halloween Ranks Second For Parties

More children's parties are held at Halloween than at any other time except Christmas, according to Flora Mears, who designs party goods.

Miss Mears' suggestions for a successful party are to use dim lighting and Halloween candles to create a "spooky" mood. Give prizes for the best costume. Provide lots of candies, popcorn, taffy apples, ice cream and soda pop for young guests.

Use table settings and Halloween decorations made of paper to save clean-up chores. And organize plenty of games and activities like apple-bobbing, treasure hunts, fortune-telling, blind man's buff and telling tongue-twisters. Here's a seasonal tongue-twister from Miss Mears: "Which witch watches which witch when six bewitching witches wail and whistle wickedly."

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Girl's Friend Had Fatal Crash On A 10-Speed; She Hates Them

ONE ACORN DOESN'T MAKE A FOREST
DEAR HELEN:

Here's one for your side, Helen. About 10-speed bikes: Hooray for the mother who didn't want her son to have one.

I had a good friend who went on a cross-country bike hike. He used a 10-speed.

Allan (as I'll call him) was about 50 miles from home when he ran into the back of another bike. He tried to maintain his balance and got his hands caught in the brake cables. He couldn't save himself and flew over the handlebars. As a result he received multiple skull fractures and suffered internal bleeding. After being unconscious for two weeks, he died. He was only 19.

Allan was more of a brother to me than my own brother. He was always there when we needed him and now he isn't there any more. I've come to despise 10-speed bikes. — KAREN

DEAR KAREN:

It was a terrible loss, and my deepest sympathies go to you and Allan's family. But, Karen, if you despised everything in this world that can induce accidents, soon you'd be giving up everything from cars to bathtubs.

Read on, and perhaps you'll see what I mean about blaming all of a group for one bad happening. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

Recently something happened to our group that got us mad and scared.

During the summer and on weekends we hang around the high school playground until about 10 p.m. Sometimes we got a little rowdy, but not menacing. Naturally we expected the neighbors to get irritated and occasionally call the cops. Each time we were asked to leave and we did so quickly and respectfully. No problem, either way.

The other night, however, we were just standing around when a police car came up, so we scattered. About seven of us began walking to my girlfriend's house. Just then, the squad car sped around the corner and out jumps this officer, who shouted at us and accused us of lying when we said we were on our way home. Then he searched us thoroughly for beer or dope — and I mean really too thoroughly for young girls, and threatened to book us for "loitering," which we weren't.

Our problem is we have no place to go except the playground, and we don't do anything wrong. Some of the guys drink, but not when they're with us girls.

Is it any wonder policemen get called names when they all come on strong like that? — NON-VIOLENT CROWD WHO MIGHT CHANGE BECAUSE OF COPS

DEAR NVCWMCBOC:

Don't judge "all" policemen from one bad experience. Remember last summer when you "expected the cops" and had no problems, nor did they. Most treat you decently if you give them the chance, but there can be over-reactors in any group — and that includes the "rowdy" teenagers who rile the neighbors (who over-react and call for a squad car). — HELEN AND SUE

DEAR SUE:

My best friend ran away from home last week. When she came back, her parents didn't even act glad to see her. They sent her to her room and grounded her. All they do is remind her of the terrible thing she did. Is punishment the answer? — H.P.

DEAR H:

No! A good, heart-to-heart talk to see what the real problem is might help to solve it. Then everyone should put the past where it belongs — behind them. — SUE

CAPT. ROBIN L. QUIGLEY

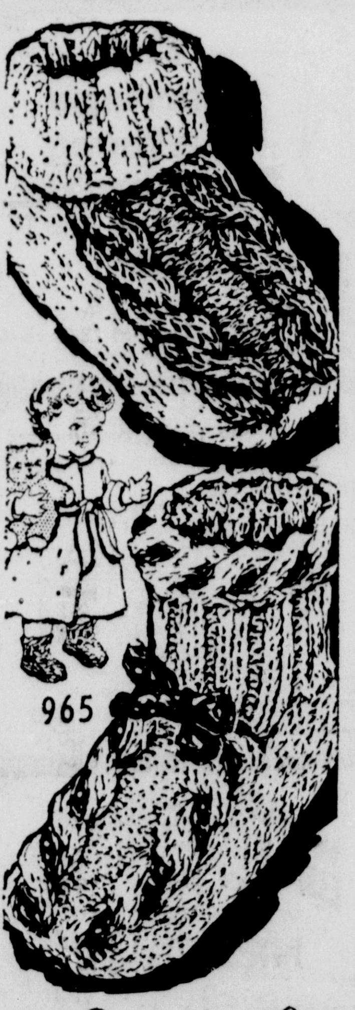
Snuggle Slippers



by Laura Wheeler

No more cold feet. Whip up Christmas slippers galore.

Youngsters love them 'cause they're cozy — mothers 'cause they're easy to wash, don't slip off. Knit each slipper in one piece plus cuff. Pattern 965; sizes 4-12 included.

Seventy-five cents for each pattern — add 25 cents for each pattern for Air Mail and Special Handling. Send to Laura Wheeler, the Independent-Journal.

Take Care In Selecting Hairstyle

If you've been wanting a change of hairstyle, beauty and fashion authorities advise you to take a good look at your own facial features and select a style to balance them becomingly.

A high or domed forehead is offset with a casual half-fringe or full fringe of bangs or curls. If you have a low forehead, sweep the hair up and off the face, adding extra height on top.

Avoid long straight styles and center parts if you have a long, pointed nose. Instead, choose medium length hairdos with asymetrical side parts or short, feathery forward swept top hair. Complement a very prominent chin by selecting a medium length style which falls forward over the ears to hug the jawline. To give a receding chin more prominence, choose one which tapers forward over the ear, curving onto the cheek area.

SEW SIMPLE

Really Easy To Come Up With Own Design Ideas

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I clipped a picture out of the newspaper of a very attractive dress made from wool double knit in two colors. It was so attractive and looked so simple, yet the placement of the contrasting colors is not the same as any pattern I have found. Is there any way we can copy a dress like this without a pattern?

MRS. NANCY R.

DEAR MRS. NANCY R.

The sketch you sent me would be very easy to copy, in this case for about one-tenth of the cost of the ready-made designer dress. Find a pattern with the same basic lines, you may even have to combine two patterns for this.

Carefully check the position of the first color change. It appears at the spot where there is a notch in the armhole for the sleeve. Take your ruler and mark a straight line across the bodice. The line would also appear at the notch mark on the front of the sleeve. Cut your pattern on the line, and mark both sections of the separated pattern "plus 5/8"" for the seam allowance.

The second line for a color change appears slightly below the waistline, proceed the same. In your picture, the sleeve is also changed at this point. To measure this accurately, it would probably be necessary to baste the sleeve into the armhole so that the exact spot could be marked.

Then, there is another contrasting band between the waist and hem. In each case, it is a very simple procedure as long as you remember to add the seam allowance to each section you have cut apart.

I would strongly encourage you to try this garment. When it's all worked out successfully I think you will have a thrill and will understand how simple it is to come up with designer ideas.

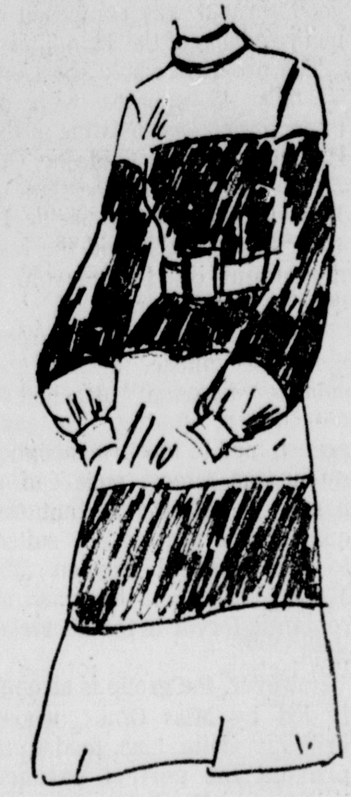
MRS. GEORGE H. Martin, Charlotte, N.C., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"For some of us who still wear aprons, I have found a neat trick. I take two aprons, place them wrong sides together and stitch them onto one waistband. In this way, the apron is reversible and also adds double protection, which comes in handy with some jobs.

"If one side becomes stained or worn beyond use, just clip it away at the waistband, and you will still have a single apron for further use. These reversible aprons are also great when it comes to entertaining — one side for the kitchen, the other for the guests."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have read everything there is to read about measuring yourself for slacks. I think I followed the instructions to a letter. When I completed the slacks, they were much too long in the crotch. Furtunately, I had enough length at the hem to raise them so they were wearable, but if I didn't, I would have wasted time and money. What kind of insurance can we get that this won't happen again?



SALLY S.

DEAR SALLY S.,

I have always been of the opinion that this measurement could be misjudged, and it was better to allow yourself a little buffer zone. It's usually best to build up the crotch seam about 5/8 inches. This means cutting the crotch seam higher at the depth of the curve only and running it almost horizontal into the curve as it changes direction. If you don't need this extra length in the crotch seam, it is easy to make the seam deeper to eliminate it. However, if you do need it, you'll save lots of time with this adjustment.

One of the problems comes from stretch fabrics. You can never depend on the amount of the lengthwise stretch. Often, the measurement could be correct, but the stretch factor of your knit would be greater than average, pulling the fabric down, causing the length of the crotch to become too long.

Working with knits and stretch fabrics is a whole new ball game in the sewing field. I have begun to use questions on knits, please send yours to me. This could apply to lingerie as well as men's slacks. Just sit right down and let me know your pet problems, and we'll see if we can't solve them.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just discovered how inexpensive it is to make knit slacks, and it only takes a couple of hours. I haven't found the secret of sizing as yet. Should knits be made from our regular patterns?

MRS. V.T.

DEAR MRS. V.T.,

Check your pattern carefully. If it is marked "for knits only", you can buy the pattern according to your hip measurements. If you are using your standard pattern that you have used for woven goods, it will be too large for the knit fabric. The correct size to buy is two inches smaller than your hip measurement. With knits you don't want or need the extra ease that is so important in woven fabrics.

Two Games Played At Halloween Parties

For centuries in England two simple fortune-telling games have been enjoyed by girls and young men at Halloween fireside parties. In the first game, says greeting card designer Flora Mears, a couple places a pair of chestnuts beside an open fire. If the nuts burn evenly side by side, the boy and girl supposedly will fall in love and marry. If the chestnuts burst and jump, the couple likewise will argue, quarrel and part.

To play the other game, all the men are sent outside the room. Three bowls are set on a table — one empty, one filled with clear water and the third with muddy water. The young men are then brought in blindfolded, one at a time and asked to choose a bowl. A man who picks the empty bowl, it's said, will remain a bachelor. Choosing the bowl of clear water means marrying a young girl. And a man who selects the muddy water, according to this ancient game, will marry a widow.

The Custom Of 'Trick Or Treat'

The Halloween custom of "trick or treat" originated centuries ago in Ireland, according to greeting card company art director Jeannette Lee. Early in Irish history an open-air parliament was held each year at Tara on Halloween, when fruits and crops had been harvested.

This gathering passed a law allowing farmers to go from house to house at Halloween, soliciting food for poor villagers.

People who gave cheerfully were promised prosperity. Those who were tight-fisted were made to perform some embarrassing trick, like running three times round the village, under pain of vengeance by the god Muck Olla. An offshoot of the custom was brought to the United States by 19th century Irish immigrants as "trick or treat."

Halloween Known By Various Names

Halloween is known around the world by various names, says researcher Sally Hopkins. In Britain, as well as being called All Hallow's Eve and All Hallow E'en, it's known as Nutcrack Night, since the roasting of chestnuts plays an important part in the festivities.

In Ireland, Halloween is sometimes called Oidhche Shamhna, or the Vigil of Samhain, Lord of Death. On the Isle of Man the name for Halloween is Hogunnas. The origin of Halloween, says Miss Hopkins, goes back to the Roman autumn festival of Pomona.

Ban Imposed On Dredged Mud In Bay

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — New fears about the environmental hazards of dredging poisonous sediments have led the Army Corps of Engineers to revoke 50-year-old regulations permitting wholesale dumping of dredged mud in San Francisco Bay.

The regulations date from days when dredging and dumping mud spoils were considered harmless. New knowledge, however, much of it gathered in the last two years — shows that bay muds have accumulations of toxic heavy metals such as lead.

Dredging the mud stirs up these metals, and dumping them back into the bay can build up levels of the metals.

Under the old Army regulations, dumping up to 100,000 cubic yards was allowed for maintenance dredging without a permit. Under the new regulations, permits will be required for all dumping — and dumping instead may have to be done outside the Golden Gate.

The two dumping grounds in the bay are off Alcatraz and Treasure islands.

To Exhibit Art

Elvire de Baere of San Anselmo will exhibit paintings and drawings during November at the Ross Valley Savings and Loan in San Anselmo.

Benefit Performance Of Musical Slated

A benefit performance of "The Fantasticks" by the Novato Community Players will be staged at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

Proceeds from the event, sponsored by the newly formed Marin Chapter of the Northern California Diabetes Association, will be used to buy free diabetes test kits and educational literature, to support free public lectures about diabetes problems and to establish a permanent headquarters for the Marin diabetes group.

The cast includes Evans Burke of Santa Venetia; John Bernardi, Dave Block and Maria Warren of Novato; Vera Hartsock of Ignacio; Bill Murray of San Rafael; John Bonner of Petaluma and Mervin Storms of San Francisco.

The orchestra is composed of Elaine Burke, piano; Natalie Cox, harp; Marc White, drums, and Bill Hooks Jr., bass.

Allen Comedy To Be Presented

The Actors Playhouse of Marin will stage three performances in December of Woody Allen's comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," at the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

The play, featuring San Francisco radio personality Terry McGovern of Sausalito, will run Dec. 10 and 11 at 8:30 p.m. and Dec. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Other members of the cast include Phyllis Courtney of Ross, Dan Caldwell and Tom Barker of San Rafael, Barbara Nelson of Sausalito and Stephanie Saunders of Corte Madera.

Tickets for the play may be obtained by writing the playhouse at Suite 111, the Sierra Building, 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

Society's 'Split' Mapped By Kerr

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Clark Kerr, chairman of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, says the real split in American society is between "outsiders" and "insiders."

Kerr urged that the "outsider" get a chance. He said new laws and regulations are necessary to make an industry prove its hiring exams are necessary and predicted the industrial society of the future will give more options and more authority to employes.

Kerr, former president of the University of California, addressed a meeting Thursday of the University of California Institute of Industrial Relations, of which he was the first director.

MUSIC REVIEW

New String Group Bows; Has Promise

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

The new Otnes String Quartet showed last night it can become one of Marin's fine chamber music ensembles in its debut concert in the auditorium of the Tamalpais Retirement Residence in Larkspur.

Composed of Allyn Otnes, first violin; Harris Elvebak, second violin; Joan Lundblad, viola, and Patricia Elvebak, cello, the quartet is a group of musicians — all members of the Marin Symphony Orchestra — who have been playing together for only a year for their own pleasure, and this was their first public appearance.

With more experience in playing together and with time to build a repertoire of varied styles, this new quartet should become a popular addition to the chamber music scene in Marin.

The players were fortunate to debut in the Tamalpais, which has marvelous acoustics in its intimate auditorium, seating about 250.

It was my first visit to the residence, and I was happy to learn that Marin has such an ideal small hall, where the public as well as residents may hear good music. This concert was part of a free public series sponsored by the College of Marin Adult Education Program.

Mill Valley piano instructor Gordon Pomfrey, who coordinates the programs, said series popularity is increasing, adding that about half of last night's good turnout was composed of non-residents of the Tamalpais.

The program was a short one — only 45 minutes with no intermission — consisting of the Haydn Quartet in G Major, Op. 77, No. 1; the first movement of Mozart's Quartet in C Major, L. 465 ("Dissonant"), and the last movement of Mendelssohn's Quartet in A Minor, Op. 13.

It was an evening of serene melodious music, despite the subtitle "dissonant" attached to the Mozart quartet. To ears accustomed to modern cacophony it was almost pure consonance. I had the feeling the quartet was particularly suited to the classical Hayden and Mozart styles and the dash of romantic fervor in the Mendelssohn.

However, the group is strongly led by Miss Otnes, whose brilliant violin tone tended to prevent the perfect balance that is so difficult to achieve in a string quartet. Like most such quartets, the outer voices tended to be heard over the inner voices at times, though the excellent acoustics made the most of the latter.

Timing and phrasing were skillfully handled, especially in the dialogue among instruments in the finale: vivace of the Haydn. Balance among voices was also at its best during this segment.

Marin Eyes Purchase Of Ranch For Park

Marin County is seriously considering purchase of the 380-acre Smith Brothers Ranch north of the Civic Center for a county bayfront park.

The disclosure came yesterday from County Administrator John F. Barrows, who said the county has been discussing a "north bayfront park" since 1969, but the exact site had not been pinpointed before.

A. E. Bagshaw, attorney for Edward and Jordan Smith, owners of the property, asked the board of supervisors in a letter this week either to buy the property for $900,000 or disclaim its interest in the land in order to remove any "cloud" from the property.

Bagshaw's letter will be discussed by the board at its Tuesday night session.

Bagshaw said the Smith Brothers had a chance to sell the ranch, on the north bank of Gallinas Creek and east of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad tracks, to a private developer. He said the prospective buyer backed off because County Parks and Recreation Director Pierre W. Joske told him the county wanted to buy the property.

If the county is not prepared to pay the $900,000, it should not scare off prospective buyers, said Bagshaw.

Barrows said the county has set aside $125,000 to start acquisition of a north bayfront park. "Several sites had been under investigation by our parks and recreation commission and department, and we are now concentrating our efforts on the Smith Brothers property."

Brunches Set For Funds To Fight Measure

Brunches will be given tomorrow at 11 a.m. at three Marin homes to raise money for newspaper ads urging a "no" vote on Proposition B, the Marin Municipal Water District proposal to contract with Sonoma County for Russian River water delivery.

The brunches will be given at the homes of Dr. and Mrs. Michael Berry of Ross, Mr. and Mrs. James Schock of Mill Valley and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lind of Terra Linda.

Reservations may be made by phoning the hostesses or by writing "The Plot to Save Marin" at P.O. Box 753, San Anselmo.

Youth In Art Series Announced

Four Marin performing arts organizations have banded together to present to Marin students an academic year of varied dramatic programs to be shown at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

The Marin Symphony Guild, the Marin Civic Ballet Association, the Junior Theater of Marin and the Marin Museum Association have arranged 14 programs to be shown twice each for school children, beginning Nov. 2.

Representatives from the four organizations have formed the Youth in Arts Committee to sponsor the program.

The first performance on Nov. 2 will be Marin Shakespeare Festival's "Wind in the Willows," to be shown at 10:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. Later presentations will include ballets, music concerts, dramas and puppet shows.

So far, according to Joanne Dunn of the Junior Theater, over 20,000 students have been booked for the performances. She said this is the first time a full-scale cultural program has been provided for children in Marin.

"Formerly if a school wanted to take children to a concert, the children would have been bused to San Francisco and pay as much as $5 each," Mrs. Dunn said. "Now we have cultural shows in Marin and the children only have to pay 35 cents for each performance."

She said the four organizations have been working for a year and a half to put the program together.

Other representatives besides Mrs. Dunn on the Youth in Arts Committee include Thelma Schultz and Joyce Conklin of the symphony guild; Helen Crotty and Nyna Koppich of the museum association; Phyllis Thelen of the ballet association and Camile Noble of the junior theater.

Baha'i Convention

Baha'i's of Marin will attend a five-county convention tomorrow at Willits to elect delegates to the Northern California Baha'i National Convention to be held in Wilmette, Ill.

Marian Marsh To Open Fall Series

Soprano Marian Marsh will present the opening public concert in San Domenico School's 1971-72 Artist Series Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Alumnae Hall on the campus in Sleepy Hollow. She will be accompanied at the piano by Alden Gilchrist.

A resident of Marin seven years, Miss Marsh has just returned from Lima, Peru, where she sang with the Orquestra Synfonica Nacional. She has also sung with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Oakland Symphony and Joffrey Ballet and in the San Francisco Symphony Pops concerts and the Cabrillo Festival.

On Wednesday, Miss Marsh will give a preview of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" for San Domenico students who will attend the San Francisco Opera performance on Nov. 3. Completing her program will be selections from works by Handel, Debussy, Alban Berg and Leonard Bernstein.

'Flower Drum Song' Is Next

Tryouts for "Flower Drum Song," next musical production of the Novato Community Players, will begin from 1 to 5 p.m. Dec. 5 at the Novato Community House.

Tryouts will be held again from 8 to 11 p.m. Dec. 6 at the same place, according to Paul Terry, producer of the show.

Shari Leaf will direct the show, with Lorayne Corzier as accompanist and Marie Bliss as choral director.

The show will be presented April 28, 29, and 30 and May 5, 6, 12 and 13 at the Community House.

Census Takers Stage A Strike

ROME (UPI)—Italy's decennial census ran into trouble today with striking census takers, citizens concerned about their privacy and at least one caveman-style lover.

Federica Balestra, a 19-year-old girl working as a census taker in Milan, told police a man tried to assault her when she called at his home to hand him a census questionnaire. She managed to open the door he had closed behind her and ran away screaming.

Police questioned the 39-year-old man and charged him with "violent lustful acts," a crime which carries a penalty of up to six years in jail.

In Rome, hundreds of census takers announced they were going on strike yesterday unless the city meets their demands for $9.60 a day, double what they are getting now.

Fire Destroys Petaluma Home

A family of four was left homeless Thursday when fire swept through their home at 1401 Spring Hill Road, Petaluma.

Firemen from the state Division of Forestry were called to the John Bessey home at 2:30 p.m. and found the structure almost fully engulfed in flames. They reported the interior of the building was gutted with all clothes and furnishings lost. Damage was estimated at $22,500.

The fire reportedly started in a rear bedroom when no one was at home. The cause of the blaze has not been determined. Firemen said the family was taken in by a neighboring resident.

Johnson Praises Black Lawmaker

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson, attending a reception to encourage Sen. Barbara Jordan, D-Houston, to run for Congress, Thursday praised the Negro lawmaker as "the epitome of the new politics in Texas."

"Not the politics that seek to destroy and divide to mess up everything in the way. She is involved in a governmental system of all the people, all the races, all economic groups," Johnson said.

He also plugged his new book on his presidential years and spoke briefly on his years in office.

"I gave it all I had," he said. "if I did accomplish all I wanted to, it wasn't because I didn't try."

Change Of Venue In Pot Plot

I-J Special Report

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A federal judge has granted a change of venue to a U.S. District Court in San Francisco for seven Marin County residents and 11 other men and women accused of a plot to smuggle marijuana from Mexico to Arizona and California.

Judge Walter Craig ruled that the pending arraignments of the 18 persons should be moved because all but three defendants are Bay Area residents. The 18 were indicted in mid-September by a federal grand jury in Phoenix on charges they conspired to import at least 2,900 pound of marijuana to a ranch near Winslow, Ariz., and planned to distribute it though use of houses in Tiburon and San Francisco as way stations.

Marinites indicted in the case were Will Walker, 27, of Corte Madera; Joanne Fahey, 31, of Corte Madera; Janice Lynn Swang, 23, of Fairfax; Daniel V. Badaracco, 28, of Fairfax; Hon Robert Franklin, 33, of Corte Madera; Frank Richard Sayre, 27, of Corte Madera, and Robert Halvorsen, 27, of Tiburon.

The grand jury alleged that San Francisco attorney Brian D. Rohan purchased the Winslow ranch as a depot for the marijuana smuggling. He was one of the 18 indicted.

Right To Search Sharply Limited

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A policeman's right to search a suspect's car for weapons or contraband was sharply limited by a California Supreme Court ruling Thursday.

Written by Associate Judge Stanley Mosk, the majority opinion prohibits a practice common throughout the state: search of a motorist's car after a minor traffic arrest when a policeman is suspicious of the activity, dress, haircut or appearance of the driver.

In handing down the opinion, the high court ordered a lower court not to allow as evidence a package of marijuana found in a vehicle driven by Gerald Andrew Gallik, 19, San Jose.

Gallik faces a trial for possession of marijuana. He was arrested by San Jose Policeman Roger Finton.

Sewage Funding To Be Discussed

Financing of a planned addition to the Petaluma sewage treatment plant will be reviewed at an adjourned meeting of the Petaluma City Council Monday at 8 p.m.

The council will consider calling a January bond issue election of almost $2 million to finance the project. A similar election last June failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote.

The council has promised the Regional Water Quality Control Board that if another election is rejected by voters, it will sell revenue bonds to finance the project.

Myers Is Against Women In Priesthood

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Right Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Episcopal bishop of California, says the priesthood is "a masculine conception" and the ordination of women would "produce a painful ecumenical tension."

The bishop made his remarks in a statement prepared for delivery today or Sunday to 700 delegates attending the state's diocesan convention this weekend.

"Christ is the source of priesthood," the prelate said. "The sexuality of Christ is no accident nor is His masculinity incidental."

Six years ago Bishop Myers' predecessor, the late James A. Pike, sought spiritual promotion for Deaconess Phyllis Edwards. She was invested as a member of the fourth Episcopal order of ministry in which she could assist the priest with Holy Communion but could not offer it.

Bishop Myers said he was not asserting God was a male but "in the imagery of both the Old and New Testaments, God is represented in masculine imagery."

"The male image about God pertains to the divine initiative in creation. Initiative is in itself a male rather than a female attribute," the clergyman said.

He said the priest "acts at the commissioned agent of Christ. His priesthood partakes of Christ's priesthood, which is generative, initiating, giving."

"The overwhelming majority of Christians cannot tolerate the idea of the ordination of women to the priesthood. For Anglicans to ordain them would produce a painful ecumenical tension."

He said Episcopalians "must not be swayed by the apparent willingness of some Roman Catholics to proceed in this direction."

He urged the delegates to work for a more "creative ministry" for women, "rooted in that of Mary, the Mother of Jesus."

"Could it be," he asked," that our Anglican lack of veneration for her as Theotolos (God's bearer) is at the root of much of our confusion?"

More Proceedings Set In Marijuana Fly-In

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Four men, including two Marin County residents, arrested last Sunday in connection with shipment of a truckload of marijuana, are to return to federal court Nov. 16 for further proceedings in their case.

Charged with possessing marijuana with intent to distribute it were Harry J. Kreamer, 32-year-old Bolinas lawyer; Allan G. Palmer, 30, of Novato; Paul R. Pattengale, 32, of San Francisco, and Allister M. McKenzie, 29, of Boyes Hot Springs.

They were arraigned Monday in U.S. District Court.

Agents who arrested the men said they learned of a plot to fly 1,200 pounds of pot from Florida to the Bay Area. They said they watched the four men unload crates from a small plane at the Oakland Airport Sunday and then followed three of the men in a truck to Marin.

Agents stopped the truck on Mitchell Boulevard in Northgate Industrial Park, where they theorized the men may have been heading for one of the warehouses in the area.

Kreamer, who left Oakland in his own car, was arrested later in the day in Oakland.

The Bolinas man also faces federal charges from another arrest Aug. 18 in Novato.

Agreement On Teen Center

The Sausalito Recreation Commission has announced an agreement with the Sausalito School District to move the Sausalito Youth Center from Old Star of the Sea Church to Central School, according to Chairman H. Thomas Rogers.

Rogers said the commission, meeting Thursday, deferred until Nov. 11 action on whether to approve plans for an urban plaza with underground parking in the area now occupied by Municipal Parking Lot No. 1 in downtown Sausalito.

Rogers said the commission will have a joint meeting that day with the Sausalito Planning Commission to discuss the matter.

Kennedy Attacked For Belfast Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., says Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is guilty of a "blatant attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of a friendly nation" because he called for the withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

"It was this kind of oversimplified meddling by Sen. Kennedy's brother that took us into Vietnam," said Dole.

Jail Sentence On Petty Theft

Shelly Marie Gonsalves, 20, of Berkeley, has been sentenced to 10 days in Marin County Jail for petty theft.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed her on probation for one year.

She pleaded guilty Sept. 2 to two charges of misdemeanor petty theft, while two misdemeanor burglary charges were dismissed.

She was arrested June 23, and originally charged with felony burglary, after Northgate Shopping Center security guards reported she had taken clothing valued at $209 from the Emporium and Hastings stores.

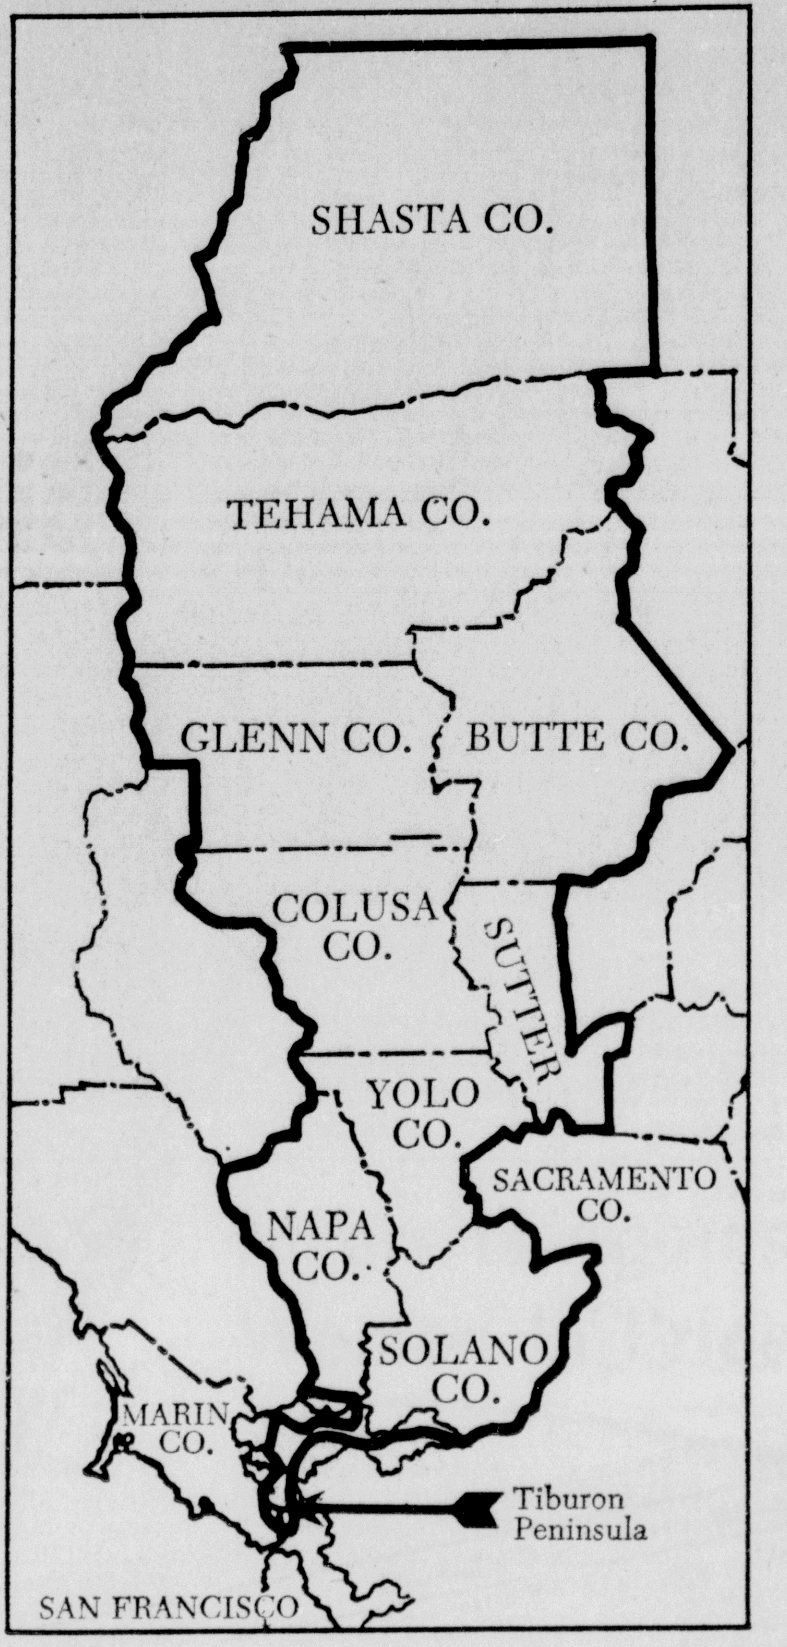
What Price Gerrymander?



This map shows

the incredible gerrymander now cooked up for Marin's Senatorial District. It would carve us into two fragments. One piece — eastern Corte Madera, the Tiburon Peninsula, part of Larkspur — would be stuck onto a district reaching all the way up to Shasta County. The other part of Marin would be tacked onto portions of San Francisco and — believe it or not! — San Mateo Counties.

A joke? It should be -- but unfortunately it isn't. It's now being printed up for adoption by Senate Committee on next Wednesday, October 27th! It is the culmination of cloakroom maneuvering and old-style partisanship — the kind of politics that deals in labels and personalities and ignores the people. (The Committee is also toying with an even more ludicrous notion that would slice Marin down the middle of Highway 101!)

What can you do?

Is there any way to protest? Yes — if you act fast! Sign and send the coupon below to Sacramento as quickly as possible. It will cost 8c postage — or less if you glue it to a postcard. And it will let the Senate Committee know that Marin citizens won't quietly let themselves be treated like excess baggage on an outrageous political joy-ride!

The non-partisan group of citizens below — both Democrats and Republicans — want people, not deals, to be the basis of our Senate District.

Don't let Marin go down the political drain. Spend 8 cents to fight for real representative government!

Sign and send this protest - Today!

TO:

Senate Committee on Elections and Reapportionment
State Capitol
Sacramento, California 95814

As a California citizen, I deplore the callous proposals to gerrymander Marin County for partisan and personal ends. This kind of politics went out of style long ago.

Marin County has much less than the minimum number required for a Senate District. There is no legitimate reason to split Marin. The County should be kept intact and linked to immediately adjacent areas with which it has a community of interest - such as Napa and Sonoma. The use of artificial districts will serve to increase the cost of campaigns, limit candidacies, and disenfranchise minority groups.

Please reject any and all redistricting plans that fail to adhere to logical lines or to keep Marin intact.

Terra Linda Knocks Off Redwood

By PAUL CANE

Championship-wise Terra Linda High School reversed a three-point midway deficit with three second half touchdowns last night to knock off former Marin County Athletic League-leader, Redwood High, 23-6 in San Rafael.

Balancing the vaunted passing game of free-wheeling quarterback Kevin Donohoe with the superb running of Mike Sabel, Terra Linda turned a tight ballgame at the three-quarter mark into a runaway before a packed, Trojan Homecoming audience on the San Rafael High School field.

"I think we've got a much better running game than most people have given us credit for," exalted victorious Trojan coach Don Lucas following the win. He guessed that Redwood was overpreparing for the publicized passing attack, and neglected to modify the defense for Sabel and halfback Sean Casey's runs. Sabel carried 17 times for 125 yards.

But if the spotlight shifted from Donohoe's passing, a bigger surprise was the defense applied on Redwood's highly-touted running attack. Daryl Edralin and Mike Connor, who combined for more than 225 yards last week in an upset win over the San Rafael Bulldogs, were held to less than 50 combined last night.

The Trojan mentor observed, "In their wishbone-T style offense it took so long for the back to get to the hole that we were usually there." Lucas lauded fullback Mark Asiano however, for shaking up the Trojan line on several runs up the middle.

Terra Linda scored the first time it had the ball, on a 26-yard field goal by Pete Corbett. Later in the quarter, the Giant defense forced the Trojans to punt, and Redwood ground out a 14-play, 82-yard drive that was to be the Giants only scoring effort of the night. Halfback Connor took a screen pass from Bob Brown for the eight-yard score.

Redwood, appearing to be the better team in the first half, was halted on the Trojan 25 on a subsequent series on a fine defensive play by Larry Madden on Edralin. "Madden was phenomenal," Lucas praised. The big junior tackle later ran 61 yards with a fourth quarter interception for a last Terra Linda score.

In the third quarter, Terra Linda trailing 6-3, Donohoe passed the Trojans for their

Warriors To Open Home Slate Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Golden State Warriors open their home National Basketball Association campaign tonight with a new name and a permanent court when they meet the Detroit Pistons.

The Warriors —known in earlier NBA seasons as the San Francisco Warriors —changed their name this year when the decision was made to play all of their home games in the Oakland coliseum arena. Last season the Warriors played their home games at three arenas — the Cow Palace, the San Francisco Civic Auditorium and the Coliseum.

The Warriors open the home stand after a road trip in which they came out with an even 2-2 record.

San Francisco Bay Area basketfall fans also will get their first look at newcomer Cazzie Russell, who was acquired during the off season in a trade with the New York Knicks for Jerry Lucas.

Russell pumped in 29 points and led the Warriors in their last outing Wednesday, a 115-98 victory over Cleveland.

The Warriors, who opened their home season a year ago against the Pistons, hope they don't stage a repeat performance of that game when they were bombed by the Detroit club.

The Pistons are 3-1 for the new season. They spoiled the New York Knicks' home opener, but lost their own Detroit debut to Los Angeles.

Detroit will be without star guard Dave Bing, due to eye surgery but they have been getting top performances from center Bob Lanier and guard Jimmy Walter, who scored 44 and 34 points respectively in a winning effort over Portland.

Horse Disqualified In Drug Controversy

NEW YORK (UPI) —The stir caused three years ago by the drug butazolidin flared anew Friday with the introduction of another word to the lexicon of racing-methacarbonal.

The New York State Racing Commission announced Friday that it had disqualified Cragwood Stable's Raise Your Glass, a horse which finished second in the third race at Belmont Park on Oct. 1, because commission chemists had discovered traces of the drug in the animal at the time of the race.

In 1968, Peter Fuller's Dancer's Image was disqualified after apparently winning the Kentucky Derby because traces of butazolidin, a pain killer, were found in the horse's urine.

Harry Peterson, chief chemist at the New York State Racing Commission laboratory —where saliva and urine tests on Raise Your Glass proved "positive" —described methcarbonal as a muscle relaxant used to relieve pain or soreness..

"The drug won't slow down or quicken the pace of a horse," stated Peterson, "but it would affect his ability to run because he's running under the effects of medication. Of course, if the drug is covering up any soreness, the horse shouldn't be allowed to run in the first place."

The commission moved Party Life up to the second position after disqualifying Raise Your Glass. Buck's Nashua was placed third and Silver Mallet fourth. Rise Your Glass was placed sixth and last. Purse money was redistributed accordingly, but the decision did not affect the pari-mutuel payoff.

Miller, in Kentucky for today's $25,000 Breeder's Futurity at Keeneland race course, revealed that Raise Your Glass sustained a chipped bone in his right knee during the Oct. 1 race, adding that the injury was not discovered until several days later.

The veteran trainer said the colt will be sold for stud service next month as part of a reduction of the estate of the late Charles W. Englehard.

Raise Your Glass has been unraced since Oct. 1. The Kentucky-bred, 3-year-old son of Raise A Native won two of nine races this year and earned $19,301.

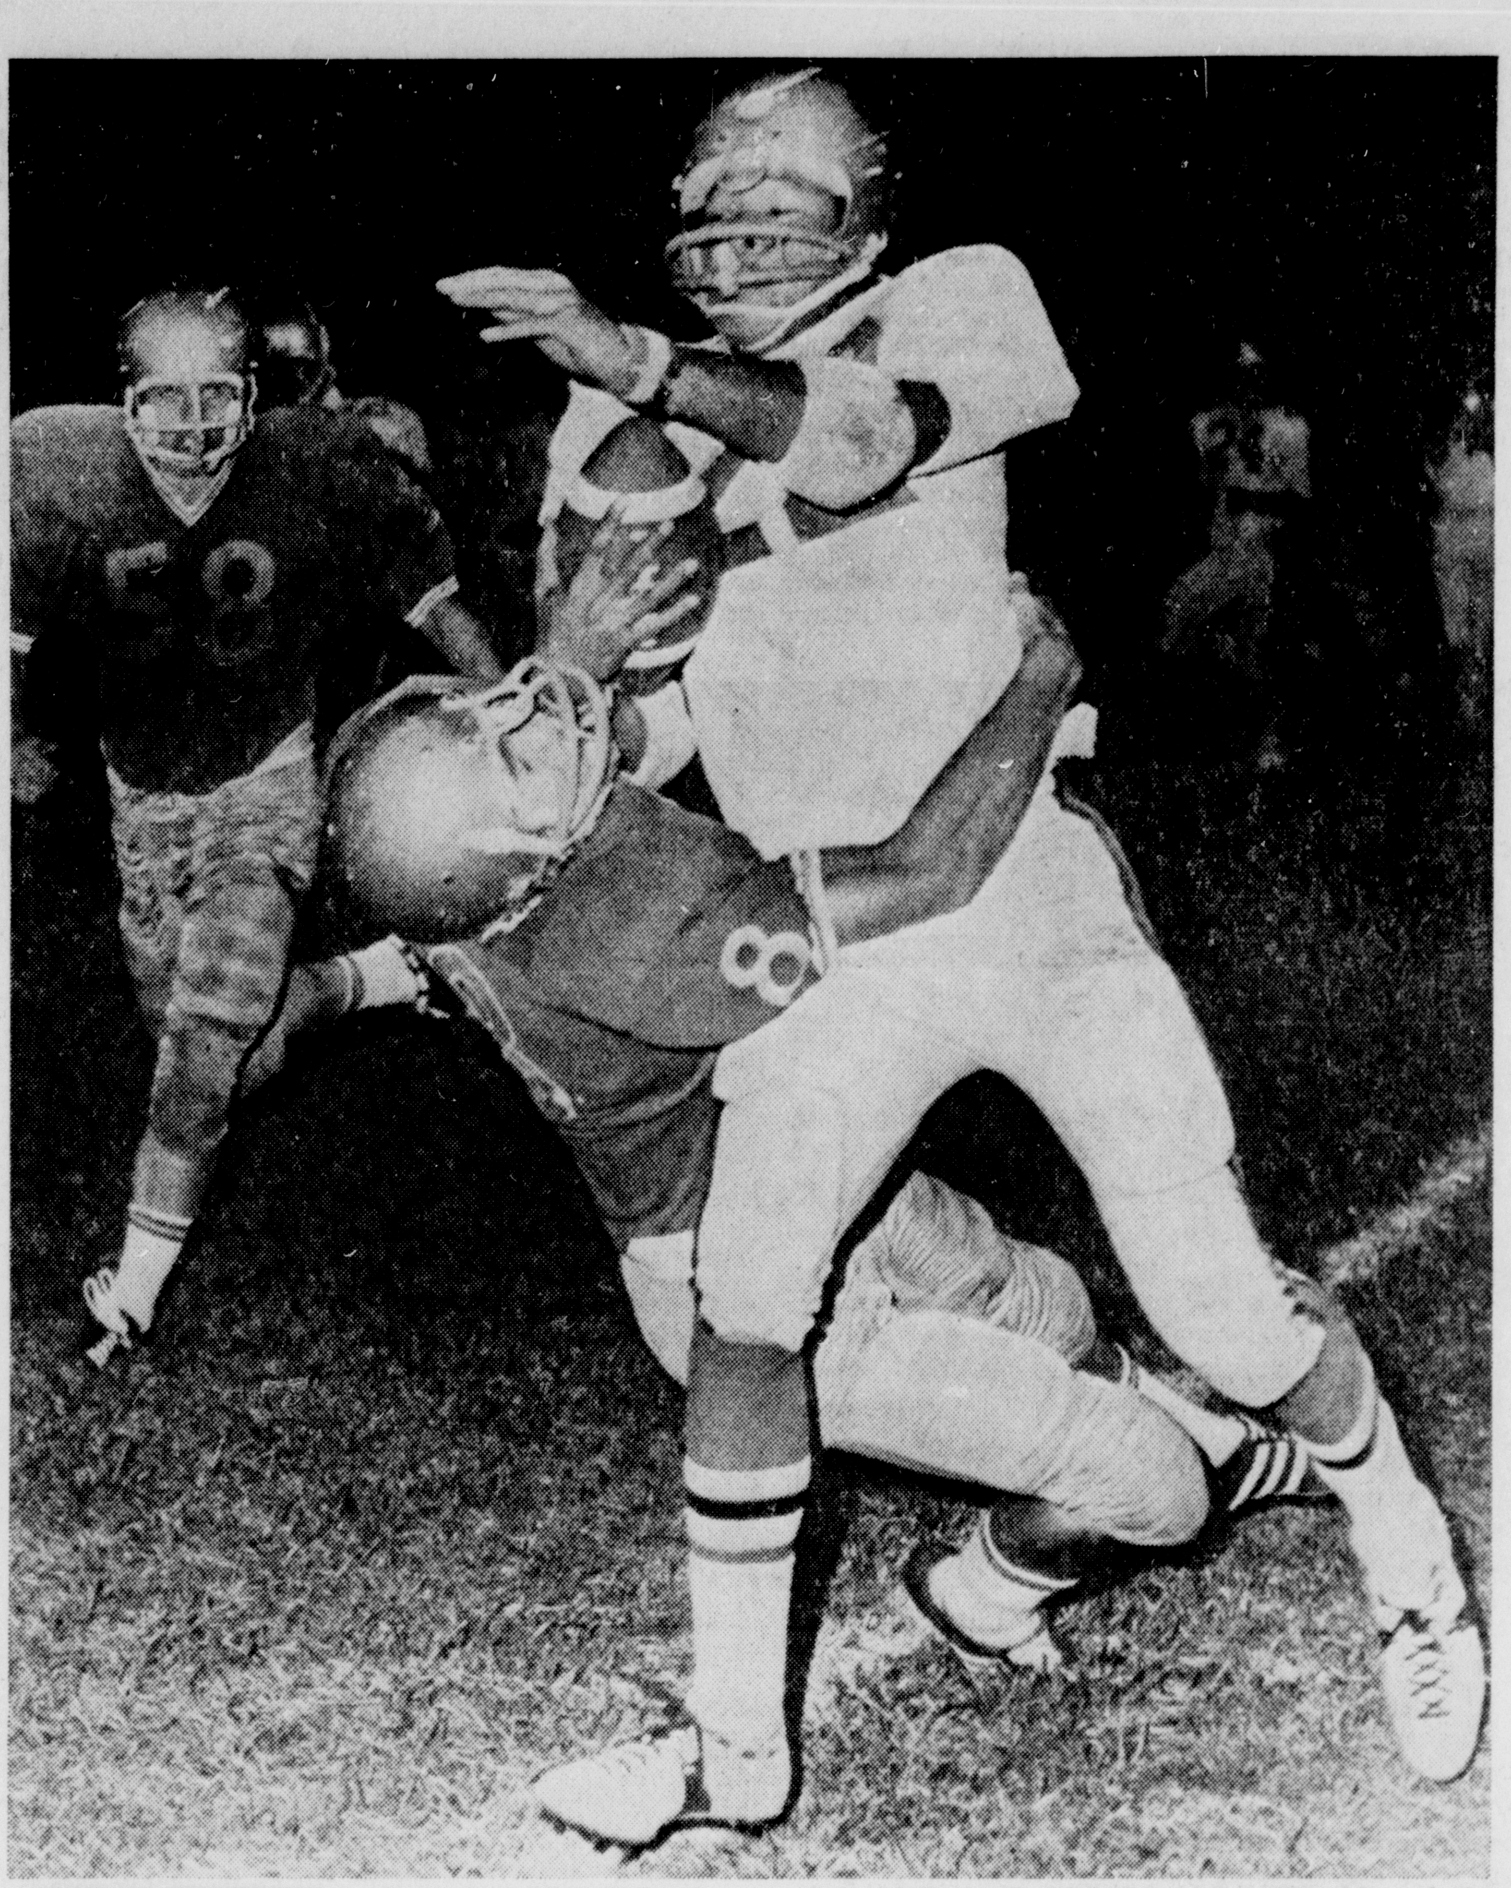
Miller said he had never heard of methacarbonal and had no idea how traces of it were found in the colt.

"It's not the first time this has happened to a trainer and it won't be the last," commented Miller. "You can't account for it. You can't say Joe Smith or Joe Doakes did this.

"If a man needs to feed his wife and family, he might do anything. There are lots of nuts running around the streets of New York. Our game is no different.

"I'm terribly glad I'm exonerated," he added.

The commission findings vindicated the colt's trainer, MacKenzie Miller. The report stated that Belmont stewarts found "no evidence that Miller or any of his employes had anything to do with this" and therefore had recommended to the commission that "no disciplinary action should be taken."



KAT CLOBBERED — Redwood High School ball toter Katsumi Johnson attempted unsuccessfully to elude the determined Rick Tallariti of Terra Linda High at San Rafael High last night in the third quarter. The blue-clad hosts had a triumphant homecoming, downing the Giants 23-6.

Bruins Tumble Seals

OAKLAND (UPI)—The California Golden Seals have completed their season opening home stand and with a short three-game road trip ahead of them, they're still looking for their first win of the year.

Playing before 10,348 fans, the largest home crowd of the season, the Seals fell, 5-1, Friday night to the powerful Boston Bruins. The loss extended the Seals losing streak to five straight games after opening the season with a pair of ties.

The Seals play in Detroit Sunday against the Red Wings.

The Bruins scored in every period Friday night and were led by Johnny Bucyk's two goals. Phil Esposito collected a goal and three assists to raise his point total in six games to 14 points. Boston's playmaker, Bobby Orr, also assisted on three goals.

California's only goal came in the first period when little Norm Ferguson pushed the puck through Bruin goalie Gerry Cheevers' pads on a power play.

The Seals picked up some needed scoring punch Friday when they acquired rightwinger Tom Webster from Detroit in a straight player trade.

In exchange for Webster, who scored 30 goals and had 37 assists as a rookie in the National Hockey League last year, the Seals sent defenseman Ron Stackhouse to the Red Wings.

Teammate Raps Monroe, Clark For Not Showing Up

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Jack Marin has chastised teammates Earl Monroe and Archie Clark for failing to appear for the Baltimore Bullets' game Friday night, calling their action "totally irresponsible."

"There's never been a case of a player not siding with a player on issues like these, but there is one now," Marin said, emphasizing the fact that he was speaking only for himself. "I think they (the club) ought to tell them both to get a job somewhere sweeping streets or whatever. This doesn't halp our (basketball's) image much and the feeling of a fan has got to be that it's irresponsible."

Monroe and Clark, who were obtained by Baltimore earlier this week in a trade with Philadelphia, were suspended by the Bullets Friday night when they failed to suit up and a club spokesman said that Monroe has demanded that he be traded. Both Monroe and Clark are high-scoring guards.

Neither player was on hand when the Bullets took the floor Friday night against the New York Knicks, who romped to an easy 110-87 National Basketball Association victory.

"We are embarrassed and chagrined by the timing of this announcement," said Jerry Sachs, executive vice president of the Bullets. "We regret that fans, who came to see these two stars perform, were unable to do so."

Sachs added that attorney Larry Fleischer had told the Bullets that Monroe wanted to be traded and said, "We are contacting NBA teams but have not been able to arrange a trade as yet; we feel that we are living up to our part of the bargain but don't feel that Earl is."

Clark, who is reported to have been given permission to visit Philadelphia, for personal reasons, apparently wants to renegotiate his contract. Bullet officials said they haven't heard from him since he was granted permission to go to Philadelphia.

It's A Great Debut For Ron Stackhouse

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Ron Stackhouse's debut with the Detroit Red Wings got him four things: a goal, two assists —and a fat split lip.

It also got the Red Wings their second victory of the National Hockey League season when they overcame some troublesome fog over the ice Friday night and also the Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-2.

There were only two other NHL games played, and in them, the Boston Bruins slugged the California Golden Seals, 5-1, to move into a tie with the New York Rangers for first place in the East Division, and Montreal moved only a point back with a 6-0 shutout of the Vancouver Canucks.

"You couldn't ask for anything more," coach Doug Barkley of Detroit said of his club's new defenseman, obtained only Thursday night from the California Seals for Tom Webster, who led the club in scoring as a rookie last season.

"He played defense, played the point on power plays and killed penalties. Hell, you saw what a difference he made," Barkley said.

"I liked it out there in California," said Stackhouse, who sported a cut requiring a half-dozen stitches after being smacked in the mouth with someone else's stick behind the Detroit net, "but I think I'll like it here, too.

"I was nervous as hell out there at the start,," he said, later adding of his three-point debut, "I didn't do much. The two assists I got the other guys did the work on."

Stackhouse's second goal of the season broke a 1-1 first period tie at 2:36 of the second period.

Darryl Sittle and Red Berenson then traded goals to close out the scoring in the game, which was stopped four times to give the fog a chance to clear. Norm Ullman and Tim Ecclestone traded first-period goals to force the tie which Stackhouse broke.

Frank Mahovlich got a "hat trick" for the Canadiens while Marc Tardiff added two goals in Montreal's win.

San Rafael Ups Soccer Lead With 2-0 Win

San Rafael High School defeated visiting San Marin, 2-0 yesterday to move three points up on runnerup Drake in Marin County Athletic League soccer standings.

The second-place Pirates lost, 2-0 to host Redwood, while Terra Linda stopped Marin Catholic 1-0 on the Winner's field.

Adolpho Flores had both San Rafael goals. Redwood's John Ballard and Tom Sleisinger eached tallied to upset Drake. Pete Wardenburg was credited with Terra Linda's lone goal.

Marin Tars Lose Soccer Match

The College of Marin Tar soccermen bowed, 3-1 yesterday to visiting Skyline College of San Bruno.

Ahmed Serag-Eldin scored the Tar's lone goal in the fourth period, but it was not enough to offset the invaders' three first-half tallies.

The Tars visit De Anza College in Sunnyvale Tuesday at 3:15 p.m.

KAISER GOLF

Billy Casper In Command

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) —Billy Casper has his game back in hand, which has to be bad news for those chasing him today in the third round of the $150,000 Kaiser International Open.

Casper, one of golf's top players over the last 10 years, has been caught in an unexplainable slump this year and he came to the Kaiser determined to shake it. He also brought along a new set of irons, and that apparently has turned things around.

Friday, Casper fired a seven under par 65 and with his opening round 67, stood at 12 under par 132 for 36 holes. He also went into today's third round three strokes ahead of Tommy Aaron, who admits he's playing his best golf of the year but it might be just so much wasted effort.

Aaron had an opening round 66 and added a 69 in the second for a 138 score, nine under par. He led Tom Watson, the Stanford University grad who received his PGA playing card a week ago today, by a stroke. Watson has shot two 68s and he in turn is another stroke ahead of George Johnson, Dick Lotz, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mike Hill.

Wilf Homenuik and Fred Marti are at 138 and Lee Trevino, who hopes to finish in the first three here so that he can overhaul Jack Nicklaus for the money-winning lead, tops a group of nine tied at 139, five under par and seven strokes behind Casper.

In that group of nine is former Marinite Ron Cerrudo who fired a 69 yesterday to go with his 70 opener. Buddy Sullivan, pro at Marin Country Club in Novato, shot a 72 for a 146 and missed the cut by two strokes, so will be watching the final two days of the tourney from the sidelines.

Casper had eight birds and one bogey in the second round and for two rounds he has missed just two greens. He attributes his fine play to the new irons, which are stiffer than the ones he used previously this year while being shut out.

The last tourney title Casper won was the AVCO Classic 14 months ago and when he came to Napa early in the week he said he felt he might finally break the slump.

"I shot a couple of practice rounds with the new irons," said Casper, "and I liked them very much. All of a sudden I was playing well again. After the first two rounds here I feel very confident."

"I'm playing my best golf of the year," said Aaron, "but with Casper playing the way he is, he is going to be a very tough man to catch."

"He's (Casper) really shooting it up," said Trevino. "I don't see how anyone is going to catch him. When he gets out in front the way he is now he is the toughest guy in the world to beat."

Casper's improved iron play has made putting a whole lot easier.

"I've been in position for a bird on almost every hole," said Casper. "I can't explain the sudden turn around. It just has to be the new irons."

Casper's longest putt for a bird was a 20-footer on the par-four eighth. He had a 15-footer on the sixth and all the other putts were off 10 feet or less.

The cut for the final two rounds of Kaiser was made at even par 144 and exactly 70 players survived. Among those who didn't were defending champion Ken Still, Kermit Zarley, winner of the first Kaiser in 1968, and Bobby Lunn.

Willie McCovey To Enter Hospital For Surgery

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Willie McCovey, San Francisco Giants first baseman, will enter Stanford Medical Center at Palo Alto Sunday to undergo surgery to correct a cartilage condition of his left knee, the team announced Friday.

The surgery will be performed by Dr. Frederick Behling Monday. It was expected that McCovey will remain in the hospital about a week.

A cartilage in McCovey's left knee will be removed. The condition has incapacitated McCovey for protracted periods during the past season and handicapped him throughout the year.

McCovey had previously decided to have the surgery after the end of the season.

A Letter From Father To Son

Amos Alonzo Stagg lived more than 100 years by guilding principles outlined in a letter to his son. On Stagg's 100th birthday in 1962 this column printed the letter. There were a number of requests for reprints.

Now, almost 10 years later, several new reprint requests have been received. Maybe the somewhat confused and troublesome problems of a so-called generation gap prompted the new requests. Whatever the reason, here is the letter the great football coach wrote to his son long ago:

To My Son, Amos Alonzo Stagg Jr.

YOU ARE only a little fellow now —a trifle over 14 months old; but I have loved you so dearly since you came that it has been on my mind to write you a letter in the event of my being taken away at any time before I have had a chance to tell you many things which you need to know.

Your father wants his Boy first of all to love, protect, and care for his Mother, giving to her the same kind of measure of love and devotion which she has given to you.

SECOND, your father wants his Boy to be sincere, honest and upright. Be your true self always. Hate dishonesty and trickery no matter how big and how great the thing desired may be.

Third, your father wants you to have a proper independence of thought. Think matters out for yourself always when it relates to your own conduct and act honestly afterwards.

Fourth, your father wants you to be an American in democracy. Treat everybody with courtesy and as your equal until he proves his unworthiness to be so treated. The man and the soul are what count — not wealth, not family, not appearance.

FIFTH, YOUR father wants you to abhor evil. No curiosity, no imagination, no conversation, no story, no reading which suggests impurity of life is worthy of your thought or attention and I beg you never to yield for an instant but turn your thought to something good and helpful.

Sixth, train yourself to be master of yourself, of your thought and imagination and temper and passion and appetite and of your body. Hold all absolutely under your will. Allow no thought nor imagination, nor passion, nor appetite to injure your mind or body. Your father has never used intoxicating liquors, nor tobacco, nor profane language. He wants his Boy to be like him in this regard.

SEVENTH, YOUR father wants his Boy enthusiastic and earnest in all of his interests, his sports, his studies, his work; and he wants him always to keep an active, actual participation in each so long as he lives. It is my judgment that one's life is most healthy and most successful when lived out on such a basis.

Eighth, your father wants his son to love God as He is revealed to him; which after all will be the revelation of all that I have said and left unsaid of good to you, my precious Boy.

Affectionately,
Your Father.

Redwood High School defeated host San Rafael High 69-43 Thursday in a girls swim meet. San Rafael's Jo Hislop set a new Marin County Athletic League girl's mark in the 100-yard freestyle, 57.7, breaking her old mark by 1.6 seconds.

Raiders Facing Old Nemesis in Bengals

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders will face an old nemisis—the Cincinnati Bengals —Sunday in the Oakland Coliseum when they go after their fifth straight victory.

The Bengals, American Football Conference Central Division champions in 1970, are the only team to beat Oakland more than once in the last two seasons.

In 1969, Cincinnati stopped a 15-game Raiders winning streak with a 31-17 victory at Cincinnati. Last year, Cincinnati stunned Oakland in the season opener, 31-21, at its new Riverfront stadium.

In the series that started in 1969, Oakland holds only a 3-2 edge over the Bengals.

But the Raiders, rolling along with a 4-1 record and holding first place, along with Kansas City, in the American Football Conference Western Division, are at least two touchdown favorites in the contest.

Coach Paul Brown's Bengal's, still being led by rookie quarterback Ken Anderson, who is filling in for the injured Virgil Carter, won their opener 37-14 over Philadelphia, but have since lost four straight narrow decisions to Pittsburgh, Green Bay, Miami and Cleveland.

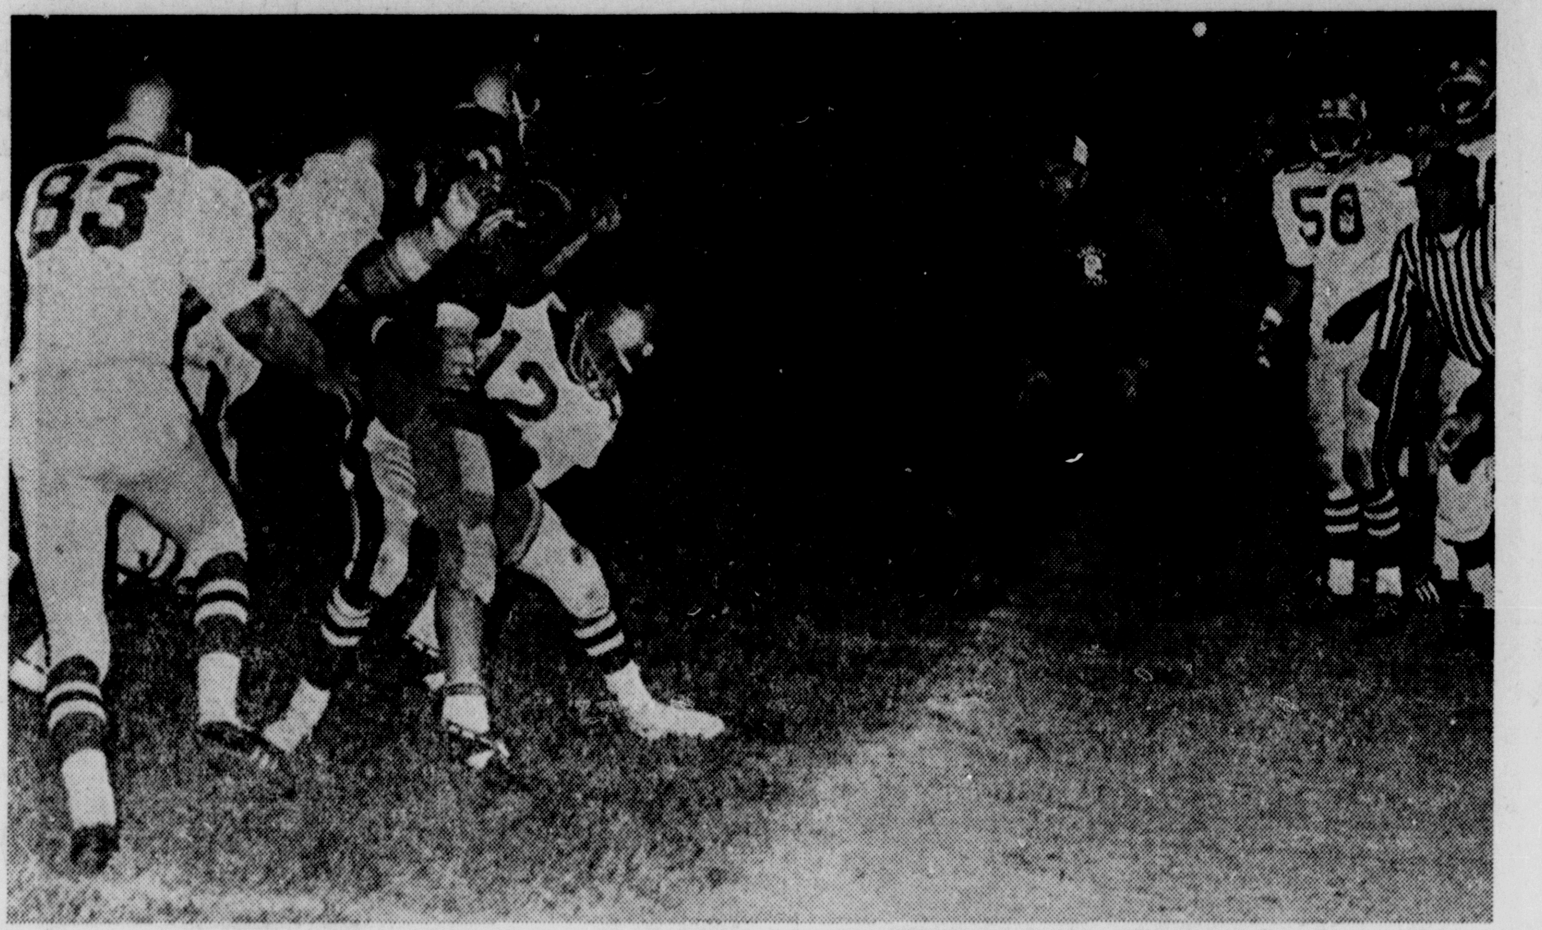
In last week's game against the Browns, Cincinnati rolled up 339 yards total offense and limited Cleveland to 64 yards rushing, but lost 27-24 in the final seconds.

Anderson has completed 33 of 62 passes for 400 yards and two touchdowns in three games. But the Raiders' principal job will be to contain Bengal running back Essex Johnson, who has the highest average among AFC players with 7.7 yards per attempt.

The Raiders boast a powerful balanced offensive attack and are ranked as the top offensive team in the AFC, collecting 1,688 yards in five games.

Oakland running back Marv Hubbard is ranked No. 2 in rushing in the AFC with 371 yards. Quarterback Daryle Lamonica has plenty of top receivers, including Fred Biletnikoff, who became Oakland's career reception leader last week when he caught eight passes to run his total to 262.

Raider wide receiver Rod Sherman, who sprained his ankle in last week's 34-10 triumph over Philadelphia, may not play Sunday. He will be replaced by Eldridge Dickey.



TENSE MOMENT — Terra Linda High School halfback Sean Casey was about to be pushed out of bounds by Redwood's Matt Gondak (83) and Bob Brown (12) last night at San Rafael High. Redwood coaches Phil Roark (with hat) and Jess Payan (grimacing) anxiously watched the Giant pair stop Casey.

BOWLING

691 Tops; Gals Roll 1,013 Pins

Rich Rottman rolled a 691 series at Greenbrae Lanes, Jim Stewart rolled a 681 at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael, and Jake Harrington had a 655 and 278 game at Nave Lanes in Ignacio to highlight the past week's bowling scores in Marin County.

Women's scoring was led by Jackie Newsom, 640 series at Nave Lanes.

In the 900 Limited League at Greenbrae Lanes Thursday night, the league's one team of women lost a close match to a team that included three of their husbands, 2 games to 1. But one of the losses came when the gals scored the highest women's team score ever in Marin County league play, 1,013. The men rolled 1,014!

The team of women and their scores in that big game were Penny Tauscher (248), Marilyn Epidendio (207), Lu Sharp (212), Lois Schwab (173) and Sylvia Asay (173). The men's team was composed of Mike Tauscher, Rich Epidendio, Bob Sharp, who rolled a 603 series, and Pete Buono and Ted Wensloff.

Penny had the high series, 615.

Buffalo Visits San Diego Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Maybe the sight of his old collegiate glory days will rekindle a flame in Dennis Shaw.

That's what the Buffalo Bills are hoping tonight as they journey to San Diego to meet the Chargers in a National Football League contest.

Shaw, rookie of the year in the American Football Conference last season, has been something less than sensational so far this season, having thrown for only five touchdowns while having 11 passes intercepted in five games.

That hasn't figured out to a very happy beginning for the Bills, who have lost all five of their games and are buried in the cellar of the AFC's Eastern Division.

Shaw, however, has the potential to become one of the fine quarterbacks in the league and perhaps the friendly confines of San Diego Stadium will get him out of his slump. Shaw starred for three seasons at San Diego State and played many games in San Diego Stadium as a collegian.

Neither the Bills nor the Chargers are doing as well as expected. The Chargers have lost four of their five games and have been equally disappointed with the play of quarterback John Hadl, whose statistics are similar to Shaw's. Hadl also has been intercepted five times and has tossed for only five touchdowns.

Still, there is hope in San Diego that the Chargers will right themselves before very long. The oddsmakers think it will be tonight and have installed San Diego an 11-point choice.

Baltimore is at Minnesota in Monday night's nationally-televised game.

The Washington-Kansas City game shapes up as Sunday's best encounter. The Redskins are the NFL's only undefeated team while the Chiefs have won four of five games..

USC Freshmen Win

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Tailback Allen Carter scored on runs of 21 and 38 yards and Pat Haden threw two touchdown passes Friday as the University of Southern California freshman team defeated the Stanford frosh, 37-0.

TROJANS

first touchdown, climaxing a 42-yard drive with a 15-yard pass to John Buckley.

Lucas explained, "After we went ahead, they panicked and began going to the air too much. We double covered each of their receivers, and they played right into our hands."

A major penalty against the Giants on a punt return set up the next Terra Linda score, as the Trojans ran six plays on the ground for a touchdown. Donohoe himself carried on a sneak for the clinching one-yard touchdown with 5:54 left in the game.

Madden then picked off Brown's attempt at throwing the ball away under pressure, and pounded all the way into the end zone to reach the final 23-6 tally.

Lucas, going after his sixth straight MCAL title, was pleased with the results of left-end sweeps, saying that his guards were getting out and turning in the linebacker.

The MCAL standings, becoming more and more complex, hinged on the outcome of the Drake-Novato contest today. Redwood, Terra Linda, and San Rafael each have one loss in league play, and would be joined by Novato should Drake win an upset.

The big game next week will be San Rafael versus the Trojans, Friday night, a contest that will most likely eliminate the loser from MCAL title contention.

Redwood gets no respite from the passing attack, going against Hoza Wright and the San Marin Mustangs.

Bruin Frosh Win

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Quarterback Greg Cockayne threw touchdown passes of 19 and 29 yards to end Gene Bleymaier Friday to highlight a 34-0 victory by the UCLA frosh over the California frosh at Spaulding field.

A fumble recovery by Greg Norfleet late in the second period on the Cal Frosh 22 set up Cockayne's 19 yard scoring pass to Bleymaier.

49ers Hobble Into St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (UPI) —A battered and bruised San Francisco 49er team makes its first regular season visit to St. Louis since 1962 Sunday to play the St. Louis Cardinals.

It will also be the first league meeting between the two teams since 1968, a game which the 49ers won, 35-17.

The 49ers, defending Western Division champions, are trailing the Los Angeles Rams (3-1-1) with a 3-2 record for the season. Last week San Francisco scored its first shutout in a decade by blanking Chicago, 13-0, but came out of the tough battle hobbled and limping.

The injury list was enough to make 49er coach Dick Nolan call for reinforcements. All-pro wide receiver Gene Washington bruised his thigh and knee, fullback Ken Willard hurt his leg, tight end Ted Kwalick banged his thigh, middle linebacker Ed Beard pulled a hamstring and strong safety Mel Phillips twisted his ankle.

But with the exception of Beard, all of the injured players probably will be ready to play against the Cardinals.

"Kwalick, Willard and Phillips are probables," Nolan said, "and Washington and Taylor are possibles. I still don't know about Beard."

Free safety Roosevelt Taylor did not play against the Bears because of a pinched nerve in his neck. If Taylor can't make it against St. Louis, he will be replaced by Johnny Fuller.

After a 20-0 loss to Washington last week, the Cardinals (23) face an uphill battle in the NFC's eastern division.

St. Louis also has a key injury in its defensive backfield just when they meet the No. 1 offense in the NFC —the 49ers are averaging 365.4 yards per game. All-pro free safety Larry Wilson is out with a hip injury and is not expected to play. He will be replaced by rookie Larry Willingham.

On offense, the Cardinals will choose between quarterbacks Pete Beathard, who completed 12 of 22 passes for 142 yards but had three picked off against the Redskins, and Jim Hart, who had three for eight for 38 yards and one interception last week.

Baseball

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — The Milwaukee Brewers and Baltimore Orioles engaged in a four-player swap Friday in which the Brewers got back one of the players they picked in the 1968 expansion draft.

The Brewers sent infielder Tom Matchick and minor league catcher Bruce Look to the Orioles in exchange for two minor leaguers, pitcher Mike Herson and third baseman Mike Ferraro whom the Brewers picked in the 1968 expansion draft when the club was starting out at Seattle.

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox Friday announced acquisition of right-handed relief pitcher Lowell Palmer, 24, from the Philadelphia Phillies' Pacific Coast League farm club, Eugene, Ore, for Bob Spence and Don Bolte.

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers Friday hired Dick Tracewski, for the past two seasons as manager in the Detroit farm system, to coach first base for the 1972 season.

Tracewski replaces Frank Skaff on manager Billy Martin's staff, which includes three coaches retained from 1971 — Art Fowler, Joe Schultz and Charlie Silvera.

NEW YORK — Bob Aspromonte and Donn Clendenon were put on waivers Friday by the New York Mets to make room for rookies Dennis Saunders and Billy Cotton, who played for the Memphis team in the Florida league last season.

Auto Racing

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (UPI) — If the rain continues in Rockingham today it will mean some pretty exciting initial laps for Sunday's $106,000 American 500 stock car race.

If qualifying is washed out for a third straight day, officials said, drivers will be starting in the order in which they entered the race, which would put most of the top drivers far back in the field.

Basketball

NEW YORK — All-Pro guard Walt Frazier of the New York Knicks was admitted to Roosevelt Hospital Friday to undergo a checkup for a stomach disorder.

The Knicks immediately signed eight-year veteran Eddie Miles to help out at guard while Frazier undergoes tests.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Safety Of The Contract Is The Important Consideration

In the kind of tournament now going on in New Orleans the safety of the contract is the important consideration, just as it is in rubber bridge. By tomorrow afternoon, the American Contract Bridge League will be in position to name the team that will represent the United States in the Bridge Olympics next June. The contest between a team led by Los Angeles star Lew Mathe and the Dallas Aces, winners of the world championship in 1970 and 1971, is likely to be very close, largely because the nine players on the two teams would automatically choose the right play in such a hand as today's.

FINESSE

Even in the average expert game, declarer would take the finesse with the queen of hearts at the first trick. "After all," says the average expert, "the heart finesse may work. If not, the diamond finesse may work. If not, the diamond finesse may work. If not, the opponents may be able to take only three heart tricks. If everything goes sour, I still won't cry. I've been beaten before."

The absolutely top-drawer expert takes no such risk. He knows that East must have a least one honor in hearts because West would almost surely lead an honor if his hearts were headed by K-J-10. If East has any heart honor, the hand is safe if declarer takes the ace of hearts at the first trick.

LOSES FINESSE

The great expert leads the eight of diamonds for a finesse at the second trick, losing to the king. As the cards lie, the hearts are blocked, and South easily regains the lead to take four diamonds, two spades, two clubs and one heart.

South would be safe even if East had the singleton or doubleton ten or jack of hearts. In that case, West would take the king of diamonds and two hearts, but then South's nine of hearts would serve as an additional stopper in the suit.

The average expert would, of course, go down by taking the finesse at the first trick. East would win with the king of hearts and would return a heart to dummy's ace. When West got in with the king of diamonds, he would defeat the contract with the rest of hearts.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 6 4 2
♥ - J 10 7 6 4
♦ - K 6
♣ - 10 8 5.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

You have only four points in high cards and one point for the doubleton but should count an extra point for length in partner's bid suit. The hand is therefore just barely worth a response.

Marijuana Is Reclassified

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —The state senate without debate passed Thursday 28-0 a bill reclassifying marijuana from a narcotic to a restricted dangerous drug. Penalties for possession remain the same.

Sen. Gordon Cologne, floor manager for the bill, told colleagues that "it's obvious marijuana is not a narcotic. This bill simply puts marijuana where it belongs."

Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed a nearly identical bill last year.

Don't Dismiss New Water Supply Ideas

HAROLD E. GREGG, who is both president and executive director of the Marin Conservation League, has advanced some interesting thoughts in connection with his and the league's opposition to Measure B on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Measure B is the proposition to authorize Marin Municipal Water District to contract with the Sonoma County Water Agency to build an aqueduct to bring Russian River water to Marin to meet anticipated future needs.

Gregg observes that flooding is a frequent, recurring rainy season problem in Marin. We spend considerable to get rid of excess water which we think we don't want.

You've got to agree with Gregg that there is an inconsistency when we prepare to spend vast sums going into the next county to tap an outside source of water to augment our own sources.

At the same time, we run our sewage waste through treatment plants and dump the treated effluent into the bay or ocean to get rid of it.

We wastefully use high quality drinking water to flush our toilets, wash our cars, and water our gardens. Why should we go to great expense to import high quality drinking water when we already have more than enough to drink?

We should be facing up to the task of figuring out how to use storm water and treated water from sewage plants for such things as washing cars, flusing toilets and watering gardens.

Gregg's logic is forcefully clear.

NEVERTHELESS, he makes a grave error when he uses that logic to oppose ballot Measure B.

How does Gregg propose to salvage flood waters?

His simplistic solution is to trap it in sumps and store it in tanks atop hills and knolls throughout the county — all at a cost less than the cost of the proposed aqueduct from Sonoma.

How does he propose to get this low-quality non-potable water, along with the output of treated alluent from our weage plants, distributed throughout the county without contaminating our high-quality drinking water?

Again Gregg has an overly simple solution. He would simply build a second, parallel distribution pipeline system which would have to include another plumbing system in every single dwelling. This, he says, unrealistically, can all be done, too, for less than the cost of the aqueduct from Sonoma.

Actually, it would be reasonable to expect that the engineering design costs, and the experimenting necessary to assure success of such a system, would exceed the costs of the Sonoma project. The costs of building the Gregg system would thereafter be even greater.

THERE IS indication that with continued growth in population and per capita water usage, coupled with a series of dry years, Marin could begin to face critical water shortages within five years. If the Sonoma aqueduct project is authorized now, it could be ready in about five years and Marin would be reasonably sure of avoiding a water crisis.

Harold Gregg, again unrealistically, believes that his system could be brought into being in no greater time. It would be more reasonable to expect that the engineering design would take five years for something so revolutionary.

Does this mean that the proposals of Harold Gregg should be simply dismissed as overly visionary?

No. The Gregg vision has too great a potential. It deserves a try.

The Marin Municipal Water District and the county board of supervisors would do well to memorialize both state and federal legislatures to authorize and finance studies aimed at solving the engineering problems which must be met before the Gregg proposal could succeed. We would hope that our state legislature would memorialize Congress along the same lines.

After all, the problem of meeting increased water needs in densely populated areas is nationwide. A solution to the problem would be of national value.

If we are lucky, perhaps the Gregg system can be ready to work by the time we have outgrown the Sonoma aqueduct.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the Audubon Canyon Ranch for its plan to purchase and preserve 42 acres of Tomales Bay tidelands.

BOUQUET to the Marin Community College District board for clearing the air toward passage of Measure A — Its $16,750,000 bond issue — by assuring Marinites that it is not a matter of "pass this bond issue or be socked with a heavy tax." The issue now should pass on its merits.

BOUQUET to Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court for the sensible sentence he imposed on a man for driving while under influence of narcotics: 10 days' work for the county parks and recreation department.

BRICKBATS to the management of Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium for (1) charging 50 cents for parking, then having such poor parking arrangements that cars are backed up unnecessarily; (2) failing to have all ticket windows operating — and signs indicating where they are — and thus causing long waiting lines for tickets, and (3) not instructing ushers so that they know where to locate seat numbers.

A small BOUQUET to visiting Judge Richard E. Arnason for forbidding applause in his courtroom — something he should have done long ago.

More Attendance At Night Meetings Urged

The Marin Alternative is very pleased that the board of supervisors agreed to give monthly night meetings a try.

We noted that on Sept. 28, the first such meeting, about 40 people attended on an evening when there was nothing particularly controversial on the agenda. This is far more than the usual number and many present were men who obviously could not make day meetings. In addition, we noted many county employees who otherwise could not participate.

Marin Alternative feels that these monthly night meetings are a step toward more responsive government. We urge many more Marinites to attend them the last Tuesday of each month and become more involved in government — which belongs to all of us.

More Study Needed Of Renaissance Plan

We are greatly opposed to the proposed Pleasure Center and Renaissance Faire on the Grady Farm and its effects on us as home owners in the same valley. We are concerned with the possible traffic problem, the sanitation problem, fire and/or emergency services in our area.

We personally feel that the Renaissance Center should hire a professional urban planning and design consultant at their expense to bring forth the effects and results of this particular activity. This plan should be presented to the home owners for their consideration or support, and this proposal should be tied in with the master plan of Lucas Valley.

We personally feel there has not been enough consideration given to the effects of the Renaissance Center on the people of this valley. We are not opposed to the Center as such, but we feel strongly that, based on the evidence so far, this fair does not belong in Lucas Valley.

Story On Ranch Surprisingly Accurate

I feel very indebted to you and your paper for the excellent article pertaining to my ranch operations which appeared in your Oct. 14 issue. Thank you so much. I also wish to compliment Mrs. Fortner for the accuracy of her journalism. ART BUCHWALD

Great Honor To Be Nominated; But Then Comes Investigation

WASHINGTON — The worst thing that can happen to any public official in this country is to be mentioned for a top appointment in the government, and not get it.

It isn't just the rejection of the job that is hard to swallow — it is that while he is under consideration the candidate is being subjected to exhaustive investigation by everyone from the FBI to the Harvard Law Review, and his reputation can be destroyed forever.

The recent Supreme Court nomination circus that President Nixon put on is a perfect example of how dangerous it is to be mentioned for one of the highest positions in the land.

TAKE THE CASE of Judge Chilblain Clamchowder. Judge Clamchowder, who had been appointed to the Fifth Circuit Traffic Court for the work he had done in carrying Tornado County for President Nixon in 1968, found himself listed as one of the "leading" candidates for a Supreme Court seat.

Judge Clamchowder told me in his chambers, "I knew they had just thrown in my name as a smokescreen and at first I was flattered to see my name in the newspapers.

"But then the eastern establishment press started coming down here and asking about me, and my life has become pure hell.

"They talked to my second wife who said I had not only cheated on her, but also on my bar exam. Even if it's true, it's something you don't like to read about in the newspapers."

JUDGE CLAMCHOWDER continued: "Then some Democratic senators found out I hadn't paid my income tax for the past five years and they tried to make a big deal of it just to embarass the Nixon administration. They made it sound as if I was the first Supreme Court justice nominee who had ever cheated on his taxes.

"To make matters worse, the FBI discovered that I was a major stockholder in the firm that prints all the traffic tickets for Tornado County. So I had to get rid of the stock at a great financial sacrifice.

"Then Jack Anderson found out about a Christmas party I had last year in my chambers for the meter maids, and while only two of them took off their clothes, he made it sound like an orgy. So now my third wife is suing me for divorce, and it's gonna be damn expensive, particularly since I don't have an interest in the printing firm any more.

"THE AMERICAN CIVIL Liberties then dug up the fact that I had donated $1,000 to buy dynamite to blow up all the school buses in Tornado County, and that made the newspaper headlines. Now I believe this was a personal matter and had nothing to do with whether a person would make a good Supreme Court justice or not.

"Finally, some smart-aleck law professor discovered that since I've been ruling on traffic offenses I have been reversed by higher courts 768 times.

"He also claimed I had fixed the tickets of 45 members of my country club. It turns out I had only fixed 40 tickets since I've been on the traffic court, but the media doesn't seem to be concerned with accuracy as long as it's a good story.

"The American Bar Association rated me as 'less mediocre' and this certainly hasn't helped me keep any decorum in the courtroom."

"From what I can tell, Judge," I said, "you might have done better by not being mentioned as a possible Supreme Court justice."

"Frankly," he replied, "if it wasn't for the honor, I would just as soon forget it."

Bankrupt United Nations Needs Complete Overhaul To Survive

UNITED NATIONS — On the 38th floor of the great glass hive on the East River here, there is only the quiet stir of important people going about the business of running a world organization that has proliferated in many agencies around the globe. The atmosphere is hushed, serene, properly air-conditioned, with the hazy view out across Queens and Long Island hardly more than a relief map of some remote wasteland.

The impression of serenity is false. It may be overly dramatic to say that the United Nations is threatened with dissolution, but, short of a rescue mission not now in sight, the whole operation will be drastically curtailed.

FOR THE U.N. is bankrupt. As the top financial officers say, if this were a commercial enterprise they would probably be in jail for having dipped into trust funds and other special accounts to meet the monthly payroll and other minimum operating costs. Listing the debts owed by various nations, many of them regarded as uncollectable, the retiring secretary general, the gentle Burmese U Thant concluded:

"In short, 10 years of deficit and drift have resulted in the depletion of our cash resources to the extent that in meeting our most basic obligations we are literally living from hand to mouth. We have, in fact, reached the stage where our ability even to continue current activities — still less to undertake new or expanded-program initiatives — must be seriously questioned."

By the end of the year regular budget assessments will be in excess of $65 million in arrears, of which more than half is uncollectable. For past and present peace-keeping operations $50 million is unpaid. To meet the monthly payroll at the end of September $15 million had to be scrounged out of trust funds and special accounts.

One of the biggest debtors is the Soviet Union with its three votes. The Soviets have consistently refused to pay for activities they do not approve of. They owe close to $120 million, including assessments for the regular budget and $59,223,085 for the peace-keeping operation in the Congo.

France is another substantial debtor, owing more than $17 million for the Congo operation and nearly $5 million for the regular budget for 1971.

MEMBERSHIP IN the U.N. has grown to proportions the founders could never have dreamed of when they met in San Francisco 26 years ago. The one-nation, one-vote formula in the general assembly is unreal and downright absurd.

With the admission this week of Abu Dhabi, another of the oil-rich Persian Gulf states that with Qatar, Bahrein and Oman have recently become members of the club, the total will be 132. Many are minuscule, so little known as to be hardly more than dots on the map.

What is Lesotho? Maldive Islands? Gambia is a river bank with crocodiles. What about Zambia? Bhutan is a principality in the high Himalayas nestling close to India. Can anyone locate Rwanda?

In the first flush of postwar idealism — it must never happen again — the founders at San Francisco could hardly have foreseen the explosion of nationalism that has brought many of these entities into being. The big powers have tended increasingly to use the U.N. for their own ends. With the veto built into the security council, they can block any move they do not want.

THE DIRE AND OBVIOUS need is for a complete overhaul of the organization. That would take a desire, a will, a belief in the future of the United Nation. Evidence of that belief is hard to find.

So many of the specialized agencies have done splendid work. The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund has been a blessing to millions. A world without the U.N. is unthinkable. Unfortunately, almost no one is thinking about the unthinkable.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

U.S. And Russia Seek To Curb Dangerous Game

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In early June, 1971, the Soviet cruiser Dzerzhinsky transited the Turkish straits from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean with Soviet Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko a guest aboard.

Some special details of the trip are supplied by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia.

The newspaper declared that as the Dzerzhinsky entered the Bosporus an American reconnaissance boat moved alongside and "began to maneuver in dangerous proximity."

The crew of the American vessel, according to Izvestia, began taking still and motion pictures of the cruiser, and the Russian sailors responded by reflecting sunbeams in the Americans' eyes.

SUCH AN EVENT might be worth a smile as a somewhat childish pursuit if it were not for the fact that it is part of a far more dangerous game played by the seagoing forces of the two superpowers around the world, from the Mediterranean to the Bering Sea.

It includes Soviet and American submarines maneuvering deep under the ice of the Arctic and warplanes of the two "escorting" each other at supersonic speeds only 20 feet apart.

In April, 1968, the United States suggested to the Soviet Union that such maneuvers easily could lead to a shooting incident which the leaders of neither nation intended and that a conference on the subject should be arranged.

The Russians began showing some interest last November and early in October the talks finally began in in Moscow.

ADM. ARTHUR W. Radford, retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has written that the functions of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, for example, are both military and diplomatic.

The stance adopted by the fleet, he says, and its geographic location at any given moment goes far toward informing a potential opponent of U.S. intentions and determination and thus permits the possible opponent to determine his own attitude.

In this sense, then, reconnasiance is an importantand recognized part of the game, dangerous though it may be.

IT IS NOTEWORTHY that the Moscow conference is intended in no way either to limit reconnaissance or freedom of maneuver.

But it could reduce the dangers of confrontation somewhat at least by defining the heights at which planes must fly over surface vessels or the distance at which other vessels must remain from a carrier taking on airplanes. There are other situations which could be controlled by rules of conduct.

Also noteworthy in the present talks is that they come amid apparently hopeful signs of progress in U.S.-Soviet talks on strategic arms limitations, of steps to improve hot-line communications between Moscow and Washington, and of President Nixon's announced plans to visit Moscow.

From these can come the ultimate test of Nixon's declared policy of negotiation rather than confrontation and for the United States and its allies an indication of just how much business they can do with Leonid Brezhnev and Co. in the decade of the '70s.

Tax Bill Shows Need To Vote Yes On 'A'

This past week, we received our 1971-72 property tax bill. After the initial shock wore off, I studied the breakdown, showing the distribution of the amounts by the various taxing agencies. (This breakdown is a big improvement on the bills). It showed that the Marin Community College District took only $62 of our total tax bill.

My two sons have attended College of Marin. No where that I know of could they have received the education they received there for $62 a year. And, I also take into consideration the added expense for books, fees, etc.

I urge everyone to vote on Nov. 2nd, and vote YES on Proposition "A". With the extreme crowding at the state colleges and universities, it is absolutely necessary that College of Marin expand its facilities. It is money well spent.

Angela And Attorneys Make Mockery Of Courts

After the people of Marin County have received their tax bills for this year, isn't it beautiful to see Angela Davis led into a Marin County court giving her clenched fist salute? She and her attorneys have made a mockery of our courts and she is allowed to get away with it. Of course, at the taxpayer's expense. She is treated like some kind of celebrity and we pay for her and her arrogant actions.

Where does the fault lie? In our courts? In our Supreme Court? Or our weak politics? And all the while, we the working average citizen pay the tax tab.

A question often asked: "Is equal justice possible in courts?" Answer it this way: "Does any other country in the world give this lenience that we give in our courts?" It is a sham and a disservice to the people that have to pay for this.

New Fire Station Not Only Interest

I wish to take this opportunity to express my thanks to your newspaper for presenting the feature on behalf of the candidates for election to the Novato Fire Protection District.

It is through articles such as this that the electorate can "meet" the candidates and learn their views. In that article, the impressionmay have been indicated that my only interest was in replacing the headquarters station. This is not entirely correct., also wish to continue in the upgrading of the fire service in Novato. The district must keep abreast of the state of the art as it pertains to equipment, techniques, and manpower to provide the best possible service. I still feel that sometime in the nextfew years that adequate facilities must be provided so that the staff can properly function . . .

Renaissance Center Called Amusement Park

It seems to me that there are many as yet unanswered questions regarding the proposed establishment of the Renaissance Center and Faire in Lucas Valley.

What appears certain at this time is that the result will be increased inconvenience to the residents of the area. The number of cars going to and from the center, the increase in noise, increase in pollution both noise and from car emmissions, increase need for fire protection, seems to add up to a total of disadvantages to the present residents who live in an area which, according to the master plan, was to be a residential area.

The people that will not agree are those that do not live in the area, those who will profit from this purported non-profit arganization who at the moment give vague answers to simple questions. The residents of Marin have a fine county, we do not need extra non-taxpaying developments that will entertain not edify, amuse not contribute, disturb not calm, demand and need services which others will have to pay for. Let's keep the delightful area as was planned a fine residential area, not a second amusement park disguised as a non-profit cultural amenity.

Property Given Away After Meeting 'Closed'

After the close of the agendized portion of the San Anselmo City Council meeting Oct. 12, the council continued to bring up business matters. I counted at least nine items that came up for discussion and action after the "close" of the meeting. Two sofas at the Robson park were declared suplus and Mr. Leitzell said he had a "friend who would haul them away at no charge to the city."

This park is costing San Anselmo taxpayers this year alone in excess of $50,000 to maintain, or about $15 per each San Anselmo property owner. The two sofas are in perfect condition, sturdily constructed and covered for use by the public; they are currently the only furniture in the house except for the folding variety.

No doubt many of us might have a "friend" who would "haul them away." I would like disclosure as to who the beneficiary is. Are not all citizens to be given an equal right to bid on genuine surplus articles? Could not this furniture be used by another public agency—a teen center perhaps?

If Mr. Leitzell is giving city property away (an illegal gift of public property, perhaps?) would he like to replace two sofas at his personal expense or does he expect the S.A. property owner to do this? San Anselmo still has the second highest tax rate of 11 Marin cities!

Appalled At Decision Of Zoning Official

It's a sad day for the residents of Marin County as well as responsible, tax paying, voters everywhere in that the will of a few entrepreneurs has been imposed upon the vast majority of responsible citizens.

I was appalled and disgusted on this day, Oct. 18, by the decision of the deputy zoning administrator to grant a use permit for the Renaissance Faire and Center to be held in Lucas Valley. I have witnessed first-hand how a county official reacts to a "special interest group" by being totally unresponsive to the majority of concerned citizens.

My disgust and anger is registered not only as a resident of Lucas Valley, who has profound personal as well as financial interest in this valley, but more importantly as a citizen of this country - in that the will of a few individuals can impose their horrendous "dream" on the vast majority of responsible tax-paying residents of Marin County, and that a so-called county government official ignores the wishes of the majority.

Inescapable facts, whether they were pertaining to fire hazards, sanitation, safety and welfare of the residents, and monumental traffic problems, were totaly beyond the miniscule gray matter of this public official. They were presented, heard, and ignored . . .

Today, it's more critical than ever that the government be more responsive to the majority of responsible citizens, no matter which county we may live in. Public officials, whether they are elected or appointed are only in office to serve their constituents and/or community by being forthright, honest, possessing some wisdeom and common sense . . . or am I asking too much?

Should Not Move Mill Valley Festival

Reference is made to your Oct. 14 article concerning replacement of the future Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival to Boyle Park.

I find this proposed site change very disturbing and feel that such action on the part of the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department and other so-called "concerned citizens" unnecessary and ridiculous.

Let me point out that the past three festivals have been the only ones in the 15-year history of the event which have been truly successful from the standpoint of artist and visitor participation. This was made possible by excessive advertising and publicizing of the prevously mediocre affair to get it up to top level. .. At last, the exhibiting artists were afforded the courtesy of a good, art-oriented crowd. Festival organizers have gone out of their way to provide good entertainment, multiple food booths, etc. to make a pleasant event for everyone.

Let me also point out that are no other similar art festivals left in the county, what with the dying of the once great Sausalito Art Festival and the change of the once pleasant Marin Art and Garden Fair, which drew hoards of art-oriented visitors to the fledgling, rocky, dusty Marin County Fair which drew hoards of non-buying, non-art-oriented lookers. Mill Valley's very pleasant fall festival has such potential, and with proper guidance, could well become one of the finest art festivals in the state.

To shuttle it back to Boyle Park, which is highly inadequate, would set the show back 10 years. If these ecology-minded folks are so concerned about their "battered park," why don't they do something about the garbage and debris thrown in the creek and the old bicycles and doors and other such nameless junk strewn about; and the deplorable restrooms which are not only malfunctioning, but filthy and unsanitary?

I would like to see this festival site preserved for future festivals, and would like to see all those people who have particpated in and attended this event in the last three years to stand up and support it.

Miller-Unruh Bill Little Understood

There are several aspects of the Miller-Unruh Reading Program that your article of Oct. 14 failed to cover. While a few of reading specialists have normally progressing children, most of the children in the program are the ones who have some undefined perceptual, cognitive or emotional problem that prevents them from reading at a normal grade-level rate. To compare them to children without these problems is like comparing a physicly handicapped person to a baseball player. To expect them to progress similarly is not realistic.

If you look over the scores which are close to normal, it seems that these children who would have in all probability become remedial readers, have attained a sufficiency even though normal children have attained more. This, I believe, is due to a number of factors one of which is the utilization of the reading specialist: a person who can give his whole energy, insight, and training to reading without distractions. For a child who finds reading difficult, a score of seven, eight, or nine months in a ten-month school year is gratifying and indicates the worth of the Miller-Unruh Program.

To say a school without a reading specialist did better than one with is ignoring the problem. Of course they made better scores because there may not have been a reading problem to start with!

The whole nature of the Miller-Unruh Bill is not fully understood by the public or within the profession. The M-U Bill was never meant for remedial reading but rather to prevent remedial cases from developing. The state has separate funding for remedial cases. It has been proven over an extended period that Miller-Unruh teachers do best in preventing remedial cases and worst in teaching remediation. However, most of the reading specialist's time is taken up in remediation leaving little for prevention. As long as this continues to exist, I believe that we can expect lower-than-need-be scores to exist.

'Majority Rules' Seems Outmoded

As a resident of Lucas Valley, I was so concerned about the plans to locate the Renaissance Pleasure Faire on the Grady Ranch that I took charge of seeing that the petition opposing it was well circulated in lower Lucas Valley. Contrary to what Mrs. Patterson said at the use permit hearing at the Civic Center yesterday (Oct. 18), we certainly didn't have to "intimidate" or "tell lies" to get signatures. Residents were more than willing to sign and/or circulate the petition.

The petition with 1,800 signatures was presented to the deputy zoning administrator, along with letters from the Marinwood CSD, traffic control department, county health department all opposing the issuance of a permit. Also Chief Bonfield of the Marinwood Fire Department and many others gave very valid arguments against it. No one spoke in favor of it except the Pattersons, so it was quite a shock when the permit was granted.

Since I have had very little experience in government, I was still naive enough to believe that the majority rules. The new philosophy seems to be that codes are made to be broken and master plans are drawn up to be changed. Well, far be it from me to stand in the way of good healthy progress, but anyone in the county who takes the time to drive the four miles up Lucas Valley Road to the Grady Ranch will realize that our valley will be ruined by such an enterprise.

Our appeal will be heard at the planning commission meeting on Nov. 1 at 3 p.m. If you are concerned with preserving the ecology of Marin County, here is your chance to speak out. Attend the meeting and show our county officials that we expect our codes to be followed.

Demos Would Deny Marin Representation

Many of us familiar with the bizarre creature — half bird, half salamander — drawn by some early cartoonist to lampoon the distortion of legislative district boundaries in Massachusetts under Gov. Elbridge Gerry early in the last century. Substitute Marin for Chelsea, Sonoma for Salem, Napa for Danvers, etc. and you have Mills, Moretti, and Company's modern-day version of how to cheat voters out of valid representation.

Their first state Senate reapportionment plan would have parceled Marin out among four senators with jurisdictions stretching from San Francisco to Redding. In each of the districts the voters in the Marin portion would have constituted a minority. When even Democrats retched violently over this disenfranchisement of our county's voters, the smoke-filled Senate office of the Elections and Reapportionment Committee chairman slipped out Plan 2 to its Democratic committee members only. This gem would put all of Marin into a San Francisco district except for the Tiburon Peninsula which would be deposited into another district extending 200 miles into Shasta County.

No reapportionment plan has yet emerged from the Assembly's Democratic plotters — only hollow-sounding bleats against the Republican-sponsored AB 1971. The latter would divide California into districts varying one per cent or less in population and would take into consideration growth patterns, natural boundaries, and common cultural and economic interests. Our Seventh District would lose part of Sonoma County and would become a more pronounced Marin County district. Similarly, the Republican Senate reapportionment plan would leave Marin intact with western portions of Sonoma and San Francisco counties in the Fourth Senatorial District.

Every Marinite, Republican and Democrat alike, should let the legislators know in no uncertain terms that we are inalterably opposed to any partition of Marin County that will rob us of our proper representation in Sacramento.

Dynamite Issue In Congress

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

Some well-meaning people, who seem to attach greater importance to the outward observance than to the inner meaning of religion, have put members of Congress in an awkward position.

Through feverish lobbying and much petition-signing, they have created a situation in which the House of Representatives will be forced to vote — probably Nov. 8 —on a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The chief sponsor of the amendment, Rep. Chalmers P. Wiley, R-Ohio, says it is designed simply and solely to "restore voluntary prayer to public schools."

CASUAL LOOK

It sounds innocuous enough on a casual reading. It says:

"Nothing contained in this constitution hall abridge the right of persons lawfully assembled in any public building which is supported in whole or in part through the expenditure of public funds, to participate in non-denominational prayer."

But there is hidden dynamite in those innocent-sounding words. They could blow apart the basic guarantee which the founding fathers wrote into the First Amendment to insure that religion in America would remain forever free of governmental interference.

Many congressmen realize this and regard the proposed amendment as a disaster. But the lobby supporting it is so articulate and well-organized, they fear they will be hurt politically in their home districts if they can be accused (however unfairly) of "voting against prayer for school children."

COUNTER DRIVE

Baptists and other major religious bodies which have long defended religious freedom are now mounting a belated counter-campaign against the prayer amendment. They may be too late to keep it from rolling up the necessary twothirds majority in the House vnext month. If so, they will try to head it off in the Senate.

Religious leaders who oppose the prayer amendment (House Joint Resolution 191) say that it is premised on a falsehood.

"The falsehood," says Rev. W. Barry Garrett of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, "is that the Supreme Court has denied the right of voluntary prayer to school children."

Actually, all the high court did in its widely misunderstood rulings of 1962 and 1963 was to hold that a school or other governmental body may not require any child to pray or prescribe the form of prayer he is to use in a public school classroom. There never was any restriction on voluntary private prayers. Constitutional lawyers say the apparently innocent language of the proposed brief amendment could cut the heart out of the existing First Amendment, which has kept religion free and flourishing in this nation for nearly 200 years.

Consider closely some of the "harmless" phrases contained in the new proposal. It would introduce into the Constitution, for the first time in U.S. history, the concept of "lawful assembly." Who is to determine when an assembly is "lawful?" Does not this vague term open the door to future attemps by government officials to rule some religious assemblies —or other private assemblies — "unlawful?"

THE MISSING

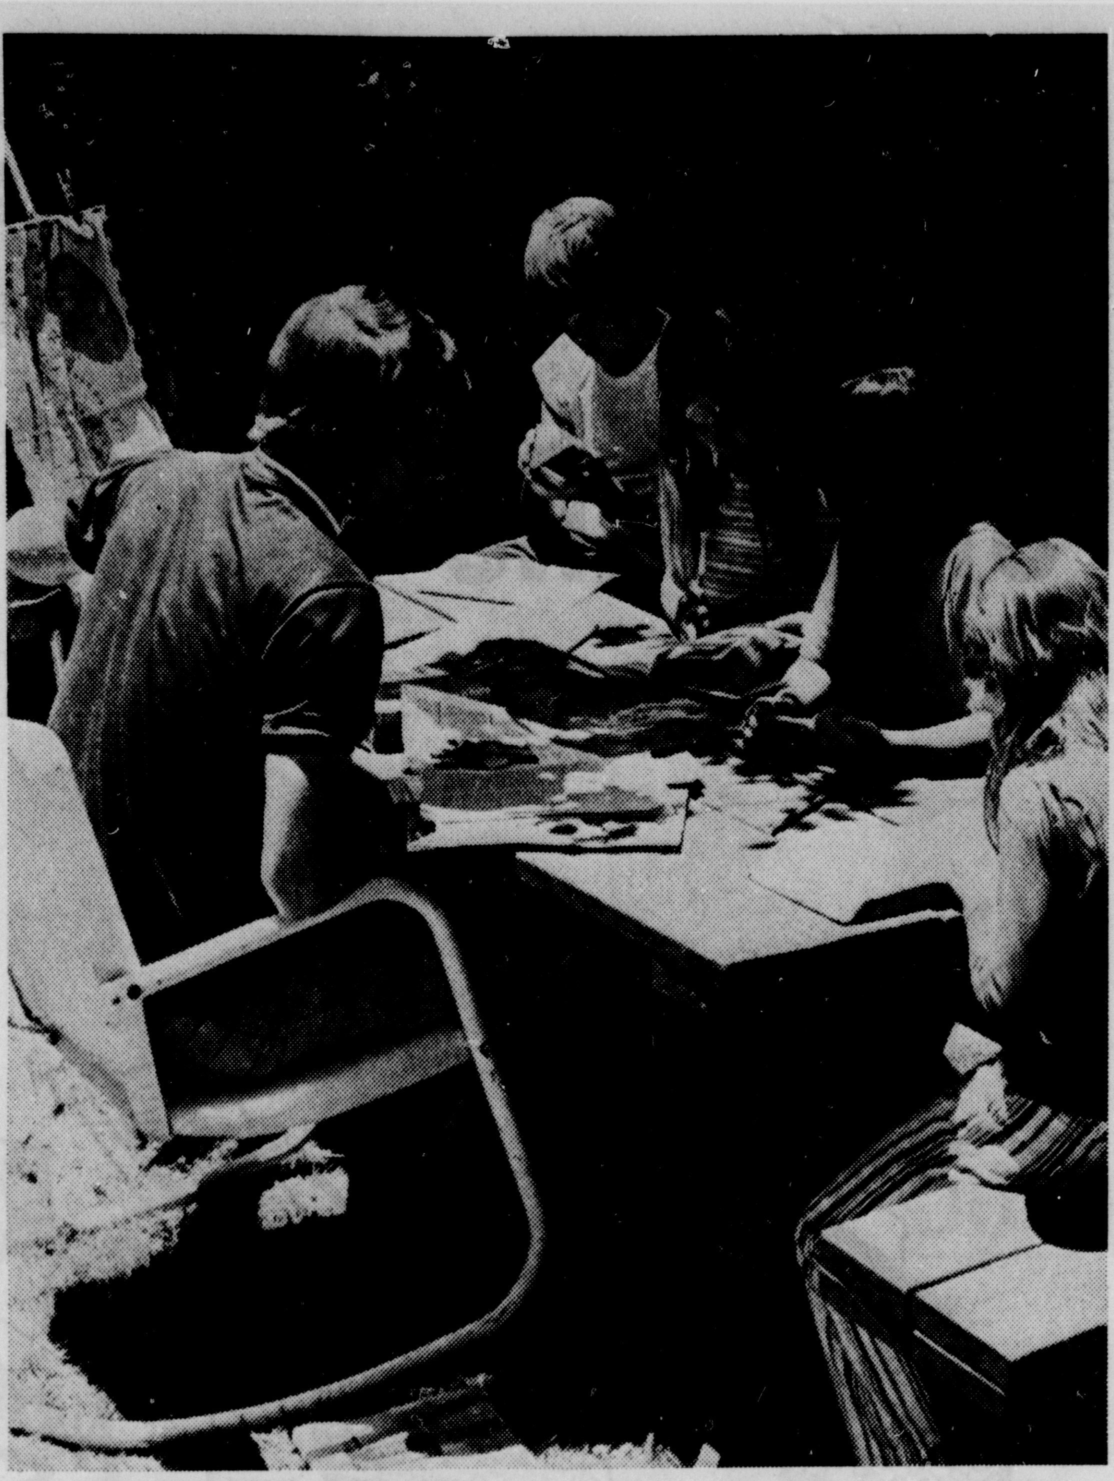
Second, and even more serious, the amendment says the prayers prayed in public buildings are to be "nondenominational." Exactly what does that mean? Experience has proved that a prayer which one man considers "nondenominational" may seem offensively sectarian to another person. Indeed, it could be argued that there can be no such thing as a truly nondenominational prayer.

The very act of praying presupposes the existence of a God who can be addressed in this fashion by His human creatures. From the viewpoint of all atheists and agnostics, as well as many members of organized religious bodies such as Buddhists, Unitarians and Jews, that basic presupposition is quite "denominational."

In any case, even if there conceivably could be such a thing as a non-denominational prayer, who is to determine what its content shall be? Obviously, the ultimate power of decision will rest with government — or some representative thereof.

Thus, it is argued, the proposed amendment would bring in through the back door the very kind of government authority over religious belief and practice which the original writers of the Constitution tried so hard —and so successfully — to forestall.

In this view, a vote against the "prayer amendment" woule be a vote for religious freedom as it has always been known, che ished and practiced in America.



A GEOGRAPHY LESSON — Gary East, a summer missionary from Missouri, points to Palestine on a map as David and Patty Spangler (facing the camera) look in their New Testaments. The other two children are not identified. Bible study was just one of the many activities of Tiburon Baptist Church's summer neighborhood vacation Bible school.

GUEST — Rev. Norman Dwight, an Evangelical Covenant missionary to Taiwan, will be guest speaker tomorrow at the 9:30 a.m. worship service at the Marin Covenant Church which meets at Miller Creek Junior High School in Marinwood.

A DATA BANK

Computer Matches Ministers To Jobs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Episcopal Church has begun using a newly developed data programming system for matching clergymen with job openings.

Rt. Rev. John H. Burg, bishop of the Diocese of Ohio and chairman of the Joint Commission on the Deployment of the Clergy, described the program as a national personnel inventory, or data bank, of regularly updated personal profiles of the ministry.

The Episcopal Church is participating with two other Protestant denominations, he said, in working with the National Council of Churches and Information Science, Inc., the firm that designed the method.

Called the Church Manpower System, it was underwritten by the Rockfeller Brothers Fund. Startup costs for the Episcopal Church participation were funded by the Episcopal Church Foundation, an independent organization of laymen, and it is being administered by the Church's Clergy Deployment Office.

"This deployment plan is designed to serve church and ministry alike by providing a speedy and effective method to help bishops and vestries to place the right person in the right assignment, thus reducing a problem that has been with the Church since its inception," Bishop Burt said.

He said that 4,000 of the approximately 10,000 Episcopal ministers in the United States has returned detailed questionnaires, and that bishops and vestries can apply immediately for assistance in the selection of candidates for openings. Dossiers are confidential, but any clergyman has access to his own file.

Jesuit University Makes Many Changes

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jesuit-run John Carroll University has made a lot of changes this year.

A rabbi was added to the theology faculty, a new policy permitted guests of the opposite sex to visit in dormitories, and beer was served in a student-run rathskeller.

Former Inmate To Speak On Reforms

Jim Penland, who has spent 12 of his 28 years in California prisons, will talk about prison reform at the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians, 240 Channing Way, San Rafael, at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

Penland, who claims the state actually spent $240 million last year to maintain its prisons rather than the budget figure of $110 million, is a member of the Committee for Prisoners' Union. He studied law in prison and is continuing his studies on the outside.

Penland will meet with members of the congregation for an informal talk-back session after the service.

STILL GOING, TOO

New Twist To Vacation School

By GIL GILBERT

Cindy thought God was the giant who would eat her brother up if he didn't take the garbage out.

Freddy said that he had seen Jesus in a movie and that he looked sick.

These two pre-schoolers and 181 of their peers and older brothers and sisters got a somewhat different picture of God-in-Christ at the Tiburon Baptist Church Vacation Bible School this summer.

Five schools met 10 afternoons at four homes and at the Green Field of Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry.

Fifteen adults led in Bible teaching, singing, praying, pledging the flag, puppet making and showing and various crafts from beads to book covers.

Tiburon pastor Dr. Jerry Ashby amused them with his magic. Japanese minister Raymond Ozasa told them about foreign missions. Seminary nurse Mrs. Shirley Dines spoke about "God's helpers."

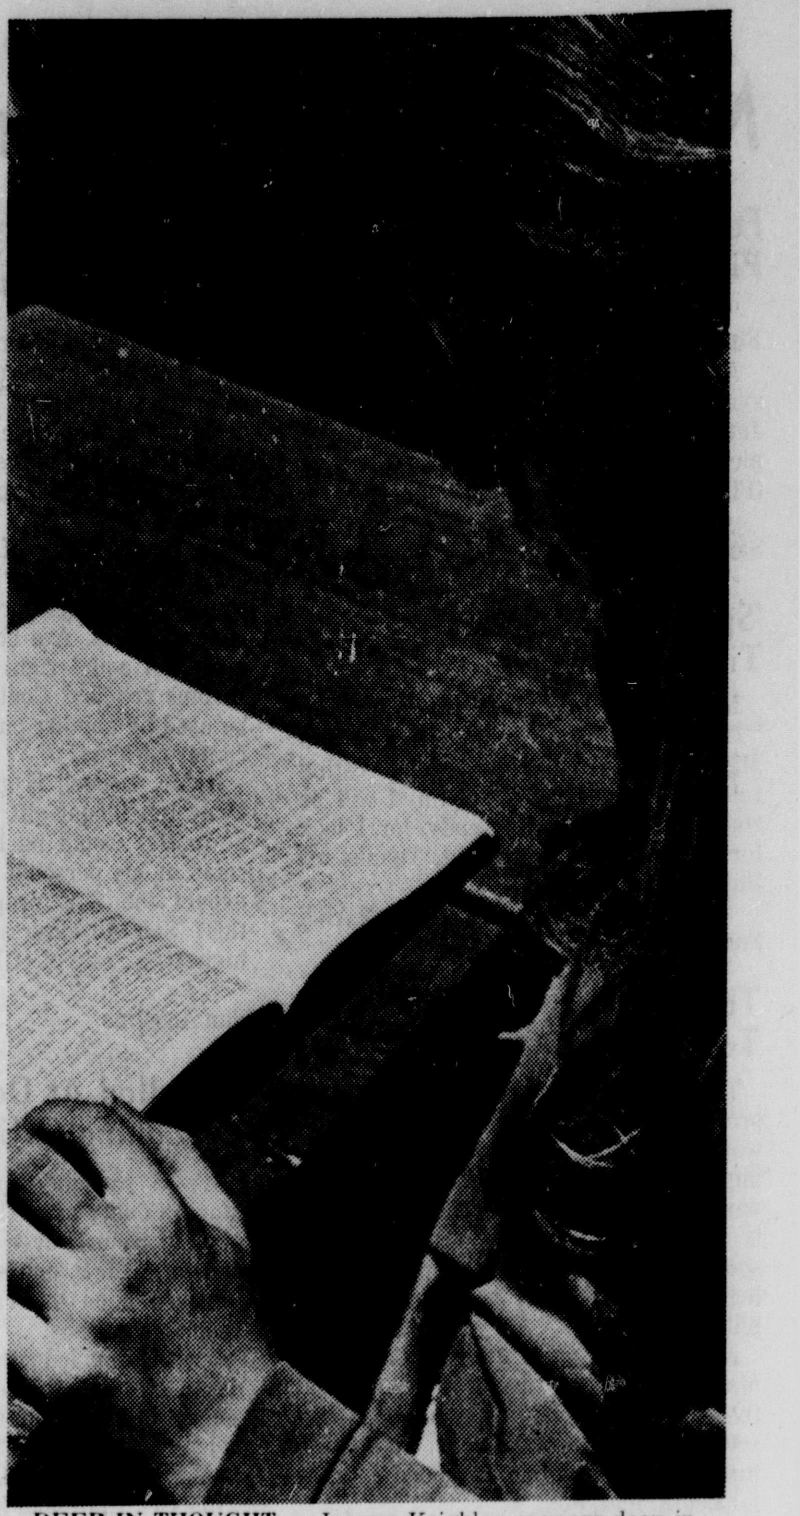
Golden Gate students John and Kathy Dillman led the team of workers, which included six "summer missionaries" — college students who devote their vacations to Bible teaching and Christian ministry.

"One of the best things about our summer Bible school is that it is still going on," says Ashby.

One of the schools meets Sunday mornings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Stewart, 35 Briarwood Drive, San Rafael. And there are two Monday afternoon groups meeting at the James D. Houghlands, 264 Karen Way, Tiburon, and at the David B. Friesens, 540 Ethel Avenue, Mill Valley.

All the students gathered on the seminary green for a final "graduation party" at the end of the summer session.

"The workers all agreed that it was hard to tell who had gotten the most out of the school, themselves or the kids," Dillman said, "but there was no doubt that we had honored Christ and had reached people we had been missing in our regular program."



DEEP IN THOUGHT — Joanna Keighley appears deep in thought as she awaits help with a difficult Bible passage. She was one of over 180 students who attended this summer's Tiburon Baptist Church's vacation Bible school.

Norwegian Panel Will Study The Church, State

OSLO (GWF) — an official commission has been named by the Norwegian government to study church and state questions and to suggest alternative relationship models.

Members of the commission, which was created after considerable postponement, represent a variety of positions, observers noted. Some critics have pointed out the lack of young people on the body, however.

Among churchmen named to the commission are Prof. Einar Molland of the University of Oslo, known for his support of the established system, and Bishop Per Juvkam of Bjorgvin, who recently has strongly urged change.

A seat also was granted to a Free Church representative, Baptist theologian and educator, Principal Jens Oen.

A private committee last year was named by the unofficial General Church Assembly to study church-state relationships. Creation of this group has been interpreted by some as an attempt to preserve the status quo, though unofficial spokesmen for the committee describe it as a source of information and critical analysis of the work of the parliamentary commission.

Priest Chooses Real Extra Job Contrast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barry Wright, 33, a fully ordained priest in the Church of England, chose a real contrast for his moonlighting.

Rev. Wright, father of four, when not serving as assistant curate at the Church of the Holy Ascension in Plumstead, England, is a sergeant on the London police force, says the National Inquirer. Rev. Wright, who was elevated to the priesthood in December, 1970, has been a police officer for 11 years.

The Backward Ways Discourages Leader

SINGAPORE (UPI) — "If Prophet Mohammed were alive today he would be disappointed and shocked to see the state of backwardness among the world's Moslems," says Singapore's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs.

Rahim Bin Ishak, a Moslem of Malay descent, said forerunners of modern progress and science were introduced by the Arabs 500 years after the death of Christ but Moslems in most parts of the world now are backward.

Is Your Church in Need of Reformation?
Test it with these five theses:
T F The Bible is without error in everything it says.
T F God declared mankind not guilty because of Christ.
T F Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
T F Faith in Christ alone without works saves.
T F Religious fellowship requires full agreement in doctrine.
According to the Word of God, these statements are true. See John 10:35, Romans 5:18, Colossians 2:9, Ephesians 2:8, and Romans 16:17.
If any of the teachings of the Bible are not accepted as God's truth in your church and your protests prove useless, He advises you to find a church which holds Him and His Word pre-eminent.
We have such a church and invite you to share its blessings. Sunday service at present is at 7:30 p.m.

Condrotte Selected For Reed Post

CHARLES L. CONDROTTE
New business manager

Charles L. Condrotte, former business manager for the San Rafael elementary and high school districts, has been hired as business manager for the Reed School district.

He was hired Tuesday to the $15,500-per-year post and replaces Victor W. Butler, who resigned in July to become a business consultant, according to Supt. Ralph D. Giovanniello.

Condrotte, 49, left his San Rafael post in July to become business manager of the Berryessa Elementary School District in Santa Clara County, Giovanniello said, but decided he didn't want the job when he got there.

He became business manager in San Rafael in 1962 after two years as customer service manager for the Spice Islands Co. and 21 years with Tidewater Oil Co. both in San Francisco.

The board appointed 10 persons to the district's research and instructional assessment committee, Giovanniello said.

They are Robert Hayes, David C. Kilmer, Charles Walters, Sharon Bass, Mary Ann Evans, Caroline Fanning, Jo McLeod, David N. Lytle, Reece Clark and Mrs. Eugene Stokes.

The board also approved goals for the finance committee but deferred appointments to the panel. Giovanniello said the committee will be responsible for making recommendations to the board on pending legislation and suggesting new methods of funding schools.

The Reed School District Board Also:

CLASSROOM — Accepted a bid of $2,385 per year for a portable classroom to be located at Reed School. The Village Salvage Shop in Tiburon will rent the classroom from the district for use as a second-hand store.

CONTRACTS — Awarded a $4,261 contract to W. R. Bishop Roofing of San Rafael for roofing work at Tiburon and Reed schools and a $940 contract to Dill and Sederberg of Mill Valley for gutters and downspouts.

PROGRAM — Named Pat Hosmer and Janet M. Chapeero, Granada School teachers, to participate in a kindergarten training prgram to be run by the Marin County School Office.

TESTS — Agreed to pay about $80 for tuberculin tests for the district's 40 teacher aides.

RESIGNATION — Accepted the resignation of maintenance man Frank Cardoza, who quit for personal reasons.

Department Of Justice Revamp

SONORA (UPI) —The State Department of Justice has been reorganized to provide greater support to local law enforcement agencies, Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger says.

He cited creation of a "bomb intelligence center" to assist in the investigation of bombings in the state as an example of the changes he has made in line with his inaugural promise to revamp the department.

"The center is able to receive, correlate, analyze and disseminate technical and strategic information relating to the illegal manufacture and use of destructive devices," Younger said.

He also told the 35th annual State Convention of the Judges, Marshals and Constables Association of California Thursday that plans were under way to install crime laboratories in eight high crime areas.

Whooping Cranes Arrive In Texas

AUSTWELL, Tex. (UPI)— Officials of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge said today the first of the world's largest flock of whooping cranes left in the world —60 birds —has begun to arrive at the winter nesting grounds on the Texas coast.

"The young birds will not be in for awhile because they fly a little slower. They will come in with their parents. They all fly as a family," the spokesman said.

Four birds have been seen at the wildlife refuge so far. The others of the nearly extinct bird are presumed en route from the flock's summer home in Canada.

The total world population of the big white birds is estimated at 75.

Voter Drive To Be Conducted By Two Groups

A week-long voter registration drive by the Adobe Community for the Improvement of Our Neighborhood (action) will begin Monday in Petaluma.

Volunteers from the Homeowners Association will man registration tables during the week at the Safeway market and Walgreen's Drug Store at the Petaluma Plaza.

Voters may also register at city hall, schools and city fire stations. Registrars will also be available weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at seven homes. The residences are 425 Aspen Way, 1512 Elizabeth Street, 500 Lincoln Lane, 621 Albert Way, 2029 Harrison Street, 317 Ely Boulevard South and 1709 St. Anne Way.

The organizations and Arthur Cader of Cader Farms will sponsor a free continental breakfast for new registrants at 9 a.m. Oct. 30 at the plaza.

Indictments Remain In Kent Disturbance

CINCINNATI (UPI)—A federal appeals court yesterday refused to dismiss indictments against 25 persons charged with rioting during the Kent State University disturbances in which four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen.

The U. S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a decision of federal Judge William Thomas of Cleveland who refused last Jan. 28 to dismiss the indictments.

$775,000 Buys A French Painting

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Norton-Simon Foundation of Los Angeles paid a record auction price of $775,000 for a painting painted in the 20th Century—an exotic jungle scene by self-trained French artist Henri Rousseau.

The 4-by-5 foot oil was painted in 1910, the year of Rousseau's death. He was a retired Parisian customs official who painted on weekends. The painting was placed on sale at the Park Bernet galleries by Mrs. Robert R. McCormack, widow of the Chicago publisher. A companion painting is in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum.

Younger Says Today's Prison Population Smaller, But Meaner

WHITTIER (UPI)—The state prison population in California has shrunk in the last few years from 28,000 to 21,000 but the smaller it gets, the meaner it gets, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said yesterday.

Speaking before members of six Rotary Clubs from the area, Younger said that in 1960, 30 per cent of all men convicted of felonies went to prison but today it is only 10 per cent.

A state policy adopted several years ago of paying counties to put convicted felons under local probationary supervision rather than sending them to prison was a major factor in the decline of prison population, he said.

"Only the most dangerous and most violent are in prison today," he said. "Over half of those in prison are there for felonious assault, rape, robbery or homicide.

"Also the campus revolution has moved on to the prisons and into the prisons. The revolutionaries want to use the desperate, violent men that make up a large part of the prison population and these prisoners want very much to be used.

"Once the prisoner believes that he is in prison not because he held up a bank and shot a teller, but because of his radical political views, he begins to act like a martyr and is less responsive to reasonable discipline.

"So these men in prison are not average men. Most of them have repeatedly demonstrated that they cannot or will not control themselves and, further, that they cannot be controlled except by varying degrees of force.

"Many would not hesitate to kill a guard or fellow inmate in order to escape. The prison population is becoming increasingly hard to handle."

Fewer Wells Are Being Sunk Now

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—There were 35 fewer oil and gas wells drilled in the United States during the first half of 1971 than in the corresponding period of 1970.

American wells totaled 996 on July 1, 1970, and 961 at the same time this year.

Some Danes Helping To Solve Parking

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—Danish commuters have discovered a parking problem solution that is common to New York and other metropolitan centers in the United States. They park their cars near an underground station in the suburbs and take the train for the rest of the way to work.

Investigating an increasing number of cars parked at suburban underground stations, transport authorities found that 70 per cent were owned by people who live farther out of town and work in the center of the city.

GIANT GROWTH

Mitchell Reviews 20 Years' Service

Marin County Auditor--Controller Michael Mitchell, 45, who completed 20 years in county service this month, said he is amazed at the quick passage of time and the tremendous growth in the county in the past two decades.

When he became deputy auditor under the late Leon A. deLisle in October of 1951, the county population was 90,800 and the number of county employees 339. Today, the population is 212,300 according to the State Department of Finance, and the county employees total 1,391.

The basic county tax rate, which was $1.70, is now $2.89. "An example of the growth is the amount of disbursements by all entities such as schools, special districts, and the county," said Mitchell. "Total disbursements in 1951 was $22 million. Today it is $261 million."

Mitchell was born in San Francisco on Jan. 6, 1926, to Greek parents, Chris and Isabel Michelis. He got his name, he said, because his parents had difficulty speaking English when they arrived in San Francisco in 1920. An Irish immigration official had even greater difficulty pronouncing the Greek name Michelis. "The immigration official asked if Mitchell would be close enough. My father nodded, and so that's the name I was born with."

Mitchell moved to Marin in 1949 and came to work for the county on Oct. 19, 1951. He was appointed auditor-controller in December of 1962 to succeed the late deLisle.

Mitchell's policy as auditor-controller has been to encourage the public to ask questions and to understand how and where their tax money is spent. "My policy has been and will continue to be to provide as much information as I can to the public with no red tape."

Mitchell is always courteous in dealing with the public or other officials, but on occasion has locked horns with county supervisors and the county administrator on financial matters.

"I believe it is essential that there be an independent and experienced auditor-controller to provide proper check and balance in county government. The mere presence of and independent watchdog can prevent many adverse fiscal practices from taking place."

Mitchell considers flexibility to meet changing conditions and humility and empathy with the people as essential traits for a public official.

"I strongly feel that all of us in government should not lose sight of the dignity and respect we should show for our fellow man and that most important in all phases of government is the recognition that government is and should be the servant and not the master of people."

Mitchell's predecessor Leon deLisle and Eugene Connell before him served a total of almost 70 years as Marin County auditor-controller. With the voters willing, Mitchell said he hopes to say in 20 more years that three auditor-controllers have served Marin for one century.

More Deputies At Soledad Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Superior Court Judge S. Lee Vavuris has ordered 16 additional deputy sheriff bailiffs be present at the trial scheduled to start next Wednesday of "Soledad Brothers" Fleeta Drumgo and John Clutchette.

The judge said Thursday that the additional bailiffs, including four women, were needed for the orderly administration of justice.

The extras are in addition to the regular three bailiffs regularly assigned, but the judge said the added protection was agreed upon after consultation with police representatives and the sheriff's office.

A controversial bullet-proof window screen already has been set up to protect the judge and court officials.

The two defendants are charged with killing a Soledad state prison guard.

QUESTIONED BY BENNETT

Magnuson Denies El Paso Gas Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington has denied ever receiving political contributions from the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

His denial came Thursday during a stormy hearing in response to questions by lawyer William Bennett of Kentfield, the outspoken critic of corporations who serves on theCalifornia Board of Equalization.

Bennett testified before the Senate Commerce Committee headed by the Washington Democrat and vehemently opposed a bill introduced by Magnuson to exempt El Paso from anti-trust laws.

Bennett, a former assistant attorney general for California, was instrumental in winning a U.S. Supreme Court finding that El Paso illegally acquired the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corp. Magnuson's bill, cosponsored by more than a dozen other Western senators, would permit El Paso to retain control of the smaller company.

"I am seeking a disavowal from you that you have not taken a political contribution from El Paso either directly or indirectly," Bennett demanded from the startled Washington senator.

Magnuson sputtered that "we don't have to kowtow to you" but then went on to deny having accepted anything from the company.

"If you want the answer, the answer is no!" Magnuson shouted. "I think you should be ashamed of yourself to do this."

The chairman went on to say that Bennett's charges that El Paso was making "political contributions" to buy support for the bill to exempt it from antitrust laws "cast a cloud on every member of this committee."

Bennett said the committee should investigate El Paso because of its "political contributions" and "outrageous lobbying" to reverse the Supreme Court decision requiring itself to divest itself of the pipeline company.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., also accused Bennett of "the worst form of demagoguery" and demanded whether the state official was also accusing him of accepting political contributions from El Paso. Bennett said he was not.

Tunney also defended Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan against Bennett's accusations, saying he "just can't believe" Reagan would accept such contributions.

Bennett conceded he had no evidence, but El Paso's record was such that the committee should investigate before approving the Magnuson Bill.

Bennett in turn was accused by a California public utility official of having a conflict of interest in the matter but denied it under oath.

Joseph R. Rensch, president of Pacific Lighting Service Co. of Los Angeles, said Bennett was associated with a company that wished to acquire the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corp. and would make "a windfall profit out of this."

"I have no objection to Mr. Bennett making his money like the rest of us," Rensch said. "I only want this committee to understand what he really is—a promoter and not a consumer supporter."

Bennett, seated in the audience, leaped to his feet to object to being "maligned" by Rensch.

"What he is saying is an absolute lie," Bennett said, "and he knows it."

Bennett asked that both he and Resnch sit side by side at the witness table and testify under oath.

Magnuson and other supporters of the bill say their only purpose is to assure the Pacific Northwest and other parts of the West a stable gas supply. They say conditions have changed since the Supreme Court first ruled on the case in 1962, and that continued control by El Paso is now preferable.

The hearings were called by Magnuson at the request of Tunney and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who said they wanted to hear testimony on what the effect of the bill would be on California consumers.

A statement presented for California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger put him on record in support of the bill if it is amended to provide additional protection for the state's consumers.

The amendments, outlined by deputy attorney general Iver E. Skjeie, appeared to be acceptable to Magnuson.

"Your amendments will, I think, be good," Magnuson said. "We're going to look at them."

Skjeie said the state would oppose the bill if they were not accepted and support it if they were.

They include a guarantee that additional gas will be delivered by El Paso to Pacific Lighting even if it must carry another company's gas over its pipeline.

Work Instead Of Jail Term

Dane Jerome Durham, 23, of Ross, has been ordered to work 15 days for Marin County Parks and Recreation Department for drunken driving.

He was not ordered to jail for 15 days as incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Independent-Journal.

Durham, of 83 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, was arrested Sept. 10 in Larkspur.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court also placed him on probation for three months.

Senate Approves Disability Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill increasing disability benefits for injured workers was approved 21-0 by the Senate Thursday.

The measure by Assemblyman David Pierson, D-Inglewood, would boost benefits beginning April 1 from the current maximum of $87 a week to $105 depending on his top earnings during the year.

It also increases worker contributions to the disability fund. The bill was returned to the Assembly for concurrence in Senate amendments.

Your Life is This

LEE GRANT is spotlighted on "Your Life Is This," hosted by Dick Martin, a sketch on the "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In," to be colorcast Monday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Santa Rosa Channel Due

Redwood Empire Broadcasting Co. has established offices in Santa Rosa for the development of the area's first broadcast television station.

The company, which is owned and operated locally, plans to begin telecasting from its Santa Rosa studios in early Spring, 1972.

The full-color station will operate on Channel 50.

The Santa Rosa station will be received in an area which stretches from Richmond to Ukiah, and from the western Sacramento Valley to the sea. Additionally, all cable television systems in Sonoma, Napa, Marin, Mendocino and Lake counties will carry Channel 50 programs.

More Than Half Get Seven Channels

A growing majority — 57 per cent — of television homes in the U.S. are able to receive programs from at least seven television stations, according to Television Information Office director Roy Danish. This figure, which appeared in a special study provided to TIO by A.C. Nielsen Co., is up 4 percentage points from 53 per cent reported two years ago.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

New ones from the Elektra and Nonesuch labels:

LORCA — Tim Buckley — ELEKTRA EKS-74074: The clearn, high voice of Tim Buckley and the sensitivity of his lyric message have been an appreciation of mine since his first Elektra album. In this, his latest, the messages have grown to such length that the album contains only five long songs, with the title song running 10 minutes in length. Instrumental forces are more accoustic-oriented than before, with Tim himself plucking the 12-string. Tim's musical ideas fully match his lyric ones, a fact that one wishes were true of more triple-threat poet-composer-performer types.

JOHN CAGE & LEJAREN HILLER: HPSCHD; BEN JOHNSTON: String Quartet No. 2 — Visher/Bruce/Tudor, harpsichords; The Composers Quartet — NONESUCH H-71224: "HPSCHD" is John Cage's latest piece of chance music, though the chance factors are rigidly controlled within limits permitted by the composers. The title comes from the word harpsichard reduced to the six-letter limit of the computer used to generated the 51 electronic sound tapes which are combined with three different "live" harpsichords in the final production.

The scale of pitches of the electronic music bears no relation to the 12-note equal temperament of the harpsichords, which play various themes of Mozart during the piece — one of the performers being instructed to play anything of Mozart's he wants to whenever he wants to. In addition to all this, the album comes with a computer-generated list of settings for the volume and tone controls on one's own stereo amplifier. The idea is to follow the time indications with a stopwatch and turns the knobs as directed while the stereo disc plays. This makes the LP the first case where the listener's home stereo set is integral to the composition. Well, as Cage says at the end of his computer's print-out, "Good luck." The 1964 Ben Johnston quartet employs both 31 and 53-note-to-the-octave scales and requires amazing accuracy of intonation from the string players, who have no help from electronic means whatever. It is an ear-bending piece and much more exciting than the usual serialized stuff.

ERIC SALZMAN: The Nude Paper Sermon — Tropes for Actor, Renaissance Consort, Chorus, and Electronics — Stacy Keach/The Nonesuch Consort/Members of the New York Motet Singers/Joshua Rifkin cond. — Nonesuch H-71231: The Nonesuch Records commissioning program continues with another avant-garde composition. More than perhaps any of the others, Nude Paper Sermon is shaped on, by and through the medium of the modern stereo LP. It was composed in dozens of separate tracks on tape, which were later mixed and combined with live overlays to produce the final reult one hears on the dik.

The words, for actor, soloists and chorus, are written to suggest the contemporary verbal barrage from all those "who use words to manipulate others: preacher, politician, TV personality, news-caster," . . . record reviewer. The liner notesfeature a sort of play-by-play on what's happening, but this is one game that instant re-play is almost required to understand what happened. Haven't tried it yet, but the many-source nature of this material convinces me it ought to be a surrounding experience on pseudo-quadraphonic speaker set-ups.

CHARLES WUORINEN: Time's Encomium, for synthezied & processed synthesized sound — NONESUCH H-71225: This superlative piece of electronic music deserves a place beside Subotnick's several fine works such as "Silver Apples of the Moon" and "Touch," and Rudin's "Tragoedia." It is a fully-realized conception which-makes more genuine music out of the RCA Synthesizer than Milton Babbitt ever could. Perhaps the reason is that Wuorinen used the Synthesizer's product much as basic sounds for musique concrete, transforming and distorting them later in various ways just as the natural recording of a bell or whistle was transformed in musique concrete. Some trip, this — both musically and technically.

AMERICAN BRASS MUSIC of IVES, BREHM, BRANT & PHILLIPS — The American Brass Quintet — NONESUCH H-71222: Another unusual album idea brought to fruition x Nonesuch with great skill and taste and naturally, at their usual bargain price as well. Ives' "From the Steeples and the Mountains" even throws in the Carillon of New York's Riverside Church for good measure. Henry Brant is a made genius and his music for brass is like nothing else ever heard. His "Fourth Millennium" is a journey for the ear that will bore no one. Wonderful close yet rich brass sound.

FRANZ BERWALD: Overtures & Tone Poems — Orchestra of the Swedish Radio/Sixten Ehrling — NONESUCH H-71218: Berwald, forgotten by his contemporaries and re-discovered at the turn of the century, has received several recording premieres of late. Here are six short orchestral pieces from his pen which will titillate the ear of seekers after the different in LP fare. "Elves' Game" was my favorite, for its thorough work-out given to the double-basses in the orchestra.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Did you notice the ethnic finesse used in the new CBS weekly series, "The Chicago Teddy Bears," a spoof on the Prohibition-gangster era of the 1920s in Chicago? Semi-fantasy though the program may be, it's stretching things a lot to make the principals of Hungarian origin. Any Hungarians in Chicagoland in that time probably were sweating it out in the steel mills of Gary or Indiana Harbor rather than peddling illegal booze and using strong-arm tactics against proprietors of Chicago bistros.

"Shirley's World" on ABC's new-season schedule does nothing for movie star Shirley MacLaine, nor does she do much for the program as a world-trotting photographer-reporter for a magazine. Neither she nor the idea of the series is potent enough.

The more you see of "lawyer shows" on television — the latest is ABC's "Owen Marshal, Counselor at Law" — the more you miss "The Defenders" of gradually fading memory.

MARLIN PERKINS, zoologist and conservationist, travels to remote centers of the globe to film wildlife for his "Wild Kingdom" show shown at 7 p.m. Sundays on Channel 4.

Wilds Probed For Viewers At Home

"Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom" has entered its tenth season on network television — one of the longest running programs in the history of the medium.

Probing the wild places of the globe, it now brings viewers each week a world they could never otherwise experience.

The setting might be any of the remaining untamed, untouched regions of the earth; the many strange and wonderful animals that inhabit these regions are the cast of characters.

EVERY WEEK Marlin Perkins — the program host and a distinguished zoologist — journeys to a different part of the wild kingdom. He may go to Africa to dart elephants from a helicopter; to the Arctic to trap polar bear; to South America for jaguar; or into the sea in search of a whale. Over the years, Perkins has visited both poles, and every continent and major ocean of the world in search of adventure.

Assisting Perkins in the expeditions is Jim Fowler, rugged explorer-naturalist and/or Stan Brock, formerly manager of the world's largest area cattle ranch in Guyana, South America.

The man behind the scenes is Producert-Director Don Meier whose guiding hand touches every stage of production from location to finished print. A member of the board of directors of the World Wildlife Fund, he combines an active interest in conservation with a distinguished career in television production.

EVERY half-hour episode emanates from location. One program may concentrate on a species of animal, another a particular region, while another may chronicle the life of a primitive people. The film — all in color — is obtained from a small staff of the world's finest wildlife photographers. Dedicated naturalists, they live with and know intimately the subjects they are photographing.

From days spent in a cramped blind may come several feet of film that capture the special moment when the great drama of nature is revealed. For the average show, almost thirty-thousand feet will he photographed.

The technical excellence and dedication to detail that have marked the series since its beginning have earned it many awards — including four national Emmys; in 1966, 1967, 1969 and 1970. The show has also won many film festival and technical awards. The program's conservation theme has also earned it recognition and praise from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, State Fish and Game Departments, the National Wildlife Federation and scientists all over the world.

Proposed Standard For Independents

A prime time standard for independent stations has been recommended by the Television Code Review Board.

If ratified by the Television Board of Directors, independent stations would be allowed a maximum of 12 minutes non-program material per prime time hour; network affiliated stations would be allowed nine minutes 30 seconds non-program material under the prime time standards

Novato: Typical Suburban City

Rural Land On Verge Of Boom

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is running a series of "state of our city" reports on Marin's municipalities, prepared by officials of those cities. This week's report on Novato was prepared by Mayor Joseph D. Gargiulo, his daughter, Ellen, and the Novato Chamber of Commerce.)

By JOSEPH D. GARGIULO

Novato has the dubious distinction of being a typical suburban community which came to life in the '60's as middle-class Americans deserted the metropolitan core areas and moved into the quiet rural atmosphere on the fringe.

While communities like Novato with its rural-like setting have much to offer, there are many things which helped to drive the people from the larger cities such as high taxes, poor schools, deteriorating business areas, riots or fear of riots, and crime increase.

JOSEPH D. GARGIULO
Novato Mayor

WITH THIS migration to the suburbs, bringing with it an increasing burden for providing better and safer streets, the "best" police protection, schools and playgrounds, and more recently — preservation of our natural environment — the question most often confronting the community leaders is, will these new residents accept the financial responsibility for providing these services and facilities?

We feel that they are receiving the highest return possible for each dollar being spent on municipal services, and that the local government is continually seeking more efficient methods for providing those services.

To do this successfully takes dedicated and forward-looking officials, active civic organizations, professional management, and citizens who take an active part in their community life.

AT THE same time there are numerous other problems facing all residents of the Bay Area, although here in Novato some of them are not yet critical: air and water pollution, preservation of open spaces, race relations, housing for the poor and elderly, refuse disposal, the Bay, ecology and youth, to name a few.

The city manager, Charles A. Brown, has summarized in his report, "Suggested goals and objectives" for the '70's, the following areas for immediate concerns: annexation and planning, city-county tax inequities, five year capital budget, industrial development, open space preservation, public buildings, public housing, recreation facilities, young adults, and city involvement in the solution of social problems of the community.

The last one is a new area of community and municipal responsibility which is assumed out of compassion for human needs. Novato has established and appointed a Citizens Advisory Committee to undertake evaluations of the city's social needs of the community and make recommendations to the city council.

IN JANUARY 1960, at the time of incorporation the population within the city limits, including Hamilton Air Force Base, was 18,000 and today the population is recorded at 32,000. This represents an increase of 78 per cent in the past eleven years since incorporation.

Population growth in this area is due to a multiplicity of factors. In the case of Novato, several growth incentives can be observed, or are expected to occur because of the following reasons: proximity to a central city, accessibility to the freeway, development and land values in South and Central Marin, local and nearby employment sources, terrain, climate, and its natural rustic beauty, and community facilities.

During the 1970's, Novato will become Marin County's largest city. The transition from the community's rural past to a new urban preeminence will be difficult, generating problems as well as opportunities. Recognizing the need to evaluate emerging changes and to clarify the goals of the community and its Downtown, the Novato City Council authorized a comprehensive planning study of the Downtown area.

WITH Federal support, the services of the urban and environmental planning firm of Sedway/Cooke, assisted by Arthur D. Little, Inc., economic consultants, were secured to undertake the study. The consultants also were aided by City staff and worked closely with an appointed citizens Downtown Committee. This study was completed last year, 1970. By careful planning and zoning, Novato is trying to retain the natural rustic characteristics of our community.

By using and preserving the natural charm of our hills, trees, creeks, open spaces, parks in planning our new downtown area. We have planned to give special emphasis to the physical form and appearance of the downtown in recognition of both its beautiful natural attributes and the intimate relationship between environmental quality and economic success of the city.

Chamber Report: On Way To Biggest

Novato today is a combination of many smaller towns that cropped up during its agricultural history.

It is no longer a "spot in the road," as viewed by Highway 101 travelers in days gone by, but well on the way toward becoming Marin's largest city.

The one-time farming community has sprouted into a city which covers 23 square miles containing six shopping centers, and has visions of attracting a regional shopping center.

WITH population projections for the Greater Novato area at 52,000 by 1975 and 73,000 by 1985, the city has adopted a downtown plan to meet the expected growth.

The 10 major features of the plan are:

1) For long term consideration, a regional shopping center be located on a 90 acre site immediately north of Olive Avenue with a rapid transit station at Olive.

2) North Redwood Boulevard (now Highway 101) would include office facilities and BUSINESS CENTER — A growing banking and business center has brought a modern look to West Grant Avenue in Novato, which serves as the major community for North Marin and is expected to be the largest city in Marin in a few years.

Indians Once Roamed Novato Hills

By ELLEN GARGIULO

Novato's history begins not unlike that of the rest of Marin County. The Coastal Miwok Indians were the earliest inhabitants. The mild climate of Novato allowed them to go naked and the abundance of game, fish, berries and fresh water caused them to live happy and lazy lives.

Drake landed in Marin County in 1579 and claimed the land including Novato in the name of the Queen. But the English abandoned their claim, so two hundred years later, in 1776, Spanish explorers came and founded Mission Dolores in San Francisco. In that same year Marin County, including Novato, was explored.

THE INDIAN village of Olompali (located at the northern foot of what is now Mt. Burdell) was visited by two young Spaniards. In exchange for Indian hospitality, the white men helped the Indians build an adobe house — the first in the North Bay Area.

The original is gone but the second adobe, built by Camilo Ynitia, the son of Olompali, was made part of the Burdell mansion in 1863. Although the mansion is now burned down, the adobe structure is still visible.

After the founding of Mission San Rafael in 1817, Novato became a grazing place for church-owned cattle. Canada de Novato (Novato Valley) was first mentioned in the Mission records in 1824.

MEXICO divided the Novato area into land grants. Fernando Felix purchased Rancho de Novata in 1838. This ranch roughly stretched from the present San Marin to Black Point. In 1839 Juan Martin got Corte Madera de Novata which roughly included land west of Novato and north of Nicasio including where the cheese factory now stands.

In 1840, Ygnacio Pacheco got Rancho San Jose which now includes Hamilton Field and Ignacio. Camilio Ynitia, chief of the Olompalis, was granted official title to his land in exchange for helping General Vallejo. This grant included Mt. Burdell and the area north of the city of Novato including the present

Looking To The Future

park development from Olive Avenue to DeLong.

3) East Grant Avenue be reconstructed into a pedestrian mall.

4) A civic and cultural center encompassing the existing City Hall site.

5) Reichert Hills (southeast corner of DeLong and Highway 101) suggested for combined housing and recreation use.

6) West Grant Avenue to be developed as a primary office center.

7) Limited expansion of the Downtown Center at Seventh Street and Grant Avenue with the emphasis on utilizing the existing Novato Creek area.

8) Creek-side parks and trails are planned through downtown from Seventh Street to Redwood Boulevard.

9) Diablo Triangle (southwest corner of South Novato Boulevard and Diablo) is suggested as a garden apartment complex.

10) South Redwood Boulevard to expand its present role for auto sales and service uses.

THE PROPOSED transportation network to accommodate the downtown area envisions several major arterials such as Novato Boulevard, De Long, Diablo Avenue Atherton Avenue, San Marin Boulevard and Seventh Street. Roadway loops around Grant Avenue are proposed to ensure easy access to commercial areas. Special provisions are made to provide for consolidation of parking.

Of prime consideration in the transportation system is the eventual rapid transit service with a station proposed in the vicinity of Olive Avenue and the existing Northwest Pacific Railroad right-of-way.

With this detailed study and the recommendations that followed, the City and the Novato Chamber of Commerce are presently pursuing a program of implementation.

WHILE MUCH of the plan depends on economics and the growth factor before implementation can take place, aspects of this total plan could be considered for implementation in the very near future. Depending on the results of funding and economic studies, some of these programs could be initiated in the year 1971-72.

Existing now either in plan or operation are a few other areas of commercial concern which will have a substantial impact on the business development of Novato.

GNOSS FIELD, The Marin County airport, though still in its infant stages with two fixed base operators, a 3300-foot runway and tie down space for about 100 planes, already provides a positive cash flow to the county.

With the increase of facilities at the airport and the development of land around it zoned for light industrial use, together with the forecast for more use of general aviation as a form of recreation and personal transportation, it is anticipated this will be an important economic factor for Novato.

The outcome of applications for joint use at Hamilton Field are not known to date, but this could conceivably bring about an economic impact on the community.

THE PLANNED North Marin campus of the Marin Community College District will be materializing within the near future. Classes are underway at Hamilton AFB and Novato High School this fall term. This is expected to generate the need for more housing, services and goods.

Hamilton Industrial Park which for several years was developing slowly has recently been sold and is now progressing with several new warehouses being completed and approval for more in process. Another twenty acres of industrial land just north of Hamilton AFB on Bel Marin Keys Blvd. has received tentative approval from the County and is available for development.

The Petaluma River Basin remains a reservoir untapped for recreational use. This could be of major importance in the future.

Another recent development that can be a determining factor is the acquisition of Pt. Reyes National Seashore which already is attracting thousands of visitors and tourists. As it develops and progresses, Novato could very well establish itself as the Gateway to Point Reyes.

Kit Carson came through Novato in 1829 when he traveled to San Rafael from the Suisun Bay Area to help suppress an Indian rebellion. In a second occasion, Carson came through Novato when he was serving as John C. Fremont's guide during the Bear Flag Rebellion.

Fremont's forces were heading from Sonoma to San Francisco and they camped at the same first adobe site. Only a few days earlier a group of Americans had encountered a Mexican military force at that site. This was the only armed battle of the Bear Flag Rebellion.

IN 1856, two easterners, J. B. Sweetser and Francis C. Delong acquired the Novato Valley. This partnership planted over twenty thousand fruit trees, mostly apple, to supply the fruit demands in the West. By the 1860's they shipped apples to as far away as Australia besides to the whole U.S.

As more settlers came to Novato, there became a need for a church and school, so Sweetser and Delong built a combination one room school and church in 1858. The population increased during the 1870's with the settling of many Portuguese and Italian farmers and dairymen in Novato.

A bigger school and church house with a bell tower was built in 1873 on Grant Avenue near the present Denny's Restaurant. Three other schools were built at the turn of the century in Black Point, Olompali, and Ignacio.

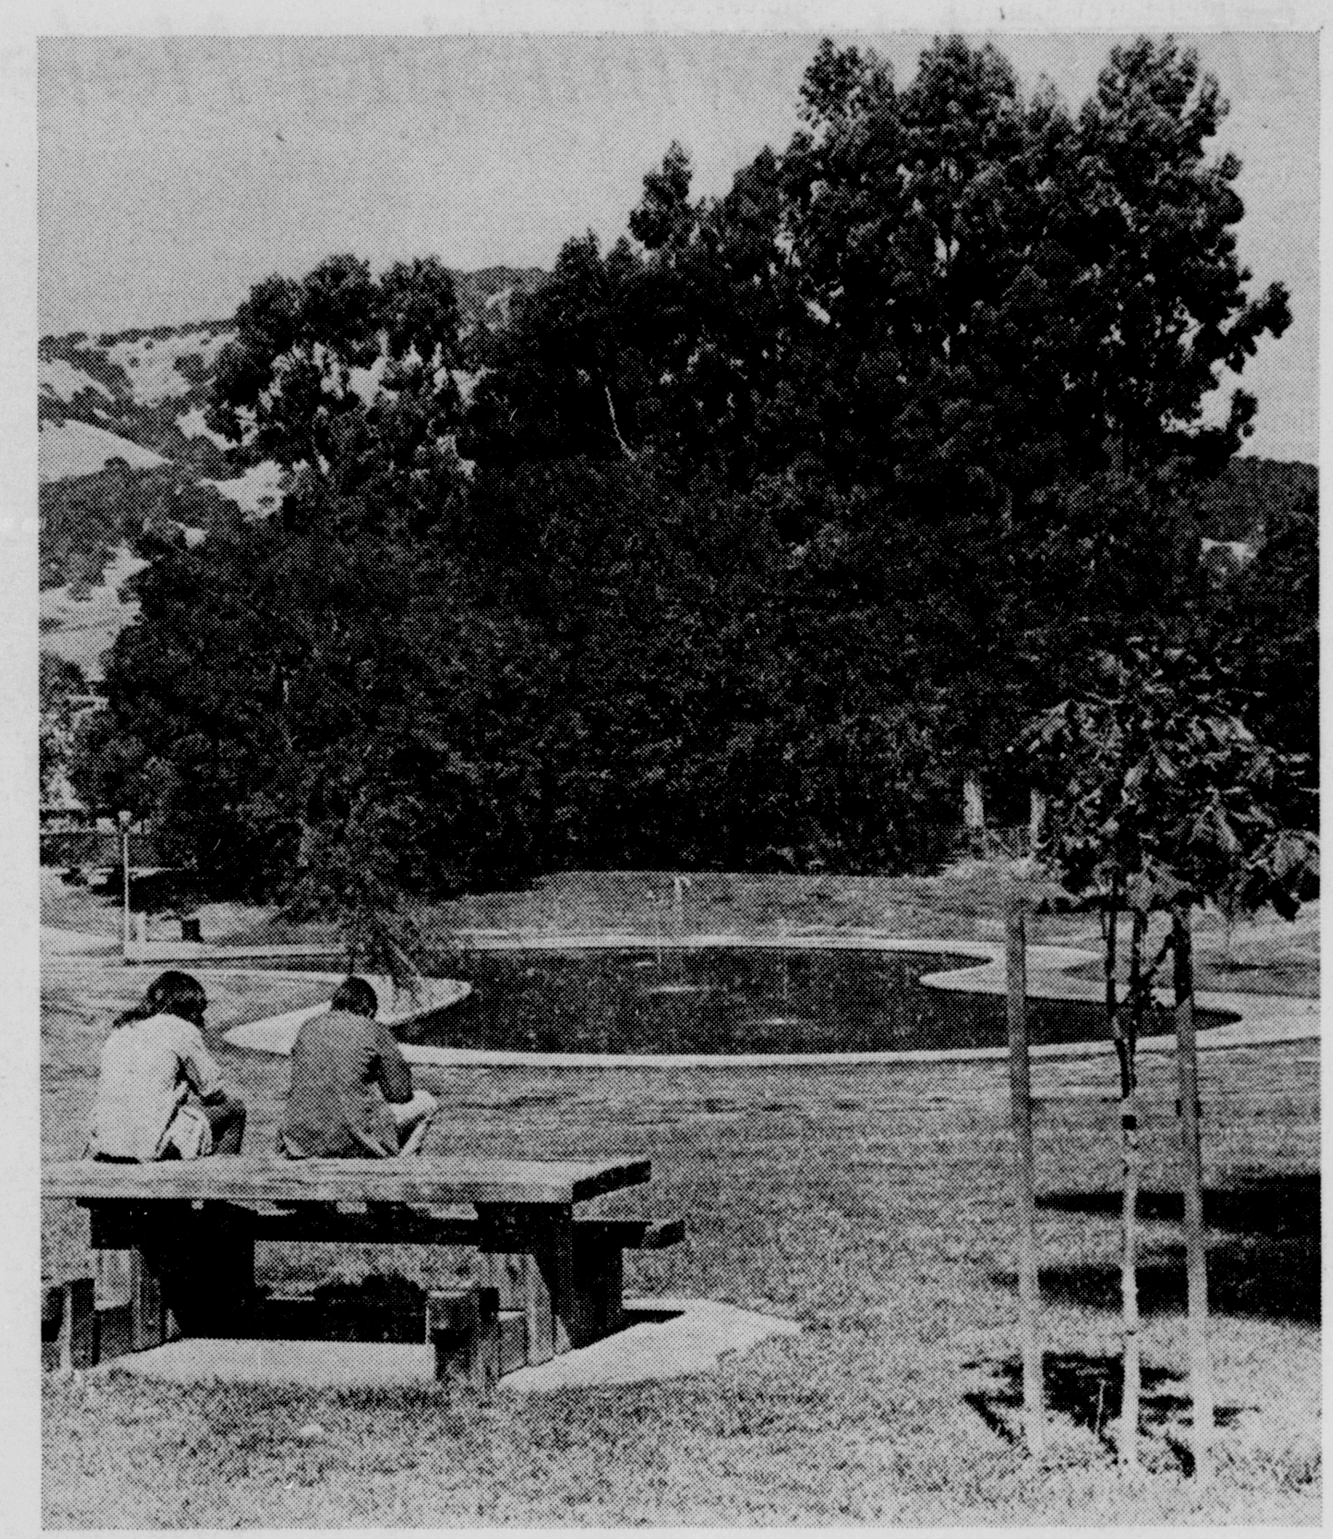
THE OLD TOWN of Novato was originally located near the present Nave Shopping Center along Novato Creek. Large vessels were able to navigate up the creek in order to pick up fruit, vegetables, and cow hides at Novato.

In 1888, Delong subdivided 6,000 acres of his property to start the town of Novato on Grant Avenue between the present highway and the railroad station. The church which now houses the Novato City Hall was built in 1898.

During the 1920's, Novato started her role as a bedroom community for San Francisco. New landowners worked in San Francisco during the week and came up to Novato by train to work their farms on the weekends. The present Community House was built as a town effort in 1923, showing the community spirit of Novato during that time.

THE BUILDING of Hamilton Air Force Base in the early 1930's did not affect Novato greatly although it did provide (as it still does) many jobs for Novatoans. Novato remained a small rural community until after World War II.

During the 1950's, Novato became the fastest growing area in Marin County experiencing the rapid growth of subdivision development. Novato doubled its population between 1950 to 1960, going from 9,000 to 18,000.



PIONEER MEMORIAL PARK in the center of Novato is a restful area that is the city's only major park, but there is hope that much of the open land in the area can be set aside for other parks before it is lost to development.

The Old Swimming Hole A Memory

By PAUL CANE

"Oh, the old swimming hole! When I last saw the place; the scene was all changed like the change in my face."

James Whitcomb Riley's comment about the "swimming facilities" of his day (which were, like as not, nothing more than moss-banked, eucalyptus-surrounded ponds) is certainly appropriate today.

Swimming pools, and the people who use them, have undergone great changes since the days of Ann Curtis and Charlie Sava in San Francisco's old Crystal Plunge.

MODERN super-complexes such as the International Swim Center in Santa Clara, are a far cry from the "water tanks" of yesteryear. And so are the people who swim in them. As the facilities themselves improved, the ability of people to take care of themselves in the water has proportionally increased.

Mrs. Jack (Beth) Kaufman of Greenbrae, now 76, has probably done as much as anyone in the United States to further the cause of water safety.

At the age of 29, Beth and a group of companions watched helplessly as a friend drowned in the waves off a Ventura, Calif., beach. "None of us knew the first thing about life saving," she recalls. "It was awful."

This tragedy inspired young Beth to enroll in life saving classes under Wilbur Longfellow, the founder of the American National Red Cross, and from that time on has continued a relentless crusade for water safety programs through the present day.

Marin County's first top-notch competitive swimmer was Eleanor Garatti of San Rafael, who was a national champion in 1920.

MORE FAMOUS, however, is Ann Curtis, who thrilled the country with two gold and one silver medal in the 1948 Olympic Games in London, England. Now Mrs. Ann Cuneo, swim instructor from Terra Linda, she looks back on those competitive days with pride: "When you stand up there (the award stand) and they play the National Anthem while Old Glory is raised, and they award you that gold medal, you can't help but be thrilled to the tips of your toes."

Perhaps Mrs. Kaufman's greatest accomplishment was initiating the Amateur Athletic Union's (AAU) age-group swim program, where youngsters from 6 to 17 are permitted to compete in races with others their age.

It was a long and arduous task to get the unprecedented program approved by the AAU, back in 1951, but in the end it was accepted — with the net result of involving every member of the 1964 and 1968 U.S. Olympic teams during their early teen years.

MRS. KAUFMAN and Mrs. Cuneo, in recognition of their dedication to the improvement of swimming and water safety in the United States, were inducted into the National Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Out of the age-group program inspired by Mrs. Kaufman have come many competitive swim clubs and organizations in Marin County.

Don Swartz, coach of the Marin Aquatic Club which is considered to be the top age-group club in Marin today, says that while swimming and water safety have come a long way since the 1920's, there is still much to be done in the way of developing a really top flight recreational and competitive program in the County. "Competitively we've kept pace with the times, but the facilities in Marin County are at least ten years behind our competitive talent," he observed.

THE MARIN Aquatic Club, co-sponsored by the San Rafael Park and Recreation Department and by the Tamalpais Union High School District, is only one of the many competitive clubs in Marin today.

The Dolphins of Marin, Hamilton Air Force Base Voodoos and the Novato Aquanauts are other AAU clubs, and a non-AAU, summer league program is conducted throughout the county, with teams representing nearly all the tennis and country clubs in Marin taking part.

Swartz supports his contention that the "Bounty County" lacks sufficient pool facilities with these facts: he observes that in the Santa Clara-Los Altos area, there are no less than four 50-meter (regulation olympic size) pools within 10 miles of each other, but there isn't a single regulation olympic-size pool in Marin County. "A football team, to reach its maximum capability, must practice on a regular football field some part of the time; in the same way, a swimmer, to be really prepared for big competition, must have practice experience in the regulation pool, which is 50 meters long." To get this invaluable training at the present time, Swartz says his swimmers travel to Petaluma daily to use one single lane of the municipally-owned facility there.

IN CONTRAST to the lack of public pools, the private pool building business is booming, according to Art Strasser of Marin's Anthony Pools. "Our sales are up over 50% from last year," he observes. Strasser feels that people are now more interested in just clean recreation than ever before. "People would rather spend more time in a relaxing recreation like swimming than working to earn more money," he said.

As private pool building has risen in the past, the drowning rate has risen. Statistics show that 20,000 drowning deaths occurred in the U.S. last year.

Public officials realized the need for some prevention of these needless deaths as far back as the 1950's, when a county ordinance requiring a fence around all pools was put into law.

SWARTZ, however, feels that this only sidestepped the real problem. "What was really needed then was a good, solid recreational-lifesaving-water safety program that could eliminate many more of these drownings."

Addition of a 50-meter pool complex will facilitate this end, he says.

Currently emerging as a competitive swimming power even under the handicap of present pool facilities, Marin County boasts such talent as Denise Ham, Jo Hislop and Robin Bachrach, among many others. However, Mrs. Kay Campion of the Marin Aquatic Club says, "Let's face it, until we can get more pools, especially 50 meters, and more and better training time, we just can't do right by our dedicated kids and they'll have to go elsewhere."

Mel Augustine: Strong Man Of Peace

Probation Officer Acts On Philosophical Base

Profile Of A Marinite

Emilio (Mel) Augustine, 40, the good-natured probation officer at Marin Juvenile Hall, has an avocation that few people would suspect.

He is an accomplished judoist of Olympic caliber, with a record of 12 major wins in the American Athletic Union championships and holder of a fifth-degree black belt.

He carries his 205 pounds so compactly on a 6 foot 1½ inch frame that his size is deceiving. Few of his colleagues or the juveniles he has supervised for almost 14 years were ever aware that this soft-spoken gent with the disarming smile could toss you over his head and twist you into a pretzel in one easy motion.

HIS STATURE in the gentle art of self defense became more widely known only last August when he went to Ludwigshafen, Germany, as coach-manager of the United States International Judo Team of 1971 to compete in the world championships.

The young (average age 21) American team of seven members came in eighth among the 59 entries. This, said Augustine, is an excellent showing in view of the fact that other countries give official backing to the sport and subsidize their athletes.

Never once has Augustine resorted to judo in anger. "I'd just as soon walk away from a fight," he explained. "The philosophy of judo I use every day. But mayhem and brutality are the farthest removed from the principles of judo. It teaches discipline of mind over matter, being considerate of others, recognizing their strengths and weaknesses. You respect the other person's point of view."

"YOU BECOME more tolerant because you recognize that no one is perfect; that everyone has weaknesses and shortcomings as well as strength. You don't ridicule, insult or hurt your fellow man because you know what pain is."

How does that philosophy operate in the case of a probation officer facing a group of youngsters who are anti-adult and anti-society?

"Never put them down without a good reason," said Augustine. "You try to serve as a model that they can respect. When you look at it from their point of view, you can see that many adults have not earned the respect of youth."

AUGUSTINE gave this example: A youth asks for a chance to drive or own a car. Parents give a flat refusal, with no explanation or with reasons that have nothing to do with car ownership. Parents would do better by discussing alternatives. Talk about the cost, gasoline, insurance, payments, cost of upkeep. To own and enjoy a car costs about $2.50 or $3 per day. Once the youth and parents arrive at these figures, the youth gets the incentive to save up for a car, or he decides he cannot afford the $3 per day.

This gives the youth a role in the decision-making.

"Parents send their children to school, presumably to teach the children to think for themselves. And when the children begin thinking and making suggestions, the parents say 'no' without even listening."

Many "problem" children are brought to Augustine, but most of them turn out to be no problem at all.

HE ENROLLS some of these youngsters in a judo school which he operates in Albany. He has about 60 boys and some girls, ranging from tots to adults.

"I ask them to keep their hair clean, and their uniforms white. I treat them with respect and ask them to maintain personal cleanliness out of respect to others in the class, and they comply voluntarily."

Never once was he forced to oust anyone from class because of dirty hair or uniform.

In his work with youth at Marin Juvenile Hall, he had to use physical restraint only once. Several years ago, an intoxicated youth went on a rampage and rammed his fist through plate glass, suffering a severe gash on his arm. He continued to thrash around, kicking and swinging. Augustine managed to control the youth by holding his head from behind so that a tourniquet could be applied to the bleeding arm.

ON ANOTHER occasion, about five years ago, a husky teen-ager was brought before the juvenile judge at a hearing at Juvenile Hall. The youth became angry and decided to split. Swinging a chair at bailiffs, he ran into the hallway.

"I happened to be standing in the hallway, blocking his way," recalled Augustine. "He looked at me, and I looked at him, and nothing happened. He decided not to make a break for it."

This has been the pattern most of his life, said Augustine. "I've been able to talk to them and depend on logic rather than force."

He has had two brushes with death, both accidental.

In 1960, three weeks before he was to compete in a national judo tournament, his car hit an oil slick in rainy weather on the north end of the Waldo Tunnel and plunged 525 feet down the cliff. He clung to his car all the way down and came out with minor bruises.

IN 1969, he was attending the world championships at Olympic Stadium in Mexico City when struck by a stray bullet.

"My wife and I were walking along the street, and there were two Mexicans fighting. All of a sudden there's a shot, and I'm on the ground, shot through the right thigh."

Fortunately, the American team doctor, Joseph Fitzimmons of San Jose, was nearby and quickly got him into surgery.

Augustine lives in Berkeley with his wife, Joan, a former Berkeley school teacher, and their three sons.

A native of Honolulu, Augustine attended Mission High School in San Francisco, San Francisco City College, and San Jose State College, graduating in 1958. In between colleges, he served in the United States Army for two years, getting out as sergeant-major.

HE JOINED the Marin County Probation Department in 1958 and is now supervising probation officer for the northern unit (San Rafael north to Sonoma County line).

He is a member of the United States Olympic Committee and is national AAU chairman of the Correctional Institutional Sports Committee. He has also been active in such organizations as the Volunteer Bureau, Family Service Agency, United Bay Area Crusade, California Parole and Correctional Association, Marin Association for Mental Health, Northern California Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Association, and Foster Parents Association.

In 1968 Augustine won the Berkeley-Albany award for community service, and in 1970 was named Probation Officer of the Year in Marin.

AS COACH-MANAGER of the U.S. International Judo Team of 1971, Mel Augustine wore this AAU uniform to the world tournament in Germany in August. In his work as Marin probation officer, he relies on persuasion and the philosophy of judo, never on force.

Orchestra Is Expandable

Select Group Expands When Melody Requires

By DON KEOWN

One might expect that a two-and-a-half hour Monday after-school Marin Youth Orchestra rehearsal, plus play with the school orchestra and perhaps a band as well, private music lessons and practice at home would satisfy the creative urges of any talented boy or girl.

But an especially gifted and dedicated core from that Marin Youth Orchestra has signed up for an additional four hours of music this school term as members of the new Orchestra Piccola.

EVERY Saturday morning these young musicians report from throughout Marin to San Rafael High School for a 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. session of rehearsal of Early Baroque and contemporary chamber music, sometimes as an orchestra and sometimes as sectional groups.

For youths already devoting many, many hours to their music, it is a long session, even when broken up by lectures and by rest periods every hour.

Isn't it actually just a bit too much?

Not at all, answeres their conductor and instructor, Hugo Rinaldi. "They thrive on it. They arrive for every rehearsal fresh and eager, and they leave still stimulated."

FURTHERMORE, Rinaldi adds, for all the time they spend on their music, the Orchestra Piccola members still do well in their school work and are generally A and B students.

The new Orchestra Piccola comes in two sizes.

The basic group is composed of 14 members, all string instrumentalists, with harpsichord.

But for certain music the membership is increased to 40, including some woodwind and brass instrument players.

The Orchestra Piccola performers are selected on the basis of the chair they hold down in the 85-member Marin Youth Orchestra — first chair players, first, second chair players, next, etc.

LIKE THE Marin Youth Orchestra, the Orchestra Piccola is sponsored by the Marin Symphony Association. And those two organizations are but part of a four-point program now being sponsored by the symphony association for music-minded youth of the county. Also included are the Workshop for Strings, and the Music for Minors series.

The Marin Symphony Association, incidentally, is currently in the midst of its 1971 membership campaign, seeking added supporters for such projects as the youth orchestra and the Orchestra Piccola.

Hugo Rinaldi notes that the cooperation and unity achieved in Marin through the symphony association, the schools and private music teachers might well be unique for the entire country.

"I have never known such coordination and harmony to exist anywhere else," he says.

OF THE Orchestra Piccola he says, "It developed from the expressed wishes of 16 string players for a further opportunity to explore the concerto grosso, and particularly the music of Vivaldi and Handel."

Such music, he adds, is inclined to be less flamboyant, more subtle and intimate.

"And in an era where the popular rock music supplies

them with all the flamboyance they require, I think many of these young people find the motets and madrigals and such a refreshing change of pace."

RINALDI explains: "The chamber music played by the Orchestra Piccola does not depend for its effects upon great splashes of sound or a great variety in the tone color. One is only aware of the musical essence, of the composer's innermost intentions, and is not distracted by extraneous glamor.

"Furthermore, chamber music has always challenged the greatest composers to their best efforts. Make a list of chamber orchestra works of the masters from Vivaldi to Webern, and you have at once a catalog of their finest compositions.

"It is my personal belief that we are in an era of a new renaissance in chamber music similar to the 18th and 19th centuries when every cultured person played an instrument and every small town harbored a chamber orchestra."

AND IF through working as a smaller chamber group the young musicians really get to know the composers, they also develop an empathy for one another.

"The intimacy and teamwork demanded of musicians by chamber music causes them to get to know and to appreciate each other," Rinaldi says. "Where else than in chamber music can one find such selfless teamwork, such flawless balance and ensemble, such a manifestation of the human spirit?"

Marin music-lovers will have their first opportunity to hear the new Orchestra Piccola when it makes its concert debut at the new Marin Veterans Memorial Building next February with a four-piece program, two to be played by the small 14-member unit, two by the larger 40-member group.

THE ENTIRE Marin Youth Orchestra is scheduled for January and May concerts at the Veterans Building.

Rinaldi is confident that the music to be heard then will demonstrate amply why some boys and girls are willing to forego precious hours of their already limited leisure time to spend their Saturdays with chamber music.

He sees it as "one kind of search for beauty and truth and love," all objectives very much in the minds of today's more motivated young people.

And he asks for them: "After all, isn't that what life is all about?"

YOUNG MUSICIANS arrive from many Marin communities for the Saturday rehearsals, many by bicycle, complete with instruments aboard, to gain another experience in their musical careers.

A TRIO of French horns lend body to the strings with able young horn players, from the left, Craig Mathre, Gwyneth MacArthur and Brian McCarty.

"Tom Jones" Reincarnated

A START IN LIFE by Alan Sillitoe; Charles Scribner's Sons, 352 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Tom Jones is alive and well in merry new England. He has been reincarnated in the guise of Michael Cullen, who like Jones is of uncertain paternal lineage. Raised, and I use the word loosely, by his unwed mother, he learns early to see life as something to be used, just as his mother had been in the war years. As a product of war-time England, Mike, like others in his condition, resents the implications of the word bastard which is used freely by all characters in this sometimes hilarious adventure story.

The story is told in first person colloquial narrative, and the reader is caught up in one series of adventures after another. From childhood, which he disposes of as an "intense and wonderful love-affair that was stamped out by the willful circumstance of growing up," he comes to young manhood as a cynical but likeable rogue.

Lying and stealing are more natural to Mike than their opposites. But if these traits are to be criticized they must also be tempered by the honesty of our hero's acknowledgement of them. He is not vindictive or bitter at the vagaries of a yo-yo type existence.

Throughout this tale, which takes us to Mike's mid-thirties, we see our lover-adventurer in and out of beds almost as often as he is in and out of scrapes. A strain of frustration but not despair is constantly present in his life. The cast of characters is varied, amusing, and all quite different. Like the proverbial bad penny they keep popping up and influenceing Mike's life in amusing and sometimes philosophical ways.

Our hero is buffeted by winds of fortune which knock him about somewhat maliciously. He seems, however, to survive quite ably in this wind-blown fashion. Throughout it all Mike remains true only to himself, but even then he is not too sure of any pre-ordained direction in his life.

If you are looking for a good story with elements of danger that can make you laugh while keeping you in suspense, then "A Start In Life" should suit you well. Be prepared for surprises and settle back to enjoy yourself.

DESTROY OR DIE by Martin Gershen; Arlington House, 322 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

Subtitled "the true story of My Lai," this account sets forth the mood and condition of Charlie Company before the tragedy. It is painful reading.

Gershen is a professor of journalism at the University of Illinois. He spent six months talking to the soldiers of Charlie Company, plus Army brass and officials. His conclusion: " . . . the Americans who were thrust into that situation cannot be condemned."

Gershen maintains that American society as a whole must accept responsibility for My Lai. He states that the Army took a calculated risk at My Lai 4 with a company of sick infantrymen who went berserk and it (the Army) lost.

"At My Lai (4) an undetermined number of Viet Cong suspects were killed inadvertently by an irrational company of men no longer psychologically capable of controlling their acts. The failure at My Lai was caused by bad Army intelligence, faulty leadership, inadequate troop indoctrination, poor judgment and a questionable counter-guerrilla policy."

Life Magazine printed a series of photos taken at My Lai showing two little boys, about 6 and 3 years, on a road. The bigger boy moves in front to protect his little brother —to no avail. Both were shot to death.

If we accept Gershen's thesis, all of us share in this act. The hand that pulled the trigger was not responsible. This theory of the collective conscience mitigates the rule of law, morality, and society's right to punish its own.

Dealing with an event so emotion-charged requires a scalpel. But Gershen uses an axe. He largely ignores the fact that some soldiers at My Lai did not participate in the slaughter. He completely ignores the fact that millions of soldiers in World War II endured more combat for longer periods — and saw more comrades die. Yet they did not slaughter captured enemy (with rare exceptions), let alone children and pregnant women.

Gershen fails to make proper distinctions between the nature of man (a rational animal) and other animals. He does not comprehend that while there may be reason for a wrong act, this reason does not per se constitute an excuse.

Sexual Adventures Fail To Make A Full Novel

BICYCLE ON THE BEACH by Peter Viertel; Delacorte Press, 362 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

If you can accept the premise that a fifteen year old boy has something to offer, sexually, to a mature, married 27-year-old woman, then you may enjoy "Bicycle on the Beach".

That's about all the book has to offer, except for the repetition a thousand times of "I love you," and "We made love" and "Let's make love, what time is your husband coming home?"

There's the exploration of Carl's naivete, the continuing threat of Hitler's terror in Europe and the California Jews attempts to bring relatives to safety. But Carl, the "wife fixer" as he is called by an aspiring second mistress, is the hero and his high school problems and his sexual prowess are really what the book is all about.

The woman, Pamela, has a nine year old daughter, so it's not maternal affection that she has for Carl . . . it's physical fullfillment that she's seeking. Her husband seems more than willing to adapt himself to her needs but for over two years the strange affair runs on. The husband, in name only, must find his solace elsewhere, Pamela is faithful to Carl.

Feminist Claimed Returned

THE RETURN OF FRANCES WILLARD by Jeffrey Furst; Coward, McCann and Geoeghegan, 171 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

In 1939, when Stephanie Hale was 15 days old, the psychic and mystic Edgar Cayce gave the infant a life reading and pronounced her a reincarnation of Frances Willard, the 19th Century temperance and suffragette leader.

Whether Cayce's pronouncement was correct, or whether it so motivated and influenced Miss Hale in later years as to determine her direction, there did develop a body of evidence linding the WCTU founder to the Virginia Beach housewife.

"The Return of Frances Willard," the latest addition to the fast-growing shelf of literature by or about Edgar Cayce, is Jeffrey Furst's not unbiased study of the Hale-Willard case.

Furst, a school teacher associated with the Edgar Cayce Foundation, is no great shakes as a writer. But he is writing from conviction, and as such he is persuasive, despite the sometimes disorganized presentation. The result is a book that will solidify the belief of already confirmed Cayce believers, and which will cause even skeptics perhaps to pause a bit and wonder.

Gentile Poverty In The Forties

ENTERING EPHESUS, by Daphne Athas; The Viking Press, 442 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

A novel set in Ephesus Virginia, in 1939, this is the riches to rags story of the Bishop family. A sweet story with a little teen-age sex thrown in for spice, it follows the fortunes of P.Q. Bishop, who once ran a bank and now operates a laundry service on his bicycle. But most often it is a story seen through the eyes of Urie, his oldest daughter.

When Mrs. Bishop and the three teen age girls arrive in Ephesus the only house available, within their limited budget is "across the tracks." The house is worn and tattered, but they cope. (Something of the whole story line of gentile poverty reminds one of Louisa May Alcott and the Heroics of "Little Women") No heater? Tear down the back side of the barn, piece by piece. No decent clothes for the opening of school? Make an old velvet dress over. They survive . . . they argue and philosophize, they freeze and sweat, they read and learn.

Learning is the most important ... they learn to steal, among other things. But with gentility. Everything the family does is done properly, even when Mrs. Bishop is caught stealing. She goes to court in style, complete to white gloves.

It is such a long time ago, 1939, 1940, 1941 ... the years covered by the book. There is no empathy left with these times and these people. Yet this is the way life was. The situation of the Negro in this very Southern town are lightly skimmed but the problem of the "poor white" is thoroughly probed.

This is a book that should be read by those in their twenties.

Then perhaps, they would understand more why the needs and the desires of those in forties seem to be so centered on material success. This maybe what Daphne Athas is trying to convey in her charming description of Ephesus.

Cripple Creek "Strike" Richer Than Comstock

MONEY MOUNTAIN by Marshall Sprague; SEA ROUTES TO THE GOLD FIELDS by Oscar Lewis; paperbacks, Ballantine Books, $1.25 each. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Newly added to the "Comstock Editions" reprint series of western historical paperbacks are Marshall Sprague's "Money Mountain" and Oscar Lewis's "Sea Routes to the Gold Fields."

"Money Mountain" is the story of Cripple Creek, Colo., a strike far richer than Nevada's Comstock Lode through less known to most Californians. Sprague went to contemporary sources for much of his material. He did not hesitate to fictionalize some of the events, but his account loses no accuracy for this.

Oscar Lewis went into considerable detail about the vessels that brought gold seekers to California, both "around the horn" and via Panama, in "Sea Routes to the Gold Fields." The book is sometimes repetitive, but is a classic description of the migration by water, which has received much less attention than that by land.

Both are worthy additions to the paperback history shelf.

A Rambling But Revealing Look At Manson's Family

By DON KEOWN

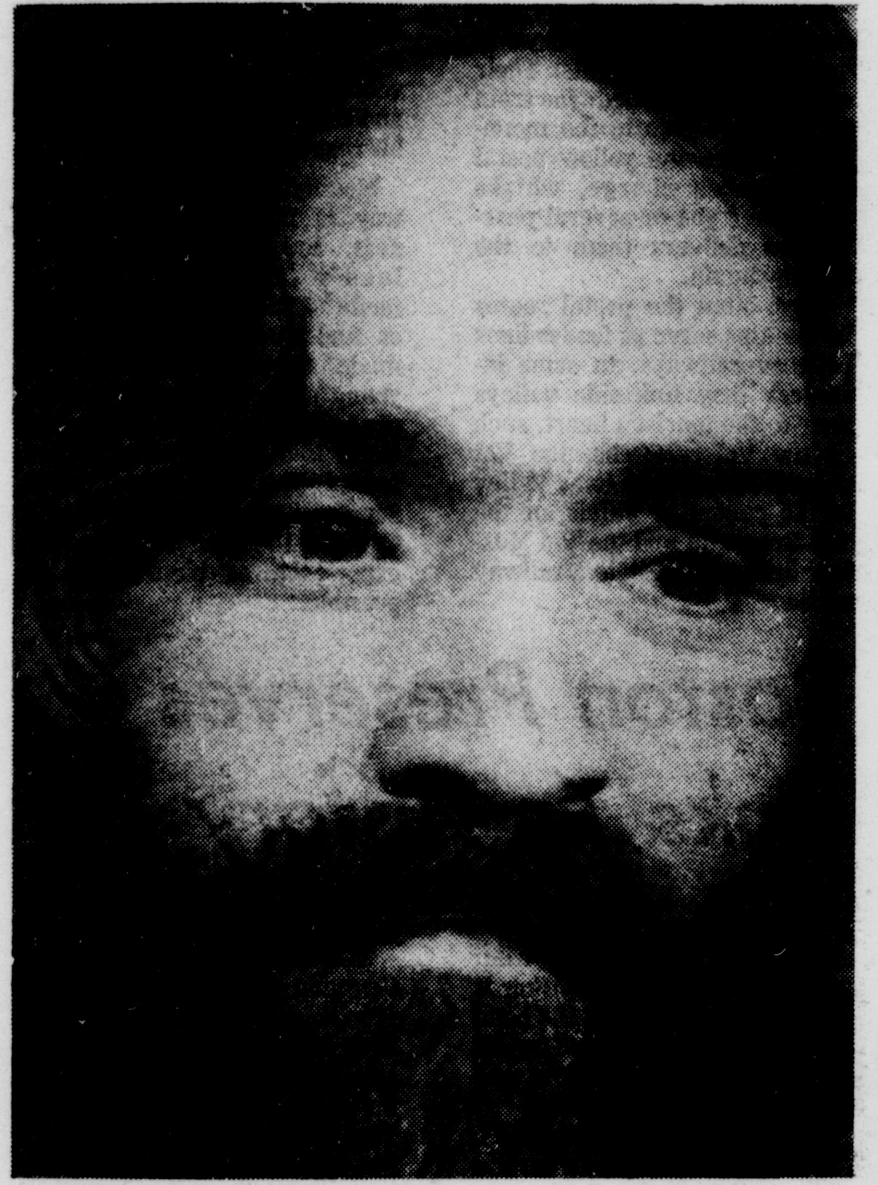
THE FAMILY by Ed Sanders; Dutton, 412 pages, $6.95.

Ed Sanders, book dealer, poet and editor, tells us in his introduction to "The Family: The Story of Charles Manson's Dune Buggy Attack Battalion," that he spent a year and a half in the most intensive research, exploration and undercover work, gathering his material for the book.

One believes him, for certainly he has collected a multitude of facts, surmises, speculation and myths about America's most weird criminal band of the 1960s.

Unfortunately he then wastes much of that effort by demonstrating a total lack of ability to organize or to evaluate that material, and by presenting it in a pseudo-hip style that is more annoying than entertaining.

While Sanders has the credentials himself, having been associated with the Hippie movement, one suspects that the unfortunate tone and jargon is his attempt to capture the "helter skelter" theme impressed by Charles Manson upon his ragtag followers.



CHARLES MANSON
Leader of Mayhem

Still, perhaps, Sanders is only doing his own thing in his own way. In that case, publisher E. P. Dutton and Co.'s editors should have done their's — with blue pencils and scissors.

As it is, there is something of the early Jack Kerouac in Sanders' writing style, although it is not quite that unrestrained. While it worked for a time for Kerouac, the times have changed. And the style is far less appropriate for this kind of journalism than it was for Kerouac's accounts of his personal meanderings and philosophizing. In "The Family" it sounds immature and out of focus in its breeziness against the horrors that are being described.

More than once, one finds himself wishing for a glossary or a translator to put the slang into the kind of language one might better expect from the holder of a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Greek.

Even more critical is Sanders' seeming incapability of distinguishing between what is relevant and what is irrelevant to the sordid and chilling saga of the mad Manson clan. Instead, he serves it all up to us — facts that are essential to the bloody Manson story, facts that are connected only indirectly, and facts that appear to have no connection or relevancy whatsoever — plus a considerable amount of material that is not fact at all. There is room for speculation and surmisal in this kind of book, and it can even make a valuable contribution to the understanding of the subjects. But Sanders, too often, simply tosses his in, without support or explanation.

All this is served up as a sort of mishmash in which the chronology is often hopelessly confused. And for all the immense amount of material he has gathered so laboriously, Sanders still leaves us with disconcerting gaps in the Manson story. And with key questions that go unanswered.

Is there, then, any real reason for reading "The Family"?

Rather surprisingly, the answer is yes. For with all its faults, the book does contain an almost astonishing amount of of information about how, and occasionally even why, one band of young Americans went off on a rampage of murder and other crimes, committing those acts with a deliberation and calculation that justifies to a degree at least Sanders claim that these were "ritual" slayings.

One will have to ignore Sanders' aggravating style and endure the disorganization of the book. And one will have to make his own judgments as to the validity of some of the author's theses.

Just how much influence did such occult and pseuco--religious groups as the English-born Process Church of the Final Judgment exercise upon the sleazy Manson and his unstable band? Just how close were the ties maintained by Manson with the professional underworld from his earlier prison years? Were Manson and his gang Hippies? We are told Manson hated Hippies, and yet later on Sanders refers to them as such. How big a part in the mad schemes of Manson and his "family" did their irrational hatred and fear of the Black Panthers play, and how much of that stemmed from the same dark roorts of racial prejudice that lurk in most of us?

In retrospect, it appears that Manson, for all the resemblances in life style to the offbeat cults, to crime rings, to the communes and to the professional criminals, borrowed most from the gangs of motorcycle toughs with whom he associated and whom he tried to use. The utter ruthlessness and mindlessness with which the Tait and LaBianca slaughters were carried out seems indicative of some such Nazi-like influence.

There was also a link between Manson and Southern California's celebrity strata that perhaps played a role in the Tait killings particularly. Sanders gives us the names of only a few such personalities who were involved with Manson, but hints that there were others.

And again, there is the theory that the Manson ring's involvement in dope, both as users and traffickers, might have provided the motives and the impetus.

Sanders is never able to give us clearcut reasons for the crazed actions and weird beliefs of the "family." Instead, he simply covers all bases and suggests at various points all possibilities. Even the war in Vietnam rates a mention, although it seems possible that Charles Manson was less affected by it than any other American.

Anyway, there it is — all the dirt that Ed Sanders could dig up about the meanest, filthiest, maddest, most dangerous, most fanatical group of social outlaws this country produced in the past decade. The author has obscured his information with misinformation, innuendo, insinuation, irrelevancy and some substances difficult to identify, and put it all together in an irritating manner and a confusing disarray.

But somewhere there among that disorder is "The Story of Charles Manson's Dune Buggy Attack Battalion" as promised in the sub-title — or at least a good part of it.

And it becomes apparent that Charles Manson and his scruffy, giggling gang of obsessed psychotic killers and looters pose the acid test for those of us opposed to capital punishment. Manson is a made-to-order argument for the zealots who insist upon an eye-for-an-eye. Believe the life of Manson worth sparing ahd you are, indeed, a committed foe of the gas chamber. So even this unspeakably evil, and no doubt half-mad, man might be said to be serving a social purpose.

THE CHANDLER POLICY by Doris Miles Disney; Putnam, 188 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

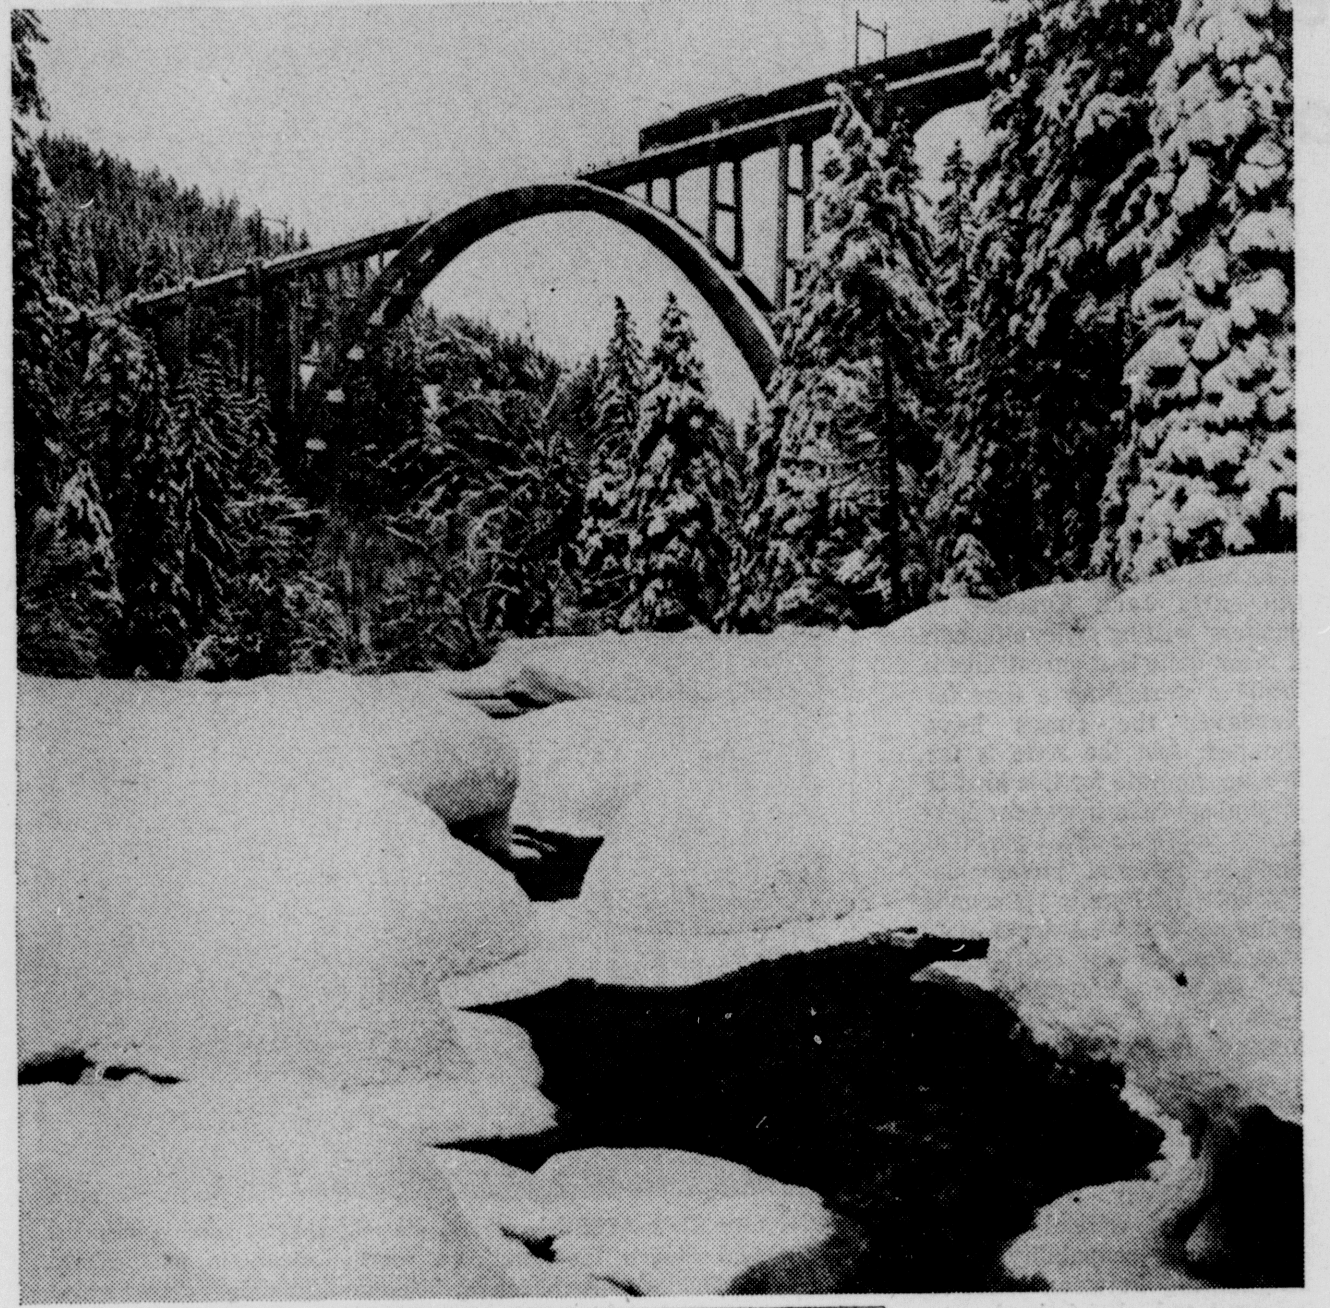
Doris Miles Disney has built up a large following, mostly female, with her well-crafted novels in which she places a heroine in trouble and then lets her character fight and flounder her way out of her distress, usually with the help of a strong male.

"The Chandler Policy" follows that loose formula. Hilda Nielsen, middle-aged widow, befriends a strange man, who later turns up wounded, and then disappears.

Coming to the aid of Hilda, and into the life of the missing or dead man's wife or widow, is Jeff DiMarco, the insurance claims investigator who is a familiar figure to Disney readers. It is up to DiMarco to unravel the puzzle.

Unfortunately this usually reliable author is not at her best with this novel and it is likely to disappoint many of her fans.

Mountain Climbing The Easy Way



A TYPICAL railroad bridge seen throughout Switzerland is proof that the Swiss have conquered extremely difficult terrain to provide transportation. As a result passengers have memorable views of some of the most scenic sections of the country.

Switzerland is said to be situated in the heart of Europe. While this may be true figuratively speaking, geographically the country will be found to occupy a position slightly lower down, in the stomach region, as it were, of the continent.

Be that as it may, about one fact there is general agreement: Switzerland is a country criss-crossed by mountain chains whose sole purpose seems to be to act as a barrier to traffic.

THIS LATTER, however, does not care in the least: it simply passes underneath or climbs over the wall. Indeed, railway tunnels as well as pass roads have slyly overcome the barriers formed by the mountains.

The tunnels take care of the people who are in a hurry, the mountain passes allure those in quest of unusual sights. Their wish is easily fulfilled: the train takes them close to the mountains, where the yellow postal coach takes charge, whisks them over one or several passes and delivers them to the railway again.

Most often the postal routes in the Alps serve as feeder lines between railways. In some instances they link side valleys dear to the tourist's heart, such as the Val d'Herens, the Val d'Anniviers and the Saas Valley in the canton of Valais, or the Val Bregaglia and the Val Mustair in the Grisons, to a railway station.

An excursion over a mountain pass on board a postal motor coach is one of the most rewarding experiences Switzerland has to offer to tourists. An astonishing variety of scenery unfolds as we travel along; first the plains, then the gradual ascent towards the mountains, the alpine pastures, sparkling mountain brooks and lakes, sheer rocks, deep-cut gorges spanned by bold bridges, snow and ice, and green meadows again as we descend on the other side.

HERE AND there a colorful village or hamlet dots the landscape, or a hut lost in the wilderness, and higher up the lofty and remote grandeur of the Alps pervades the scene.

But there is no need to be scared. You can fully rely on the postal coach, and above all on its driver, who knows his vehicle and his track through and through and is not afraid of his responsibility.

Mountain climbing the hard way is not everybody's business. But thanks to Switzerland's modern transport facilities all better-known passes and many lofty peaks are made accessible to old and young alike. Offering people an opportunity to discover a new world is a most gratifying task indeed. The Swiss Postal Coach Service does everything it can to make the tourist's travelling experience as pleasurable as possible.

Boston Preserves Links To History

By MURRAY J. BROWN

(BOSTON) — Despite what you may have heard, Boston is more than the home of the bean and the cod where the Lowells speak only to the Cabots and the Cabots talk only to God.

It's an interesting city which can offer visitors a wide variety of attractions and activities.

I found that out again during a recent visit to Boston which, while growing into a modern metropolis, has jealously preserved its links to its proud past.

YOU DON'T have to be a history buff to enjoy walking along the meandering 1½-mile Freedom Trail through the downtown section of the city.

The trail starts at Boston Common, the country's oldest public park, where witches and criminals are hanged and "scolds and raillers" ducked into Frog Pond in olden days. In the southwest corner is the Central Burying Ground, the last resting place of British redcoats killed during the Revolution and of Gilbert Stuart, the famed portraitist of George Washington and his contemporaries.

On the hill overlooking the Common stands the gold-domed "New" State House, dating back to 1795, designed by Charles Bulfinch of Boston, who was one of the finest architects of his time.

ACROSS the street from the Common is the Park Street Church, where abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison spoke out so strongly against slavery, and the Granary Burying Ground. The headstones read like history — Samuel Adams, John Hancock, Paul Revere, victims of the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770, Benjamin Franklin's parents, Mary Goose, known to the world as "Mother Goose."

Then there is the King's Chapel, with its square tower, built in 1754 — the first Episcopal church in Boston and, after the War of the Revolution, the first Unitarian church in the new United States. Gunpowder was stored in its cellars during the War of 1812.

A marker on School St. denotes the site of the country's first public school, whose pupils included young Ben Franklin, Cotton Mather and Ralph Waldo Emerson. Nearby is the Old South Meeting House, which dates back to 1728, where angry colonists hatched the Boston Tea Party to protest "taxation without representation."

Other highlights on the trail include the Old State House with a ring of stones outside circling the site of the Boston Massacre; Faneuil Hall, known as "The Cradle of Liberty"

Hints For First Time Travelers

If you are planning a holiday abroad for the first time, your travel agent can be a valuable source of information. Their counseling usually includes some of the more basic information that can head off frustrations and add to one's enjoyment of a European vacation.

Prepared by TWA travel advisors, here are some helpful hints aimed especially at first-time travelers and those whose budgets allow no margin for unnecessary spending.

AT SOME airports you are likely to observe a fleet of vehicles whose owners are ready to relieve you of your luggage and whisk you to your hotel. Don't succumb unless you are prepared to pay double the price of a metered cab for the same journey. Better yet, board the regular airport coach; average charge in most cities, one to two dollars.

On arrival, convert five to ten dollars into local currency for ground transport, tipping and other miscellaneous needs.

Establish your hotel rate on arrival and ask if the tariff includes taxes, service and continental breakfast. Don't be timid about asking to see the accommodations and satisfying yourself that the rate is the one quoted to you by your travel agent, or whoever arranged your booking.

RELY ON the hotel concierge if want directions anywhere, if you want to know when the museums are open or if you are in the market for theatre tickets. An obliging concierge can be indispensible in sorting out your problems and acting on your requests.

Better than a wake-up call (that the switchboard operator may simply forget) is your own travel alarm clock, especially if you have a flight to catch or a train to board in the early morning.

Don't convert large sums of money beyond your estimated requirements, otherwise you may find yourself with a surplus and no way of getting back dollars.

CONDUCT ALL your financial transactions at banks or other authorized money-changing centers. Know the current rate of exchange and watch for any discrepancies.

Don't feel obligated to tip the bellboy who picks up your suit for pressing and another who delivers it a few hours later. It's rarely the same individual — the rotation system is designed to provide tips for both pickup and delivery service.

Ask the hotel for your statement a few hours before checkout time, or settle your account the night before if you are planning a morning getaway. This will give you a chance to rectify any errors and allow you to convert dollars to the amount of your bill, unless you are using a credit card for payment.

DON'T BE surprised if the hotel staff forms a small queue to bid you a fond farewell. But, if service is included (and generally it is), you don't have to go on a tipping spree to satisfy all the smiling figures that suddenly appear. However, if the maid did a quick repair on your wife's dress, or if you had other extra services, you will want to dole out a proper gratuity. And, don't overlook the concierge if he responded to your many requests.

Avoid touts on the streets trying to steer you to second-class shops, or offering to exchange dollars at high rates of return.

GENEOLOGY

Old records yield such meager facts
To make ancestors live again.
Just names and dates cannot conjure
The love they felt, the joy, the pain.

Who cares the nature of these men,
That bore the name today I bear?
Why delve so deep into the past
To find the common bond we share?

Though now they sleep 'neath grasses green;
In country graveyards neatly filed.
Their hopes and dreams have now become
The heritage I give my child.

SAN RAFAEL HELEN COTTON WATSON

APOLLO, an All-America award winning rose is a soft yellow hybrid tea rose on a strong, sturdy bush, with classic blooms of delicate sunrise yellow suffused with shadings of red, often five to six inches across.

PORTRAIT, another All-America award winner, is a pink hybrid tea rose which has fragrant two-tone pink flowers and more than ordinary resistance to disease. The urn-shaped buds open to a combination of rich pink outer petals and a creamy, shrimp pink center.

Poppies Easy To Grow

No flower pops up much faster than the California poppy. Broadcast the seeds where you want the flowers and, almost before you know it, there they are.

This flower is the perfect answer to what to grow in that hot, sunny spot where the soil is clear sand.

YOU don't even have to plant seeds each year because California poppies seed themselves.

And they're so striking in their brilliant colors that the place you selected to plant them will be one of the beauty spots in your garden.

There are single, semi-double and double-flowered California poppies. Those with the additional petals are, perhaps, a bit more effective, especially at a distance.

THE traditional colors are yellow and orange but nowadays to those must be added pink, copper, scarlet, rose, amber and white.

Aurantica is the original California poppy. A good mixture with single flowers is named Sunset, Mission Bells strain produces both semi-double and double blooms and for largest, blinding orange flowers, choose the variety Honolulu.

All through the summer and into fall California poppies will open in your garden. Few flowers are so easily grown.

Growing Herbs Is Practical

Freshness is written all over home-grown Herbs. Anyone who has crushed some Thyme and savored its fragrance, or that of fresh-picked Parsley, knows there is no comparison between these and their store-bought counterparts.

The fragrance of Herbs that come right out of the garden into the cooking pot adds to the fun of growing them.

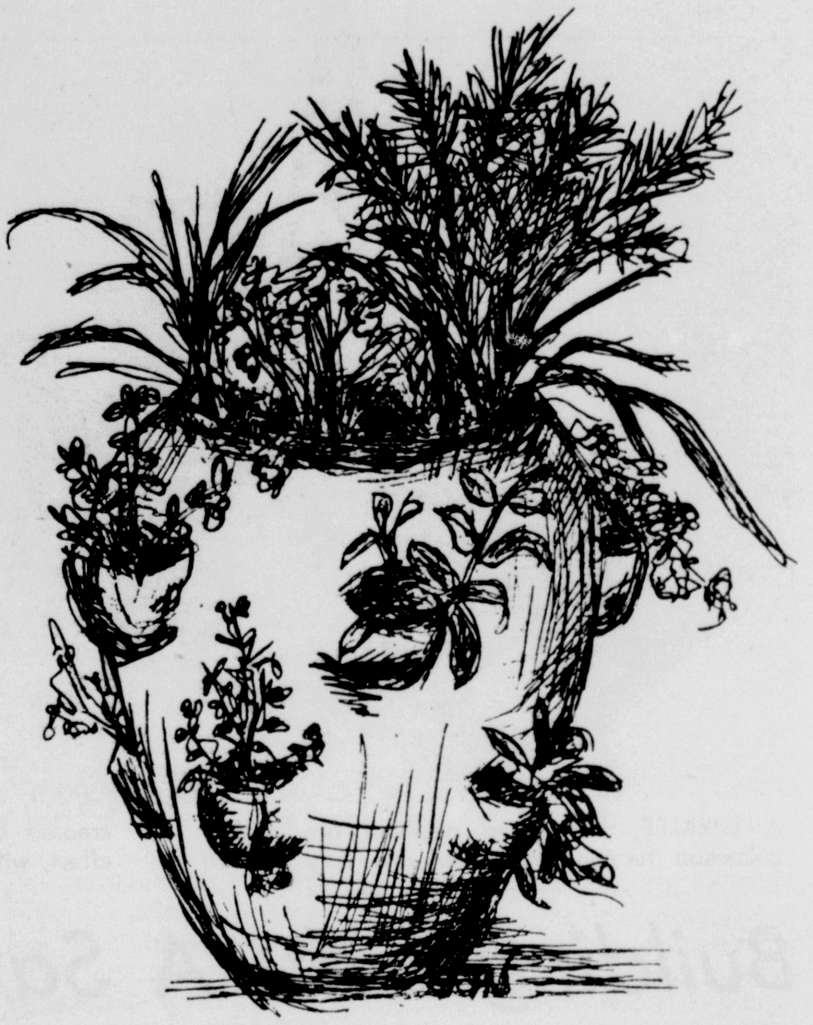
If you like to cook, or appreciate good food, a Herb garden of your own is a practical endeavor. You can be as elaborate as you wish, but actually the space required to grow Herbs is minimal.

POTS WILL do the job for you, as will a planter box or a small corner of a flower bed. Most Herbs are as nice to look at as they are to eat, so growing them near the outdoor living area—or with easy access to the kitchen—is something to consider.

Apartment dwellers and residents in mobile homes can grow and display Herbs in pots or in containers mounted against a wall or fence. They are attractive grown in strawberry jars or barrels. The Herbs are close by for cooking purposes—and are refreshing decorations.

IN THE garden, don't overlook Herbs for interesting accents. Parsley, for instance, is a lovely border for a bed of flowering annuals. As a border unto itself or as a circle at the base of a tree, Parsley looks as fresh as it tastes.

Mint is a veteran of plantings near a water faucet where its breath can be savored whenever the gardener turns on the hose. Nurserymen suggest confining its roots in a container, however, since it is rapid to spread. Garnish salads and cool drinks with Mint and watch the pleasing smiles come forth on the faces of your guests.



HERBS CAN be grown and displayed handsomely in pots, planter boxes, or in containers mounted against a wall or fence.

NURSERIES have a wide selection of Herbs for planting now. Selections include the standbys of the kitchen: Thyme, Marjoram, Rosemary, Sage, Savory and Sweet Basil, plus others such as Oregano and a myriad of mint choices. The plants are well-established in nursery containers and are easily transplanted into other containers, or into the garden, where you can start enjoying immediately the luxury of fresh herbs in your cooking.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Many cool season vegetables are available as seedling transplants in nurseries. Onion seeds may be sown, or sets planted now for next spring and summer's crops.

✓ You can green-up the fall lawn and give it new life with a feeding this month. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper lawn food for the type turf you have.

✓ The planting season is in full swing for spring-blooming bulbs. Hurry to get the varieties and colors you wish to add cheer to your mid-winter and spring garden. Nurseries have large selections to choose from right now.

✓ Improve drainage in poorly-drained beds by raising the soil level. This is simply done by "boxing" the bed with layers of bricks or one-by-six or one-by-eight headerboards.

✓ Treat yourself and your garden to some blooming Chrysanthemums. The autumnal hues add warmth to the indoor decor and, in the garden, are welcome sights for all who view them.

Perfect Basic Element

The picture of a perfect lawn to us is one that contains two basic elements: grass and trees.

Not that you can't have a fine lawn with grass alone, but the addition of one or more trees often breaks up the rectangular effect and enhances the setting.

CHOOSING THE right tree for your lawn is as important as choosing the right kind of lawn seed. Modern landscape practice dictates the planting of small to medium size trees that will not overpower the landscape.

A favorite for this reason is the European White Birch. This white-barked deciduous tree is most effectively planted in groups of three at four to six feet apart. Growth is slender and graceful, the pendulous branches having a light, airy look about them.

You can search a long way before finding a better lawn tree than the Sweet Gum.

THIS IS A real journeyman in California gardens, a specimen tree that takes to the foreground or background with equal success. It is one of the few that really colors up in mild winter sections before dropping its leaves. Growth is tall, moderate. Leaves are maple-like and attractive spring through fall.

Bougainvillea In New Colors

Bougainvillea comes in many newer colors which are earning wide appeal.

Whatever the color — the familiar red magenta pink or orange — there's no mistaking that the plant is Bougainvillea. All the colors are bright and the shrubs bloom profusely.

Heavy watering of these sun-loving vines produces lush growth but less vivid flower color. You can remedy this by watering less during the long blooming season.

A GIRAFFE, horse and elephant are a fine collection for any youngster and they can be created by a handyman with a little time and effort, with some fun in the doing.

Building Gifts A Saver

By STEVE ELLINGSON

It's nice once a year to empty out your pockets for somebody special . . . but if you have six children, a dozen cousins and nine friendly neighbors, you'd have to apply for Federal aid to make every Christmas gifts as priceless as you'd like.

So what to do? Get out your hammer and saw, of course. In a few evenings and a weekend or two, you yourself can build gifts for everybody on your list. It's surprising how easy and how fast you can do it, once you get started.

THREE IDEAL homemade gifts are pictured here with young Eric Gordon. A few scraps of wood and the full-size patterns are all you need to complete any one or all of them.

The giraffe makes a dandy place to hang up small jackets, hats and things of that kind. It has a whisk broom tail — just the thing for keeping clothes brushed. And, of course, every little tyke needs a rocking horse, or better yet, a rocking elephant.

To build any one of the little animals pictured here, you need only to trace the full-size patterns on wood, then saw out the parts and put them together.

Painting is easy, all that's necessary is to trace the features such as the eyes, nose, bridle, or giraffe spots on the wood, then paint over the tracings.

ANY NOVICE can do it, and I might add, with great success. The patterns list the required materials and give step-by-step directions along with helpful illustrations.

To build all three of the little animals pictured just sent $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent Journal Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2382, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409, and ask for Patterns 56113.

Cement Tiles To Ceiling

One of the quickest and most economical ways to repair a plasterboard ceiling is not to. Instead of laborious patching operations it can be simpler to install a new tile ceiling.

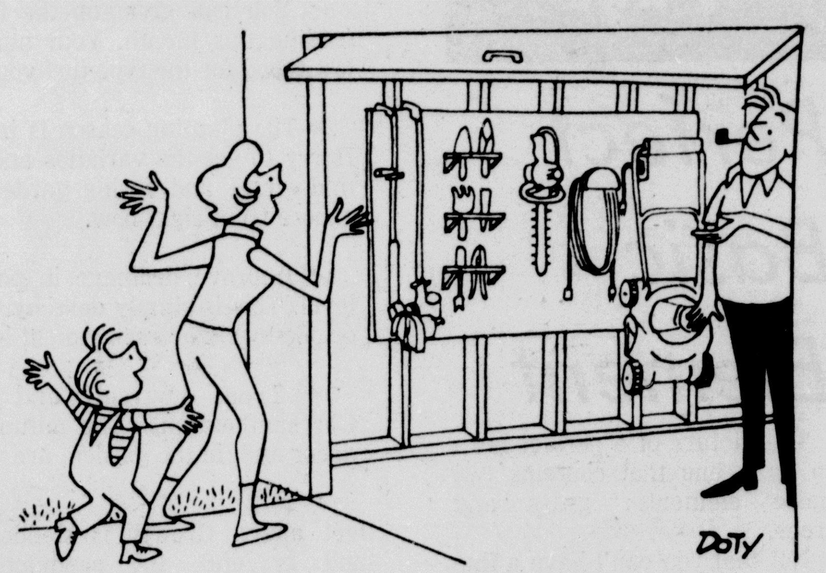
In a situation like this, if the old ceiling is still relatively smooth though somewhat unsightly, new tiles can be cemented directly to the plasterboard. This type of installation is fast and easy.

Plasterboard, sometimes called dry wall or sheet rock, can develop several unfortunate maladies as a ceiling material. Seams can separate and become visible, and nail heads pop into view. Leaks may cause dark water spots to appear.

REPAIR STEPS might include leveling, countersinking nails, mixing and applying plaster, taping seams, and painting.

On the other hand, tiling over a plasterboard ceiling is a task that any reasonably handy man or woman, for that matter, can do with a minimum of tools and supplies.

What's more, doing the job yourself saves on labor costs — no small consideration in today's economy.



The Armstrong Cork Company estimates that the ceiling of a 12 by 15 foot room can be covered with its Chandelier acoustical tiles for as little as $65, including adhesive.

To install, daub Armstrong ceiling cement on the four corners and center of a tile. Press the tile into position on the ceiling.

The tiles have tongue-and-groove joints to facilitate assembly.

To hold a tile in place while the cement "sets up," put two staples in each exposed flange. Staple guns can be purchased or rented inexpensively (or sometimes borrowed) from the building supply store where the tiles are bought.

The finished ceiling is not only pleasing to look at but adds comfort to a room from the standpoint of sound conditioning.

Screens, Plants Save Side Yard

In many neighborhoods, houses are built only five feet away from one side property line.

The plan allows generous space for garden or terrace on the opposite side of the house and at the rear, but what to do with that five-foot-wide strip puzzles many homeowners.

Even though space is restricted, the side yard can become a charming garden with the help of a screen, a path and a few well chosen plantings.

THE PATH will be needed for access around the house, the screen as a boundary marker and backdrop, and the plantings for effect.

A number of different materials could be used for the path — crushed rock, brick, flagstone. Or it could be made of rectangular building blocks, sunken so their top surface projects no more than a half inch above ground.

Spacing between the blocks should be close, for nothing is more disconcerting than having to hopscotch over widely separated stepping stones. Laying them in a neat, straight line is best, too, perhaps broken at the mid-point by a cluster of four blocks to make a short of landing.

THE PROPERTY line screen will be all-important in determining appearance of the side yard. If there are no urgent privacy requirements, it should be low and in a pattern that renders clean, crisp lines with strong shadow patterns.

An excellent effect is produced by four-foot-tall slat screening built of cedar two-by-twos . When two-by-twos alternate with spacings of equal width, the pattern is particularly trim, yet open and almost delicate. Spacer blocks, cut from two-by-twos and nailed to top and bottom rails, will do the job.

A nice bit of detail can be added with lengths of one-by-one-inch cedar used as a molding over the joint between slats and rails. If a molding piece is added, cut spacer blocks long enough to be seen.

Frequently, side yard screening is abruptly terminated by a gate set at the far corner of the house. The result is harsh, and the narrow side yard becomes tunnel-like.

INSTEAD OF the gate, two additional sections of the screen can be built, set at right angles to each other. One section would be an eight-foot-long continuation of the side panel screening, but stepped up to a six-foot height.

The other panel, matching in height and length, would turn the corner past the house.

The right-angled panels will give complete privacy to the back yard, just as a gate does.

In planting the side garden, restraint is the most important ingredient. A minimum number of plant materials here make the best showing if care is taken to contrast foliage texture and color, as well as heights and masses. A flowering fruit tree, of dwarf variety, can make an exciting accent espaliered against the screen, and thick, fluffy groundcovers like English ivy and periwinkle can be used if planted in low containers to restrict growth.

IN THE corner, where the screen turns past the house, use one bold piece, and plant a shade tree behind the screen, just near enough to it so that some branches will overhang.

Consult your nurseryman in selecting a tree that will grow to the approximate height you desire, and not get out of hand. And one that does not create too great a problem when it drops its leaves.

There are a number that meet these requirements and which thrive in Marin.

Papering The Piano

A reader tells us he rejuvenated an old piano by covering it with wallpaper which blended with the paper on the wall of the room in which the piano was located. He said the wallpaper didn't hold too well until he discovered that it was necessary to roughen the surface of the piano by sanding it lightly.

Carport Adds Bonus Areas

More than just car shelter, a carport should be designed also to provide storage and activity areas and enhance the looks of house and yard.

The new structure should relate to the house in style and color, although the materials may differ. For instance a well-planned carport of western wood will complement a brick house.

If the garage has been converted into new living space, or if the carport is to shelter a second car, it can be placed in front of the garage. This utilizes the existing driveway.

THE CARPORT can be placed directly in front of the house, but careful styling, landscaping and construction are vital to overall appearance.

If the carport is to be part of a sundeck, patio, pool or other activity area, keep in mind the direction of the sun's rays, prevailing winds and view angles or privacy.

A carport provides a wealth of storage possibilities, built-in along one or several walls, above the rafters, or as covered parking for bicycles and outdoor equipment.

Electric Plug To Halt Hazard

Over eight decades have passed since Thomas Edison introduced the phenomenon of his electric light to an amazed world.

In many ways electricity remains a mystery to man, yet it is an essential part of our contemporary society. However, at the flick of a switch electricity can become a killer. Perhaps the figure of approximately 1000 lives per year being taken by electric shock is not so staggering, considering that over 200 million people live in this country.

Nevertheless, it is still a wanton and needless waste of human life.

MANY means are being employed to reduce shock fatalities and one such method is the 3-wire plug. The third wire of this plug acts as what is called a ground conductor and serves as one of the protective means for the device.

Such protection is accomplished through the ability of the wire to force the fuse or circuit breakers to "blow," thereby eliminating any shock hazard. Though originally found primarily on power tools, 3-wire plugs are now used on many appliances.

WHEN a situation arises regarding "blowing" fuses or circuit breakers, it should be emphasized that this happens for your protection. There is nothing wrong with the fuse.

The fault lies elsewhere; either with the appliance which forces this reaction or because the circuit has been overloaded.

In either case, the fuse is just doing its job of protecting you and warning that something is wrong. Should an instance occur wherein there is a fault in an appliance but a fuse doesn't "blow", the appliance becomes an extreme hazard as it remains "live".

THEREFORE, if one were to contact the "live" metal enclosure of that appliance and something which is grounded (radiator, refrigerator, water pipe, etc.), shock and possible electrocution could result.

Perhaps your home is not equipped with grounding type receptacles. If this is the case, an adapter is available to accommodate the 3-wire plug. But always make sure the green grounding lead of the adapter is connected to the faceplate of the receptacle.

Another point to be remembered is never to remove the ground pin from a 3-wire plug. This would allow the plug to be used in a 2-hole receptacle, but the protective capability is rendered useless.

In offering the above information, Underwriters' Laboratories sincerely hopes you gain a better understanding of some of the many ways electricity can become your master.

Garage To Sauna

One of the many nice things about a sauna is that it can be added almost any place in the house — at the end of a hallway, in a closet or even in the garage.

Along with remodeling their house one couple revamped a detached garage into a garden house, with a family-size sauna, swimming pool bathhouse, and a study.

This is a pleasant and practical combination. The family and their guests have found a swim after the sauna can be relaxing as well as cooling. And the sauna is just a few steps from the study, handy for unwinding after catching up with office work or balancing the family budget.

THE SAUNA essentially is a hot-air bath of high heat and low humidity that relaxes and cleanses the bather by inducing perspiration.

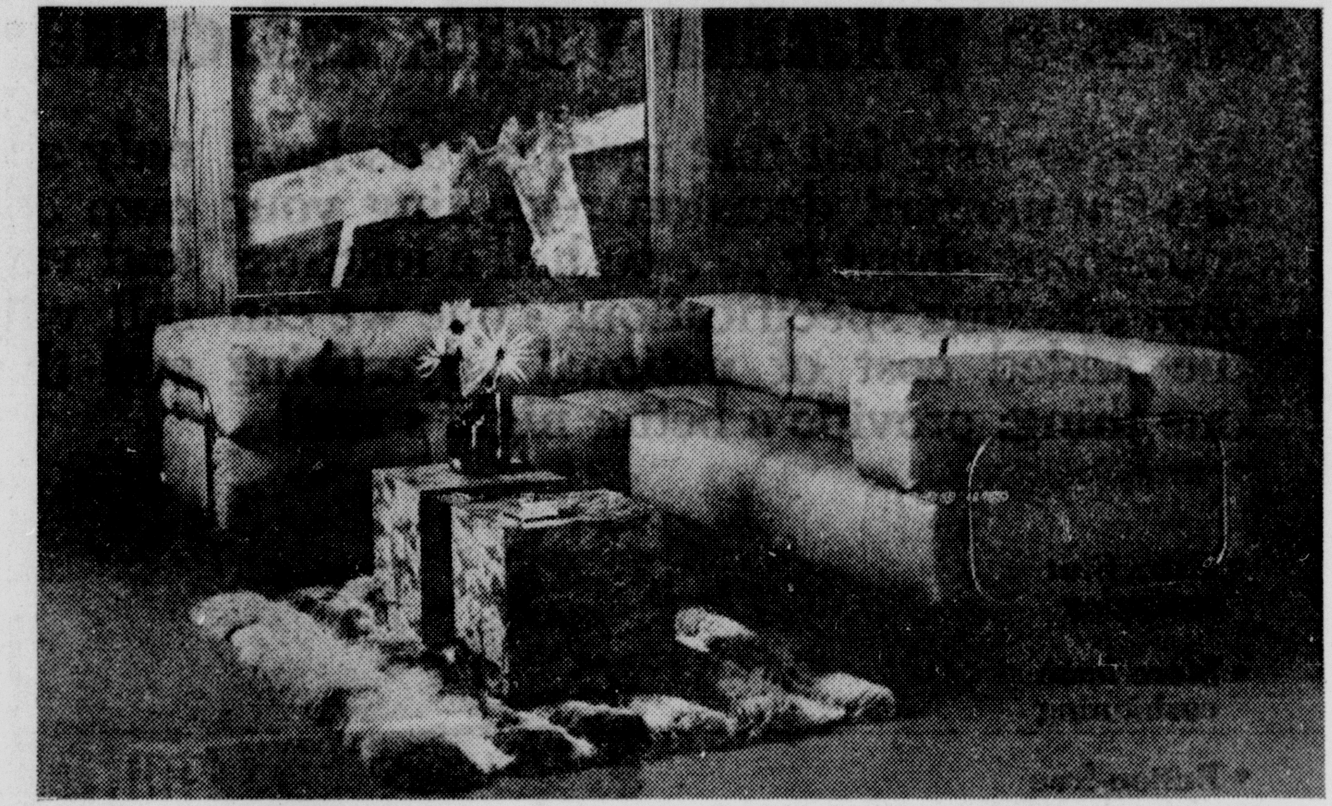
City dwellers and rural residents alike throughout the country have discovered life can be beautiful at 185 degrees Fahrenheit in a sauna, even though they may wilt outside when the mercury's in the 90s. The secret is the relative humidity, never over 20 percent, sometimes as low as six to eight percent in the sauna room.

The reason a sauna can be added so easily in almost any location is that no plumbing is required. Just room enough for at least one person and a heater to dash water onto occasionally.

TO BUILD a sauna you need lumber — western red cedar and Idaho white pine are popular with professional builders — the heater and the controls.

In the garden house sauna, the floors are one by four inch cedar laid flat, the door and walls are lined with cedar boards, and the benches are of two by four inch cedar laid flat.

Many designers prefer western cedar as it does not stain as readily as some other species, does not shrink, retains its attractive appearance and aroma and is cooler to sit on as it doesn't absorb as much heat.



A COMPACT sleeping area can fill the bill when unexpected visitors arrive or when spare rooms are not available, and with some imagination serve a double use in the waking hours.

A Foamy Convertible Bed

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Looking for a way to get more sleep space in a well-packed interior? You may have to do some creative shopping, but there are some fresh kinds of convertible sleeping ideas hitting the consumer level.

Thanks to contemporary Italian designers, one school of thought evolved. They began playing with upholstered blocks of foam. So many blocks made a seating area; so many smaller blocks provided backrests, another block provides a resting place for the arms of the sitter.

THEY STARTED clipping these foam forms together with giant steel clips — like big paper clips — and occasionally they would add legs as support, but the basic concept was for all the components to settle right on the floor in a no-nonsense approach to interiors.

It didn't take long for American designers to pick up the idea and take it another yard or two. Now, several manufacturers have added the sleep-ability to the concept.

One example is Craft Originals. They've developed an 86-inch sofa with a seat-sleep surface 37½ inches wide. The chunky bolsters and armrests cut that width down to a comfortable sitting depth during the day. By pairing the sofa with a 74-inch love seat, as shown, Craft makes it possible for the homeowner or apartment dweller to create a compact L-shape grouping spacious enough for two adults to stretch full length.

ANOTHER SIMILAR concept is being offered by Simmons, the people who created the original hideaway sofa. They skip all the hidden mechanisms for their newer sleep unit and follow the removable bolster idea. Again the big clip of steel works to hold bolsters in position. Simmons also has a daybed product that has a slight pitch for seating, an extra comfort factor.

When you make up this bolstered sofa bed at night, why not skip the usual tuck-in sheets. Try a bedroll approach. I've mentioned this before and have had friends live successfully with bedrolls at home.

The day you change linens, merely place the fresh sheets and blankets on the unbolstered surface; folding back hems and perhaps adding an extra top sheet to cover the blanket. The next morning simply fold the linens in half, vertically, and start rolling from top to bottom. Pillows and bedroll can be tucked into a cupboard until the next evening. There's a knack to it — but once mastered, it's a cinch and easy on the housekeeper.

I think children would be more easily conned into housework if such systems were evolved for everyday bedmaking. I, for one, have stopped using heavy bedspreads atop my bed linens. Colored sheets are decorative enough for me and they save energy morning and evening.
